GERMAN TROOPS IN REVOLT

U. S. WILL WIN WAR AND MORE, E. H. GARY SAYS

Steel Chief Sees the Silver Lining in All Clouds.

"Right will prevail over might and reason will overcome madness. We shall be victors in the mortal combat that rages and afterward our country will make longer and faster strides in the struggle to maintain a deserved and satisfactory position in the ranks of nations."

This was the prophecy made last night by Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation, in an address delivered before the Commercial Club of Chicago at a dinner at the Blackstone hotel.

Optimist—Sure of Victory.

Setting forth in plain language the might of the German empire, the as yet unimpaired powers and advantageous position of our foe, Mr. Gary at the same time viewed the outlook as an optimist, certain of victory for the United States and its allies.

The address was a review of the problems of the nation during the war and after the war—" business during the war and after."

"There is, as always," he said, "a silver lining to the clouds which now obscure our vision. We need not despair. We have reason to be hopeful. There is sunlight beyond."

Praises Business Men.

"The business men of the United States," said Mr. Gary, "in the management of their affairs have reached a high level of efficiency and moral excellence. They are at present of incalculable assistance to the government and they may be depended upon to do their part in restoring the world's equilibrium after peace shall be proclaimed.

"We are proud of our country. Let us continue to give our country reason to be proud of us."

He deprecated, however, any tendency to underestimate the power of our foe. His denunciation of Germany and its war methods at times was dramatic.

Denounces Germany.

His denunciation of Germany and its war methods at times was dramatic.

"A war policy which recognizes no God," he said, "except by pretense; no law, no justice, no mercy—nothing but the right which brute force commands—has a decided advantage physically over those whose principles are humane, honorable, Christian.

"These antitheses are represented by the opposing military forces of the pending struggle. Up to date the armies of the enemy have not only been victorious but they believe themselves to be invincible, and this adds to their strength and efficiency."

This view of the enemy's power did not lessen the firmness of the speaker's confidence in his own nation.

"Appalled, Not Stunned."

"We are appalled, though we are not stunned, by these conditions," he continued. "Our determination is unshaken. Our teeth are set. We have been forced into the war and we are fighting in self-defense.

"So far as we are concerned it is a combat between Prussianism and Americanism, between might and right. Considered by themselves, the existing conditions are not pleasant. They are dangerous, though not desperate. They compel one to fear Americans are confronted by a long and ruinous war, destructive of life and limb, and mental, moral, and physical health, devastation of property, and diminution of health."

Here there was the closest approach to gloom, if it might be called that. And there was a little more of it, aroused by the apathy of the nation in the crisis.

Must Face Conditions.

"This picture of war conditions as presented," he said in this vein, "is not pleasant to look upon, but it is not exaggerated, and it stares us in the face. We have been slow and stupid, or at least indifferent. We have not realized and do not yet realize the full extent of the dangers which threaten us, and in this respect there is little difference between the citizens of the

SPAIN HALTS REVOLUTION OF ARMY 'NON-COMS'

MADRID, Jan. 5.—Premier Alhucemas announced today that a revolutionary movement unearthed by the government is now under control. Telephone and telegraph communications were suspended but were reëstablished late today, and other precautions taken. The judicial authorities are investigatin the plot, many details of which are already known.

1,500 Forced from Army.

Minister of War Cierva issued an official explanation of the revolt, in which he said that the army classes composed of noncommissioned officers, corporals, and sergeants proposed to unite into a junta against the desires of their chiefs and that of the minister of war. All troops were ordered to remain in barracks and the principals were forced to resign from the army.

The number of noncommissioned officers removed from the army, because of their activities in forming "juntas of defense," has reached 1,500, it was announced tonight.

People Support King.

The news of the revolutionary movement has caused a great sensation and public opinion appears to be with the king and the government.

The republican press strongly denies that the movement was revolutionary. El Imparcial declares that the military element should abstain from national politics and that the public peace and the future of Spain are so exacting that public powers should be kept to their natural limits.

Chicago Slacker Caught; "Put Him in Army"—Wife

New York, Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Herman Rocco of 7010 South Lincoln street, Chicago, was arrested by United States Marshal Power of Brooklyn today after several weeks' search on a charge of evading the draft. A wire was sent to his wife, whom he had deserted.

"Put him in the army," was the answer she wired back.

THE WAR

Petrograd hears 25,000 German troops on the Russian front have revolted. GALLI-CURCI AND CAMPANINI ARGUE AS TO N. Y. SEASON

Amelita Galli-Curci, for two seasons now the singing idol of Chicago operagoers, says she is not going to sing in the New York engagement of four weeks which Mr. Campanini plans as soon as he finishes in the Auditorium, a fortnight hence. He says that she is under contract to sing there, and that he expects her to do so.

"I am tired, and wish a rest," said Mme. Galli-Curci last night. "I have been singing in opera on tour and in Chicago for twelve weeks, learning new rôles, and appearing frequently. I explained to Mr. Campanini that, with my obligations to sing in fifty recitals and concerts, I did not believe that I was able to go through six weeks of opera in New York and Boston. I will, of course, finish the Chicago season.

Says He Released Her.

"Mr. Campanini said he would release me, but that, for formality, I should write a letter to him, explaining why I would not sing. I have done so. Also, I have written individually of these facts to each member of the board of guarantors of the Chicago Opera. Mr. Campanini's promise to release me was made orally."

Mr. Campanini made this statement when told of what Galli-Curci has said:

"The management of the Chicago Opera is going ahead with its plans for New York and Boston. The répertoire for both cities is being made up in the expectation and belief that Mme. Galli-Curci will take part.

Says He Hasn't Released Her.

"I certainly did not release her from the New York and Boston engagements, although I understand she has written to each guarantor to say that I did. The New York public anxiously awaits her; and I cannot believe that she will desert our other great artists at this time. I am confident we shall be successful there.

"Personally, I am sure that Mme. Galli-Curci will respect her contract."

Galli-Curci's contract with the Chicago Opera is for three seasons after the present shall have expired and is for opera only. Her concerts are under other management.

REPORT 25,000 IN RUSS LINE DEFY OFFICERS

BULLETIN.
(By the Associated Press.)

LONDON, Jan. 5.—A dispatch received here from the Russian wireless service says that 25,000 German soldiers in the region east of Kovno have revolted. German deserters stated that in consequence of the government drafting all soldiers below the age of 35 for dispatch to the western front, the aforementioned number of men rebelled and marched out of the battle line.

They then entrenched themselves with rifles and machine guns against the other German units. The German military authorities have been powerless against the revolters and are trying to cut off their food supplies.

The German deserters declared that one of the motives for the revolt was that the sending of troops to the western front was a contravention of the Russo-German armistice agreement.

FRENCH RECOGNIZE FINLAND.

PARIS, Jan. 5.—"The French government has recognized in right as in fact the independence of the republic of Finland," the Temps says today.

Trotzky Heads Russia Envoys.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Leon Trotzky, Bolshevik foreign minister, is on his way today to Brest-Litovsk to try to force the removal of the Russian-Teuton peace negotiations to Stockholm or some neutral city.

When the Teuton delegates reached the German army headquarters, prepared to resume negotiations, they found that none of the Russian envoys had returned.

A dispatch from Berlin forwarded by Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent later in the day, gave an explanation of this situation.

Explains to Reichstag.

Baron von dem Busche-Haddenhausen, the German undersecretary for foreign affairs, informed the reichstag main committee that he had received this telegram from Petrograd:

"The transfer of negotiations to neutral territory has been suggested only on account of the stage which the negotiations have reached. In view of the arrival of the German delegation at Brest-Litovsk, the Russian delegation, accompanied by M. Trotzky, is leaving Saturday for Brest-Litovsk. They are convinced that an understanding in regard to the transfer of the negotiations to neutral ground will give rise to no difficulty."

German Parties Split.

A Copenhagen Dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company says the crisis between the central powers and Russia because of the Bolsheviki's demand that peace negotiations be discussed in a neutral country, is having a powerful effect in German politics and is likely to lead to a sharp conflict between the Center and the Socialist parties.

The Conservatives at present are making determined efforts to cause a rupture between Philipp Scheidemann, president of the Social Democratic party, and Mathias Erzberger, Clerical Centrist. Newspapers such as the National Zeitung and the Deutsche Zeitung, claim that advances have taken place between the National Liberal and the Center parties, and that they are likely to lead to new developments in the German policy.

The Deutsche Zeitung says: "It is to be hoped that the change in the political situation caused by the Brest-Litovsk episode will lead to the rescinding of the unfortunate peace resolution of July 19, which, in parliamentary circles, long has been regarded as inadequate and dangerous."

Halt German Intrigue.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 5.—Formal orders against any members of the Russian constituent assembly communicating with Austro-German delegations were issued today. It was said several

PREMIER TELLS BRITAIN'S AIMS; KAISER MUST YIELD CONQUESTS

FRANCE AND ITALY TO GET LOST PEOPLES

Poles to Be United; Russia Is Left to Its Fate.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The British prime minister, David Lloyd George, today set forth Great Britain's war aims and the peace terms it would discuss more specifically and at greater length than he has ever done before. He delivered the address before a meeting of the delegates of the trades unions.

The premier said the government stood responsible for the words he used; that he was speaking, "not merely the mind of the government, but the mind of the nation and the empire."

Fight to Insure Peace.

The premier said the empire was fighting to make war impossible in the future. War and the danger of war must be made impossible by the replacing of the rule of might by the rule of law, sustained by the family of nations.

"We believe," he said, "that a great attempt must be made to establish a great international organization as a means of settling international disputes.

"War is a relic of barbarism, and as law has succeeded violence in the settlement of individuals' disputes, so it is destined to settle national controversies."

Three Conditions Vital.

Mr. Lloyd George asserted the safety of the world depends on three conditions. These he announced as follows:

"First, the sanctity of treaties must be re-established.

"Secondly, territorial settlement must be based on the right of self-determination or the consent of the governed.

"Lastly, the creation of an international organization to limit armaments and diminish the probability of war."

"To secure those conditions," the premier added, "the British empire is prepared to make even greater sacrifices."

Mr. Lloyd George told the war and peace aims in fulfillment of a promise to address the delegates of the trades unions, who are meeting to discuss the question of man power with Sir Auckland Geddes, minister of national service.

FULL TEXT OF SPEECH.

Following is the full text of the official report of Premier Lloyd George's speech:

"When the government invites organized labor in this country to assist them to maintain the might of their armies in the field, its representatives are entitled to ask that any misgivings and doubts which any of them may have about the purpose to which this precious strength is to be applied, should be definitely cleared. And what is true of organized labor is equally true of all citizens in this country, without regard to grade or avocation.

"When men by the million are being called upon to suffer and die, and vast populations are being subjected to sufferings and privations of war on a scale unprecedented in the history of the world, they are entitled to know for what cause or causes they are making the sacrifice.

Must State War Aims.

"It is only the clearest, greatest and justest of causes that can justify the continuance, even for one day, of this unspeakable agony of the nation, and we ought to be able to state clearly and definitely not only the principles for which we are fighting, but also their definite and concrete application to the war map of the world.

"We arrived at the most critical hour in this terrible conflict, and before any government takes a fateful decision as to the conditions under which it ought either to terminate or to continue the struggle it ought to be satisfied that the conscience of the nation is behind these conditions, for nothing else can sustain the effort which is necessary to achieve a righteous end to this war.

"I have, therefore, during the last few days taken special pains to ascertain the view and attitude of representative men of all sections of thought and opinion in the country.

"Last week I had the privilege not merely of perusing the declared war aims of the labor party, but also of discussing in detail with labor leaders the meaning and intention of that declaration.

"I have also had opportunity of discussing this same momentous question with Mr. Asquith and Viscount Grey. Had it not been that the nationalist leaders are in Ireland, engaged in endeavoring to solve the tangled problem of Irish self-government, I should have been happy to exchange views with them, but Mr. Redmond, speaking on their behalf, has with his usual lucidity and force, in many of his speeches, made clear what his ideas are as to the subject and purpose of the war. I have also had an opportunity of consulting certain representatives of the great dominions overseas.

Speaks for the Empire.

"I am glad to be able to say, as a result of all these discussions, that, although the government is alone responsible for the actual language I propose using, there is a national agreement as to the character and purpose of our war aims and peace conditions, and in what I say to you today, and through you to the world, I can venture to claim that I am speaking not merely the mind of the government, but of the nation and of the empire as a whole.

"We may begin by clearing away

INSURANCE OF WORLD SAFETY

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The principles which were announced by Premier Lloyd George, which may be taken as the attitude of the British empire on war aims and peace terms, may be summed up as follows:

GERMANY.

The entente is not fighting to disrupt the German nation or to dictate its form of government. The battle against Germany is made in self defense to end the menace of junkerism and militarism. The German people themselves could bring peace at once by the adoption of a democratic government.

AUSTRIA AND THE BALKANS.

Unless genuine self-government is granted to those Austro-Hungarian nationalities who long have desired it, general peace cannot be assured. Justice must be done to the men of Roumanian blood and speech. Serbia and Montenegro must be restored.

BELGIUM.

Belgium must be restored in full and reparation made for all damage.

ALSACE-LORRAINE.

"We mean to stand by the French democracy to the death in the demand for the reconsideration of the wrong done in '71 when Alsace-Lorraine was torn away." All occupied French territory must be restored.

ITALIA IRREDENTA.

"We regard as vital the legitimate claims of the Italians for union with those of their own race and tongue."

POLAND.

"An independent Poland, comprising all of the genuinely Polish elements who desire to participate, is an urgent necessity for the stability of western Europe."

RUSSIA.

The entente would have been glad to fight side by side with the new Russia, but if the present rulers of Russia act independently, Russia must be saved by her own people.

TURKEY.

Britain would not deprive Turkey of its capital or of the lands in Thrace and Asia Minor which are predominately Turkish, but Arabia, Armenia, Mesopotamia, Syria and Palestine are entitled to separate nationalities. The Dardanelles must be neutralized and internationalized.

GERMAN COLONIES.

They will be dealt with by a conference which must take primary regard to their native inhabitants and placed under an administration acceptable to them. All exploiting of these regions by European governments or capitalists must cease.

SEA OUTRAGES.

"There must be reparation for injuries in violation of international law. The peace conference must not forget our seamen and the services they have done."

Lloyd George Opens the Way to Just, Honorable Peace

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Premier Lloyd George, in his address on war aims to the British trades unions, threw open wide the door to an honorable and just peace, in the opinion of Washington officials.

Whether German statesmen and military leaders are prepared for such a peace and are ready to come forward with an open and honest offer to enter upon negotiations, officials declare, however, remains to be disclosed.

All information reaching Washington through official and unofficial channels indicates that Germany wants peace, but that the kaiser and his military and political advisers have not arrived at a point where they can drop boasts of victories won and to be won. Until that point is passed there is little hope here that formal peace negotiations can be entered upon.

Two Objects in Address.

Mr. Lloyd George probably had a double purpose in mind in making his address. Only last week the British trade unions registered their strong insistence upon a declaration of entente aims, and the premier's address today was taken as an answer to that demand. A second object was to impress upon the Russian peace delegates the fact that the war aims of the entente allies are more nearly in consonance with their own altruistic aspirations than anything which the central powers can offer them.

One inference drawn from the premier's address was that he still hopes that the German negotiators at Brest-Litovsk can be balked in their efforts to force a humiliating peace upon Russia, and, in that connection, it was recalled that hints had been given in semi-official organs of a willingness of the entente powers to recognize the Bolshevik government if it acted fairly towards the nations fighting Germany.

It also was regarded as possible that the address might suffice to meet the demand of Leon Trotzky for a statement of the entente war aims within a ten day period just about to elapse without actually committing the powers too definitely.

Alsace a Stumbling Block.

There is one point on which the Lloyd George address may serve to widen the breach between the entente and the central powers, instead of bringing them closer together. This is his declaration that Britain stands by France in regard to Alsace-Lorraine. It may be recalled that the German foreign minister, Dr. von Kuehlmann, recently declared that that question alone prevented the belligerents from meeting on a common peace ground.

In other points Mr. Lloyd George has made notable concessions. Not many months ago Lloyd George vigorously demanded that the Turks be driven out of Europe. Today he states frankly that the allies have no desire to "deprive Turkey of its capital or the rich lands in Asia Minor and Thrace, which are predominantly Turkish."

Puts Blame on Germans.

Kaiser Wilhelm and the German military party and junkers may spurn the offer of Lloyd George to discuss peace on the general lines outlined in his address. If they do, the onus for continuing the slaughter will rest on the Teutons and not on the allies, where Germany has been industriously endeavoring to place it.

Whatever else may be said of Lloyd George's peace terms, and regardless of whether they have the express approval of President Wilson and allied statesmen, officials and diplomats generally believe that they constitute a most effective reply to the peace offer of Count Czernin, the Austro-Hungarian premier.

Senators and representatives who discussed Lloyd George's war aims tonight differed somewhat in construing it. Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, member of the committee on foreign relations, was not altogether satisfied with what the British premier said, holding that he laid too great stress on territorial questions as a condition precedent to peace. He holds that territorial questions should be incidental.

View Held by Flood.

Representative Henry D. Flood of Virginia, chairman of the house committee on foreign affairs, took the view that the terms suggested by Lloyd George lay the foundation for discussions "that ought to result in a satisfactory conclusion."

---

some misunderstanding and stating what we are fighting for.

Not War of Aggression.

"We are not fighting a war of aggression against the German people. Their leaders have persuaded them that they are fighting a war of self-defense against a league of rival nations, bent on the destruction of Germany. That is not so. The destruction or disruption of Germany or the German people never has been a war aim with us from the first day of this war to this day.

"Most reluctantly, and, indeed, quite unprepared for the dreadful ordeal, we were forced to join in this war, in self-defense of the violated public law of Europe, and in vindication of the most solemn treaty obligations, on which the public system of Europe rested and on which Germany had ruthlessly trampled in her invasion of Belgium.

Forced to Join Struggle.

"We had to join in the struggle or stand aside and see Europe go under and brute force triumph over public right and international justice.

"It was only the realization of that dreadful alternative that forced the British people into the war, and from that original attitude they have never swerved. They have never aimed at a break up of the German people or the disintegration of their state or country. Germany has occupied a great position in the world. It is not our wish or intention to question or destroy that position for the future, but rather to turn her aside from hopes and schemes of military domination.

German People Must Decide.

"Nor did we enter this war merely to alter or destroy the imperial constitution of Germany, much as we consider that military and autocratic constitution a dangerous anachronism in the twentieth century. Our point of view is that the adoption of a really democratic constitution by Germany would be the most convincing evidence that her old spirit of military domination has indeed died in this war, and would make it much easier for us to conclude a broad, democratic peace with her. But, after all, that is a question for the German people to decide.

"We are not fighting to destroy Austria-Hungary or to deprive Turkey of its capital or the rich lands of Asia Minor and Thrace, which are predominantly Turkish.

Refers to Wilson Note.

"It is now more than a year since the president of the United States, then neutral, addressed to the belligerents a suggestion that each side should state clearly the aims for which they were fighting.

"We and our allies responded by the note of Jan. 10, 1917. To the president's appeal the central empires made no reply, and in spite of many adjurations, both from their opponents and from neutrals, they have maintained complete silence as to the objects for which they are fighting. Even on so crucial a matter as their intention with regard to Belgium they have uniformly declined to give any trustworthy indication.

"On Dec. 25, last, however, Count Czernin, speaking on behalf of Austria-Hungary and her allies, did make a pronouncement of a kind. It is, indeed, deplorably vague.

Czernin's Vague Explanation.

"We are told that it is not the intention of the central powers to appropriate forcibly any occupied territories or to rob of its independence any nation which has lost its political independence during the war.

"It is obvious that almost any scheme of conquest and annexation could be perpetrated within the literal interpretation of such a pledge. Does it mean that Belgium, Serbia, Montenegro and Roumania will be as independent and as free to direct their own destinies as Germany or any other nation? Or does it mean that all manner of interferences and restrictions, political and economical, incompatible with the status and dignity of free and self-respecting people, are to be imposed? If this is the intention, then there will be one kind of independence for the great nation and an inferior kind of independence for the small nation.

Belgium Reparation Repudiated.

"We must know what is meant, for equality of right among the nations, small as well as great, is one of the fundamental issues this country and her allies are fighting to establish in this war.

"Reparation for the wanton damage inflicted on Belgian towns and villages and their inhabitants is emphatically repudiated. The rest of the so-called offer of the central powers is almost entirely a refusal of all concessions. All suggestions about the autonomy of subject nationalities are ruled out of the peace terms altogether.

"The question whether any form of self government is to be given to the Arabs, Armenians or Syrians is declared to be entirely a matter for the Sublime Porte. A pious wish for the protection of minorities, 'in so far as it is practically realizable,' is the nearest approach to liberty which the central statesmen venture to make.

Demands Return of Colonies.

"On one point only are they perfectly clear and definite. Under no circumstances will the German demand for the restoration of the whole of Germany's colonies be departed from. All principles of self-determination, or, as our earlier phrase goes, government by the consent of governed, here vanish into thin air.

"It is impossible to believe that any edifice of permanent peace could be erected on such a foundation as this. Mere lip-service to the formula of no annexations and no indemnities or the right of self-determination is useless. Before any negotiations can even begin the central powers must realize the essential facts of the situation.

"The days of the treaty of Vienna are long past. We can no longer submit the future of European civilization to the arbitrary decisions of a few negotiators, trying to secure by chicanery or persuasion the interests of this or that dynasty or nation.

Only One Settlement Basis.

"The settlement of the new Europe must be based on such grounds of reason and justice as will give some promise of stability. Therefore it is that we feel that government with the consent of the governed must be the basis of any territorial settlement in this war. For that reason also, unless treaties be upheld, unless every nation is prepared at whatever sacrifices to honor the national signature, it is obvious that no treaty of peace can be worth the paper on which it is written.

Insists on Reparation.

"The first requirement, therefore, always put forward by the British government and its allies has been the complete restoration, political, territorial and economic, of the independence of Belgium and such reparation as can be made for the devastation of its towns and provinces.

"This is no demand for a war indemnity, such as that imposed on France by Germany in 1871. It is not an attempt to shift the cost of warlike operations from one belligerent to another, which may or may not be defensible. It is no more and no less than an insistence that before there can be any hope for stable peace, this great breach of the public law of Europe must be repudiated and so far as possible repaired.

"Reparation means recognition. Unless international right is recognized by insistence on payment for injury done in defiance of its canons, it can never be a reality.

Restorations Also Demanded.

"Next comes the restoration of Serbia, Montenegro, and the occupied parts of France, Italy, and Roumania. The complete withdrawal of the allied (Teutonic) armies, and the reparation of injustice done, is a fundamental condition of permanent peace.

"We mean to stand by the French democracy to the death in the demand they make for a reconsideration of the great wrong of 1871 when, without any regard to the wishes of the population, two French provinces were torn from the side of France and incorporated in the German empire.

"This sore has poisoned the peace of Europe for half a century, and, until it is cured, the healthy conditions will not have been restored. There can be no better illustration of the folly and wickedness of using a transient military success to violate national rights.

Passes Russian Issue.

"I will not attempt to deal with the question of the Russian territories now in German occupation. The Russian policy, since the revolution, has passed so rapidly through so many phases that it is difficult to speak without some suspension of judgment as to what the situation will be when the final terms of European peace come to be discussed.

"Russia accepted war with all its horrors because, true to her traditional guardianship of the weaker communities of her race, she stepped in to protect Serbia from a plot against her independence. It is this honorable sacrifice which not merely brought Russia into the war, but France as well.

"France, true to the conditions of her treaty with Russia, stood by her ally in a quarrel which was not her own. Her chivalrous respect for her treaty led to the wanton invasion of Belgium, and the treaty obligations of Great Britain to that little land brought us into the war.

"The present rulers of Russia are now engaged, without any reference to the country and who Russia brought into the war, in separate negotiations with their common enemy. I am indulging in no reproaches. I am merely stating the facts with a view to making it clear why Great Britain cannot be held accountable for decisions, taken in her absence, and concerning which she has not been consulted or her aid invoked.

Bares Prussia's Hand.

"No one who knows Prussia, and her designs upon Russia, can for a moment doubt her ultimate intention. Whatever phrases she may use to delude Russia, she does not mean to surrender one of the fair provinces or cities of Russia now occupied by her forces. Under one name or another (and the name hardly matters) those Russian provinces will henceforth be in reality a part of the dominions of Prussia. They will be ruled by the Prussian sword in the interests of the Prussian autocracy, and the rest of the people of Russia will be partly enticed by specious phrases and partly bullied by the threat of continued war against an impotent army into a condition of complete economic and ultimate political enslavement to Germany.

Hopes for Russian Democracy.

"We all deplore the prospect. The democracy of this country means to stand to the last by the democracies of France and Italy and all our other allies. We shall be proud to stand side by side with the new democracy of Russia. So will America and so will France and Italy. But if the present rulers of Russia take action which is independent of their allies, we have no means of intervening to arrest the catastrophe which is assuredly befalling that country. Russia can only be saved by her own position.

"We believe, however, that an independent Poland, comprising all those genuinely Polish elements who desire to form a part of it, is an urgent necessity for the stability of western Europe."

"Similarly, though we agree with President Wilson that a breakup of Austria-Hungary is no part of our war aims, we feel that unless genuine self-government on true democratic principles is granted to those Austro-Hungarian nationalities that have long desired it, it is impossible to hope for a removal of those causes of unrest in that part of Europe which have so long threatened the general peace.

Will Force Justice to All.

"On the same grounds we regard as vital the satisfaction of the legitimate claims of the Italians for union with those of their own race and tongue. We also mean to press that justice be done to the men of Roumanian blood and speech in their legitimate aspirations.

"If these conditions are fulfilled, Austria-Hungary would become a power whose strength would conduce to the permanent peace and freedom of Europe instead of being merely an instrument to the pernicious military autocracy of Prussia which uses the resources of its allies for the furtherance of its own sinister purpose.

The Turkish Situation.

"Outside of Europe we belive the same principles should be applied. While we do not challenge the maintenance of the Turkish empire in the homelands of the Turkish race with its capital at Constantinople, the passage between the Mediterranean and the Black sea being internationalized and neutralized, Arabia, Armenia, Mesoptomia, Syria and Palestine are, in our judgment, entitled to a recognition of their separate national conditions.

"What the exact form of that recognition in each particular case should be need not be here discussed beyond stating that it would be impossible to restore to their former sovereignty the territories to which I have already referred.

Disposal of German Colonies.

"Much has been said about the arrangements we have entered into with our allies on this and on other subjects. I can only say that as the new circumstances, like the Russian collapse and the separate negotiations, have changed the conditions under which those arrangements were made, we are, and always have been, perfectly ready to discuss them with our allies.

"With regard to the German colonies, I have repeatedly declared that they are held at the disposal of a conference whose decision must have primary regard to the wishes and interests of the native inhabitants of such colonies. None of those territories is inhabited by Europeans.

"The governing consideration, therefore, must be that the inhabitants should be placed under the control of an administration acceptable to themselves, one of whose main purposes will be to prevent their exploitation for the benefit of European capitalists or governments.

Colonies for Their People.

"The natives live in their various tribal organizations under chiefs and councils who are competent to consult and speak for their tribes and members, and thus to represent their wishes and interests in regard to their disposal. The general principle of national self-determination is, therefore, as applicable in their cases as in those of the occupied European territories.

"The German declaration that the natives of the German colonies have through their military fidelity in war shown their attachment, and resolve under all circumstances to remain with Germany is applicable, not to the German colonies generally, but only to one of them, and in that case German East Africa, the German authorities secured the attachment, not of the native population as a whole, which is and remains profoundly anti-German, but only of a small warlike class, from whom their askaris, or soldiers, were selected. These they attached to themselves by conferring on them a highly privileged position, as against the bulk of the nation's population, which enables these askaris to assume a lordly and oppressive superiority over the rest of the natives.

Minority Must Not Rule.

"By this and other means they secured the attachments of a very small and insignificant minority, whose interests were directly opposed to those of the rest of the population, and for whom they have no right to speak. The German treatment of the native populations in their colonies has been such as amply to justify their fear of submitting the future of those colonies to the wishes of the natives themselves.

"Finally there must be reparation for the injuries done in violation of international law. The peace conference must not forget our seamen and the services they have rendered to and the outrages they have suffered for the common cause of freedom.

"One omission we notice in the proposal of the central powers which seems to us especially regrettable. It is desirable and essential that the settlement after this war shall be one which does not in itself bear the seed of future war. But that is not enough. However wisely and well we may make territorial and other arrangements there will still be many subjects of international controversy. Some, indeed, are inevitable.

"Economic conditions at the end of the war will be in the highest degree difficult owing to the diversion of human effort to warlike pursuits. There must follow a world shortage of raw materials, which will increase the longer the war lasts, and it is inevitable that those countries which have control of raw materials will desire to help themselves and their friends first. Apart from this, whatever settlement is made will be suitable only to the circumstances under which it is made and as those circumstances change, changes in the settlement will be called for.

"So long as the possibility of a dispute between nations continues—that is to say, so long as men and women are dominated by impassioned ambition and war is the only means of settling a dispute—all nations must live under a burden, not only of having from time to time to engage in it, but of being compelled to prepare for its possible outbreak.

Blasts on Civilization.

"The crushing weight of modern armaments, the increasing evil of compulsory military service, the vast waste of wealth and effort involved in warlike preparations—these are blots on our civilization of whch every thinking individual must be ashamed.

"For these and other similar reasons we are confident that a great attempt must be made to establish, by some international organization, an alternative to war as a means of settling international disputes.

"After all, war is a relic of barbarism, and, just as law has succeeded violence as a means of settling disputes between individuals, so we believe that it is destined ultimately to take the place of war in the settlement of controversies between nations.

Fight for Lasting Peace.

"If, then, we are asked what we are fighting for, we reply, as we have often replied: We are fighting for a just and lasting peace, and we believe that before permanent peace can be hoped for, three conditions must be fulfilled:

"First—the sanctity of treaties must be reëstablished;

"Second — a territorial settlement must be secured, based on the right of self-determination or the consent of the governed.

"Third—we must seek by the creation of some international organization to limit the burden of armaments and diminish the probability of war. On these conditions its people are prepared to make even greater sacrifices than those they have yet endured."

SAILORS WRECK RADICAL PAPER

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 5.—Led, according to witnesses, by two civilians, fifteen to twenty American bluejackets entered the office of the Daily Call, a radical newspaper here, tonight and almost wrecked the institution.

It is said the bluejackets entered the newspaper office quietly, drew their revolvers, forced the seven or eight employés of the paper to lie down on the floor and then threw the type out into the street and smashed the fixtures and press. They then withdrew quietly.

TURKS' OFFER TO RUSSIA

Sultan Ready to Concede Much to Slav Nation to Gain Peace at Present Time.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 5.—Turkey is willing to grant Russia free passage through the Dardanelles during the remainder of the war but holds that all her frontiers should be restored to their status of before the war, according to the Ottoman peace terms, as announced today from Brest-Litovsk. The Turkish delegates outlined their terms as follows:

First—Turkish frontiers to be the same as before the war.

Two—Agreement by a convention as to future sea trade.

Three—Individual war losses to be refunded.

Four—Territorial safety and development of Persia to be guaranteed on the basis of entire independence.

Five—Free passage for Russia through the Dardanelles and the Bosporus during the war.

Sixth—Limited mobilization for national defense.

Seventh—Russian armies to be withdrawn to her own borders within two months, except one division to safeguard the frontier.

Eighth—Russian and Armenian units to be demobilized, also the Black sea naval forces.

Ninth—Turkey to retain an active army in consequence of the continuation of the entente in the war.

MAJOR MURPHY QUITS RED CROSS; JOB TO PERKINS

PARIS, Jan. 5.—Maj. Grayson M. P. Murphy of New York has resigned as head of the American Red Cross mission to Europe, it was announced here tonight. Maj. Murphy will go to the United States to consult with Henry P. Davison, chairman of the American Red Cross war council, and later will return to service in the American army.

The newspapers editorially regret his departure, but speak of him as a distinguished man who leaves his present work only to serve the cause of the allies in another field.

BANKER HIS SUCCESSOR.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—Maj. James H. Perkins, vice president of the National City Bank of New York, and now in France with the American Red Cross commission, will immediately take up direction of the commission's work and relieve Maj. Murphy, who is to join Gen. Pershing's expeditionary forces.

Elliott Wadsworth, vice chairman of the Red Cross central committee here, said tonight that it was agreed when Maj. Murphy took up the commission's work in France that he would be relieved at his pleasure to join the American army. Maj. Murphy is a graduate of West Point and served in the army before resigning to go into business in New York.

When he was selected to head the Red Cross commission to Europe he was commissioned a major in the army and it was made known then that he desired active service on the battlefields of France.

New York, Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Contributions of $25,000 from Mrs. William Church Osborn and $12,500 from Mme. Alma Gluck were acknowledged today by the New York county chapter of the Red Cross.

'TURKEY AT END OF ROPE; READY TO MAKE PEACE'

Medhat Bey Says Loss of Jerusalem Was Finishing Blow.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The Daily News correspondent at Geneva writes:

"In spite of censorship and the secret police, reports continue to reach us about conditions and the state of feeling in Constantinople," Medhat Bey said to me this afternoon. "Turkey has reached the end of its tether. The capture of Jerusalem has probably proved the finishing blow, although, goaded on by the Germans, the Young Turk government may continue to tyrannize over the people a little longer.

"Latest reports from Constantinople emphasize the tremendous impression made by the capture of Jerusalem, not only upon the masses of the people, but even upon influential members of the committee of union and progress. The unwillingness or inability of Germany to help Turkey has occasioned a feeling of revulsion among pro-German circles, which may have far-reaching consequences.

Conditions of Poor Terrible.

"The stop-the-war or separate peace movement in Constantinople derives its principal impetus from the economic miseries of the people rather than from any feeling of dismay at the dwindling of Turkish power and prestige. The terrible conditions of the poorer classes cannot easily be exaggerated. Bankruptcy threatens the country.

"Assurance of financial help from Great Britain and France would forward greatly the separate peace movement."

Founded Peace League.

Medhat Bey is a grandson of Medhat Pasha, who prevailed upon Abdul Hamid to grant a constitution in Turkey. He is founder of the League of Peace and Liberty, the principal objects of which are to persuade the Turkish government to make a separate peace and to unite and reconcile the various nationalities which make up the Ottoman empire and to modernize Turkey.

Kills Self and Leaves Body to Medical School

Leaving a will, in which he bequeathed his body to Dr. Arthur Bevan of Rush Medical college, for scientific purposes, Frank Warren, said to have been employed in the advertising departments of several packing companies, committed suicide yesterday by poison and asphyxiation. His body was found in a room in the rooming house of Mrs. Emma Wilkenson of 266 Wisconsin street.

Warren was 40 years old and is believed to have been mentally depressed.

LANSDOWNE AND HENDERSON O. K. TERMS OF PEACE

Say Three Conditions as Given by the Premier Are Necessary.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The Marquis of Lansdowne tonight expressed his agreement with Lloyd George that a just and lasting peace "is only to be based on the three conditions the prime minister specified."

"Admission of these would show the spirit of militarism had been exorcised," the author of the famous peace letter declared.

Arthur Henderson, leader of the Labor party in the house of commons, tonight stated it was his opinion that British labor would welcome Premier Lloyd George's statement of the aims for which Great Britain is fighting in the world war. "In some respects," Mr. Henderson said, "it embodies the principles and the object which labor at our recent conference defined as essential to the warm aims."

In Favor of Disarmament.

Labor stands for the absolute freedom and integrity of Belgium, Serbia, Roumania, and Montenegro, and for the establishment on a firm basis of a league of nations and peoples for disarmament and the prevention of future wars, he pointed out.

"These things," Mr. Henderson continued, "constitute our irreducible minimum, and, if we secure this, we desire the fullest resumption of international intercourse and the complete repudiation of all attempts at an economic war or a boycott. So far as the premier's statement conforms to these principles we welcome it, and we are convinced that no other settlement can be consistent with the expressed desire for peace, which, as he says, will not contain within it the seed of future wars."

Object to Profit by War.

British labor, Mr. Henderson added, warmly welcomes the main principles laid down by the Russian government, but it rejects as completely as the Bolsheviki themselves any idea of making a national or imperial profit out of the war.

"In essentials we agree with the Bolsheviki, and so, to judge from his published statement, does President Wilson," Mr. Henderson declared. "We now are making every effort to arrange another interallied conference as a preliminary to a complete conference of the whole labor movement of the world.

"I make one urgent request of our comrades in Russia. If they reach any basis of agreement with the central powers for general peace, I ask them to insist that the central powers shall submit this basis for consideration to all the governments and peoples concerned."

BAKER REMOVAL ASKED TO SPEED WAR PROGRESS

Former Pacifist Is Declared Failure in This Crisis.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Will Secretary of War Baker be retired?

This is now the paramount subject of speculation in Washington as a result of the continuing disclosures of inefficiency in the war department elicited by the senate investigation of the conduct of the war.

That Secretary Baker has failed is the contention of an increasing number of public men, many of whom have maintained from the beginning that no pacifist is constitutionally qualified to direct the war making forces of the nation in the conflict in which the United States is engaged. Mr. Baker came to the war department as a distinguished leader of the pacifists and has not changed his views, which include apprehensions of the spread of "militarism" on American soil.

Demand for His Retirement.

The demand for the retirement of Mr. Baker is beginning to be echoed in various parts of the country. Newspapers have taken up the cry and the mail of senators and representatives is crammed with letters from constituents urging action to force the dismissal of the secretary of war. Many of these correspondents say the country needs Theodore Roosevelt on the war minister's job.

Mr. Baker has his defenders and they are numerous. They assert that the war secretary may have been a pacifist up to the time his country became involved in war, but that thereupon he became a militarist and devoted his keen analytical mind and his genius for organization to the task of building a war machine in a remarkably short time.

Dissatisfied Over Methods.

Whether congress will be satisfied with the defense of Mr. Baker remains to be seen. Certain it is that there is intense dissatisfaction at the capitol with the revelations of bureaucratic ineptitude, sluggishness, red tape, and general inefficiency, and the secretary of war has frankly stated that he is responsible for the state of affairs. Incidentally it may be stated that he has the courage of his convictions.

Whether the secretary of war shall go or stay is a question that will be decided by President Wilson. At this writing, the president, I am able to state authoritatively, is entirely satisfied with his secretary of war and has no thought of parting with him. This does not mean, however, that Mr. Baker will remain in the cabinet indefinitely. Circumstances may develop which will make the retention of Mr. Baker impossible, whereupon the public may expect to read the usual correspondence, consisting of a letter from the secretary of war announcing his desire to retire and relieve the president of embarrassment and the reply of the president reluctantly accepting Mr. Baker's resignation.

Wilson Likes Baker.

The president has good reason to be satisfied with Mr. Baker. There is no member of the cabinet who has carried out the president's policies, complied with the president's instructions, and even reflected the president's views, even on the most trivial matters, more faithfully than Mr. Baker. When Mr. Baker expresses his opinion on a military matter the public may rest assured that what he says coincides absolutely with the president's view. Mr. Baker is a careful official and meticulous in this respect.

No decisions of major importance and many of no importance have been made by the secretary of war without the knowledge and express consent of the president. The fear of doing something that would not be approved by Mr. Wilson pervades the war department. Many decisions have been held up for weeks and occasionally for months until the president passed on the questions involved.

Warns of War Scandal.

When war was declared on Germany friends of Mr. Baker undertook to warn him that, sooner or later, there would be tremendous war scandals and that there would be an attempt to make him the sacrificial goat. Mr. Baker replied that he intended to take exceedingly great care to avoid becoming the goat.

As matters stand now, it will take a storm of public dissatisfaction to blow Mr. Baker out of office. Not only does Mr. Baker stand high in the estimation of the president but Mr. Wilson does not hesitate to say that he is proud of the record.

With the revelations of inefficiency at the capitol and with the various criticisms of his administration the president has no patience. As he said in his speech to the Buffalo convention of organized labor, he would like to "deport all critics."

Wilson Proud of Record.

There has been no inefficiency in the war department, in the opinion of the president. True, the administration hastily created a war council and shelved thereon Gen. Crozier, chief of ordnance, and Quartermaster General Sharpe a few days after the senate investigation committee had exposed their shortcomings in arming and equipping the troops.

True it is that the war department reorganized the ordnance department, placing its most important functions under civilian control, when the exposures led to increasing demands for the creation of a department or ministry of munitions. But these steps in the view of the president were not due to the discovery of inefficiency, but to the desire to make efficiency more efficient.

Wanted Best Type of Guns.

Mr. Wilson was cognizant of the delays in the manufacture of rifles and machine guns and approved them. He wanted the best rifle and machine gun selected. He wanted them turned out as rapidly as possible, but in any event rapidly enough to arm all the Americans ready to go into the trenches. On account of the shortage of ships and the length of training required for nine-tenths of the army only a limited number of men could be prepared for action. Consequently, in the opinion of the president, enough rifles and machine guns could be turned out to arm this limited number of troops even after the long delays incident to the selection of the best type of rifle and machine gun.

The president is satisfied that there is not a single American soldier in France held back from the trenches for want of rifle, machine gun, or other implement of warfare. He does not believe it necessary to arm all the men in the training camps for the purpose of training and is satisfied that the production of ordnance will be sufficient to arm every man completely by the time he is ready for the firing line.

No Ship Board Criticism.

Mr. Wilson does not concede that there is anything to criticize in the way the administration has handled the shipbuilding program. He is convinced that 6,000,000 tons of ships will be turned out this year—enough to offset the destructiveness of German submarines.

The president has stated repeatedly to callers recently that he is proud of the record of achievement presented by the preparations of America to do her full part in the war. He asks you to remember that the United States was unprepared for war on the scale of the present conflict and that in the short space of nine months the republic has been transformed from a nation thinking only of peace into a nation fully caparisoned for war.

No Apology by President.

Mr. Wilson makes no apology for the unpreparedness of the United States for war after four years of his administration and three and a half years of the European war, during two years of which the United States and Germany had been steadily drifting toward war. The president does not believe in preparedness on the scale that would have been necessary to make the nation fit to fight Germany on the day war was declared. Such preparedness, in his opinion, smacks of the very militarism which the United States is now fighting to crush out forever. When Mr. Baker said that he gloried in the unpreparedness of the nation for war he only reflected the view of the president, a view which Mr. Wilson has reiterated recently.

The building of sixteen cantonments and sixteen national guard camps, the registration of 9,500,000 fighting men, the selection of 500,000 draft men, the mobilization of the national guard, the recruiting of a great regular army, and the emergency training of 50,000 officers the president considers phenomenal achievements by a nation unprepared for war.

Lack of Clothing Trivial.

The failure to clothe a part of these forces and to provide arms before they are needed in France Mr. Wilson regards as trivial, in comparison with the achievement as a whole. The fact that there have been fatal epidemics of pneumonia in the army camps as a result of the failure to supply enough winter clothing and sufficient tentage is not a serious reflection upon the administration, in the opinion of the president, who is said to believe that no nation ever has taken better care of its soldiers.

In all these matters Mr. Baker has measured up fully to the requirements of service under the president. Mr. Wilson is the chief defender of his secretary of war, and Mr. Wilson is far from convinced that a pacifist is not constitutionally fitted to direct the military establishment in the greatest war of all ages.

AIR TALES

How nine women in the maternity ward at Rosendael hospital, Dunkirk, were killed by a German aerial torpedo was one of the experiences related yesterday afternoon by Adjt. Leonard Reno, 5925 Kenmore avenue, an aviator in the French army.

Reno, who was wounded, arrived in Chicago to spend thirty days' convalescent leave at his home here. He is with the "Storks," a famous French flying squadron.

The machine in which Reno was flying on the Belgian front early this winter was struck by shrapnel and the gasoline tank exploded. Reno fell, sustaining severe injuries.

He was removed to the Rosendael hospital at Dunkirk, which, he says, was shelled nightly by German fliers. "Whenever the boches raided Calais or London," he said, "they always dropped a few shells on us, coming and returning. Some of the patients could be removed to bombproof cellars, but I was unable to be moved and had to lie there on my cot with shells raining all around. One night the hospital was shelled at the same time from the sea, from Ostend, and from the air. On this night a boche aerial torpedo landed in the maternity ward of the hospital and killed nine women confined there."

Adjt. Reno, who is only 20 years old, is the son of H. O. Reno of the Reno Publishing company. He enlisted in Paris last February. On his shoulder he wears the cord decoration, known as the tourragire, given the "Storks" for distinguished service.

"CUT RED TAPE"

Baker Issues Order to Hasten Payment of Allotments to Soldiers' Relatives.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Complaints of delay in paying families their allotment of soldiers' pay have become so general that Secretary of War Baker has intervened to see if the red tape cannot be slashed.

Social workers in various centers of population have reported instances where families of men sent to camp in September have received no part of their allotment of the pay, although the men at the front in many instances were breadwinners of these families.

"I have investigated several cases of complaint," Secretary Baker said, "and found that the trouble has been due to discrepancies between the pay rosters turned in and the record rolls of the department. These errors have delayed payment in many cases. When correct rosters are established there will be no further delay in payment of the men or their families."

BILLS PROVIDE GREAT POWERS FOR SHIP BOARD

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Three bills designed to aid the shipping board and the emergency fleet corporation in speeding up the construction of the American merchant fleet, carrying out recommendations made by officials of these organizations, were introduced in the senate today by Senator Fletcher of Florida, chairman of the senate commerce committee, which is investigating the activities of the shipping board.

One of the bills authorizes the shipping board to take possession of, or lease, any street car, railroad, interurban railroad, whether operated by steam or electricity, needed to transport the workmen to the shipyards where these government vessels are building.

The second measure authorizes the president to declare a war, or barred, zone around the yards where ships are building for the shipping board.

The third bill authorizes the emergency fleet corporation to purchase, lease, requisition, or otherwise acquire any improved or unimproved property for the purpose of housing workmen at the shipyards. This corporation is authorized to expend $50,000,000 for this purpose, and $25,000,000 is made immediately available.

More Aid Asked to Feed and Clothe Belgian Waifs

A plea for additional funds to help feed and clothe Belgian war waifs and refugees during the winter has been made to Americans. A great deal of suffering is reported in the devastated areas. Mr. E. De Cartier, Belgian minister at Washington, will be glad to receive contributions. They will be forwarded by him through the authorized channels provided by the commission for relief in Belgium.

Swedish Finance Chief Quits Because of Health

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 5.—Hjalmar Branting, the Socialist minister of finance, has resigned for reasons of health. His resignation has been accepted. Fredrik Wilhelm Thorsson, a representative of the Royal Swedish bank, who is also a Socialist deputy, has been appointed minister of finance.

FRENCH BREAD RATION CUT TO GIVE U. S. SHIPS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Sacrifices which the French people are making in order to conserve ships for transporting American soldiers to France is strikingly emphasized in an order just issued by the French government limiting bread consumption to seven ounces a day per person.

"Only the very poor, and men and women doing the hardest kind of manual labor," a food administration announcement says, "may have more than seven ounces of war bread a day in France from now on. The entire French wheat crop had been requisitioned by the government."

PLENTY OF WOOL FOR UNIFORMS, EXPERT ASSERTS

Shoddy Put Into Clothes When Makers Ask New Specifications.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Repeated assertions made by Charles Eisenman, vice chairman of the supply committee of the Council of National Defense, that shoddy was introduced into American army uniforms because of a necessity to conserve wool, were challenged before the senate military affairs committee today by William Bianci, former buyer of uniform cloth for German, Swiss, and Italian armies.

Bianci declared to the committee that the specifications for army uniform cloth when changed by the supply committee to admit 45 to 50 per cent of shoddy in various grades of goods created a demand for shoddy and opened the way for many American firms to get government contracts which were not equipped to make goods in accordance with previous army standards.

Wool Shortage Merely a Scare.

"The shortage of wool is a manufacturers' scare," Bianci declared, "designed to create a demand for shoddy. Many clothing manufacturers in the United States were not equipped to make all wool cloth under old army standards. Consequently they would have received no orders from the committee on supplies unless the committee changed the specifications.

"There was no reworked wool or shoddy in United States army cloth until Mr. Eisenman's committee changed the specifications last summer. There is no wool shortage or threatened shortage, and in my opinion it was a mistake to change the specifications.

Enough Wool for Three Years.

"There is enough wool available not only to clothe an army of 1,500,000 men, but to meet all the demands of the United States for the next three years."

The committee today continued its efforts to establish definite responsibility for failure to clothe the army properly and on time, but still has been unable to reconcile conflicting statements made by Mr. Eiseman and Gen. Sharpe, former quartermaster general. Col. Elmer Lindsley, depot quartermaster at Philadelphia, continued his testimony and related some of the difficulties of the clothing situation.

Divide the Responsibility.

"In my mind," Col. Lindsley said, "the responsibility is divided. In the beginning the general staff contemplated providing for 640,000 men. Very shortly afterward the quartermaster department was called on to provide for 500,000 more, and subsequently another increment of 500,000 had to be taken care of. It was the biggest job ever tackled in this country. It necessitated the complete mobilization of the manufacturing industry, the transportation facilities, and labor."

Sell Uniforms to All.

New York, Jan. 5.—Evidence of the indiscriminate sale of United States army uniforms by merchants who buy them from push cart peddlers and manufacturers has come into the possession of District Attorney Swann in connection with an inquiry he is conducting with the United States quartermaster's corps in this city, he said tonight. In a letter to Attorney General Gregory, which he made public, Mr. Swann said "These merchants sell to any persons who are willing to pay the price of the uniform."

It also developed today that thousands of army overcoats on sale in stores have been commandeered by United States army officers to relieve a shortage of these garments in the national army.

Y. M. C. A. PLOTS TO CRUSH THEM, BOLSHEVIKI FEAR

Red Flag, Organ in Russia, Warns of American Capital Peril.

Bolshevik conceptions of America and America's most prized institutions are disclosed in a letter received by THE TRIBUNE from Ralph B. Dennis, an Evanstonian now in the Y. M. C. A. service in Russia.

Mr. Dennis incloses the translation of an article in the Vladivostok "Krasnoye Znamia" ["The Red Flag"] which presented the views of the soldiers of the Fourth company of the Second Vladivostok artillery regiment upon the request for permission to open a Y. M. C. A. building in Vladivostok. It is headed "American Contrivance."

"Thanks to Comrade Kovalcheek, who has lived in America," reads an introductory paragraph, "the achievements of this organization and its purposes and methods have been explained to us and we can now fully express our opinion on this subject."

The Russian Opinion.

The "opinion" follows:

"The above mentioned organization exists in almost every American town. It is established by the American capitalists, who find in it a strong support for protecting their rapacious interests. In the struggle against the working people the capitalists always need rough physical strength. This very thing is procured through the Y. M. C. A. Under the cloak of Christianity they ingraft in their victims the feeling of servile obedience which makes them the tools of their rapacious will.

"The above mentioned organization is striving to the utmost to turn an ignorant man into an entirely submissive slave. There is, usually, in this organization a registry office. It is quiet understood that at the registry office there are statistical lists giving, regarding each workman, his political points of view. If a man calling at the above mentioned registry office for work is a member of any progressive workman's party he will not find any work.

Charges Shrewd Plots.

"But this is not all. This organization, like the true servant of the capitalists, helps them by more radical methods. If it be necessary to put some honest intelligent workman in prison, or to deal with him with arms, the organization will play the principal role; and, in order to bring ignorant people into their clutches, the organization is using most cunning and adequate means: namely, arranging for its members various amusements, clubs, sports, etc. Afterwards, as soon as a man becomes a victim of their subtle enticements, they begin to kill his mind with religion."

Food and Clothing Needs.

Mr. Dennis also commented interestingly on the shortages of food and clothing. On this subject he wrote:

"I had the privilege of talking last night with an American who knows as much about shipping conditions here, Petrograd tie us hand and foot here? There are locomotives, cars, machinery on the boats here and we can't unload because we are waiting for an O. K. from Petrograd.'

"When the Russian, who did not agree, had substided and his remarks had been translated aud digested, I got the attention of the American and asked: 'Why do they make all these rules and regulations? Do they really think they are doing the right thing?'

"'The longer I am here and the more I study the situation the more I know that all these regulations are made by the damned Germans,' he said. 'No Russian could be fool enough to make these laws. They are meant to strangle the country to death and they are doing it. Think of it! No merchant here may send money from the country. Money must be placed in the banks and cannot be withdrawn for imports. The only men who can buy are the few big men who have credit and cash in Japan. All goods for this district must come from Japan.'

"When we asked if this meant that American goods could come via Japan and enter, the local man refused to answer. He must write to Petrograd. And to write to Petrograd is like throwing your letter in the bay."

English Attorney General to Be Guest of Illinois Bar

The Illinois State Bar association will give a dinner at the Hotel La Salle tomorrow night in honor of Sir Frederick E. Smith, Bart., K. C., attorney general of Great Britain. Sir Frederick is in the United States on an important mission, and is expected to discuss with great frankness many matters connected with the war.

OFFICIAL REPORTS ON ALL WAR FRONTS

ITALIAN FRONT

ITALIAN.

ROME, Jan. 5.—There were spirited artillery duels in the eastern sector of the Asiago plateau and astride the Brenta valley. In the Seren valley an enemy column was surprised and dispersed by our batteries. At the head of the Calcino valley hostile patrols which were advancing toward our positions were driven back by rifle fire.

On the middle Piave the enemy artillery showed increased activity and our own replied energetically.

AVIATION.

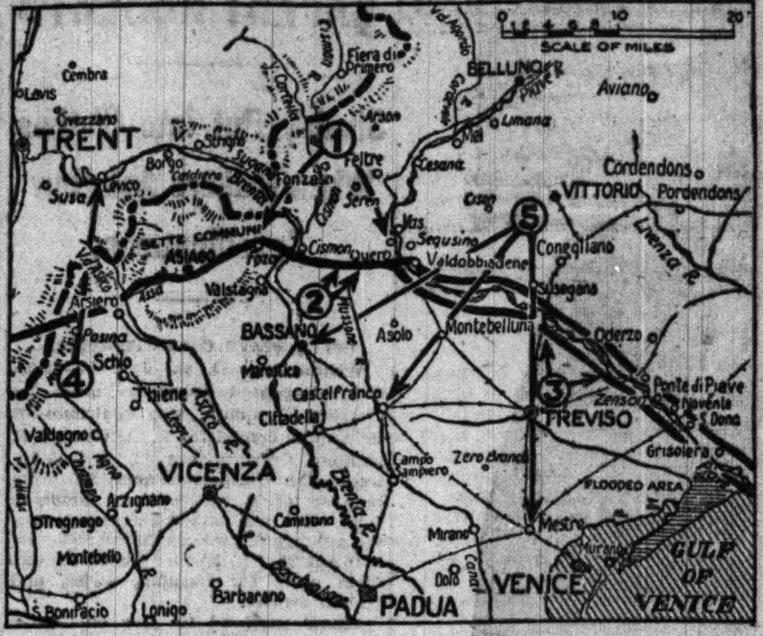
British airmen destroyed a hostile captive balloon and brought down an airplane. By day and night there is considerable aerial activity on the front lines and in the rear areas. Our airmen bombarded with good results enemy encampments and aviation camps. The station at Levico and adjacent magazines were bombarded with 1,200 kilograms of projectiles.

Enemy aircraft dropped bombs on Mestre, Bassano, and Castelfranco. Slight damage and some casualties resulted.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—Italian front: The artillery fire was revived intermittently between the Brenta and Montello.

FIGHTING ON THE ITALIAN FRONT



1—Rome reports spirited artillery duels in eastern sector of Asiago plateau and astride the Brenta valley.

2—In the Seren valley and at the head of the Calcino valley Austro-German patrols were driven back by artillery and rifle fire.

3—Rome says on middle Piave the Teuton artillery showed increased activity.

4—Italian airmen bombarded enemy encampments and magazines at Levico.

5—Austro-German airmen have dropped bombs on Mestre, Bassano, and Castelfranco.

FRENCH FRONT

BRITISH.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—At dawn this morning a strong local attack was made by the enemy against our positions in the Hindenburg line east of Bullecourt. A small party of his troops succeeded in occupying a sap in advance of our front trenches. On the remainder of the front the enemy's attack was repulsed.

The hostile artillery has shown some activity during the day northeast of Ypres.

AVIATION.

A strong wind prevented long distance bombing raids on Friday, but more than 250 bombs were dropped on Denain, Ledeghem, and the Menin-Roulers railway stations. Eight hostile machines were downed during combats in the air and two others were driven down out of control. Five of our machines are missing.

During the night our machines attempted once more to bomb factories and railway communications at Mezieres-Les-Metz, and, although the visibility was bad and the sky covered with low clouds, several pilots succeeded in dropping bombs on their objectives. Others of our airmen released their bombs on targets of military importance in that neighborhood.

DAY STATEMENT.

A raid attempted by the enemy during the night in the neighborhood of Hollebeke was repulsed without loss by our troops.

Another hostile raiding party succeeded in rushing one of our posts east of Zonnebeke. A few of our men are missing.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—Western front: There were lively artillery duels at times in Flanders, east of Ypres in isolated sectors between the Scarpe and the Somme and in the neighborhood of Avocourt and St. Mihiel. On the remainder of the front the activity of the artillery was limited to a harassing fire.

East of Bullecourt a strong reconnaissance was completely successful and a good many British prisoners were brought in.

FRENCH.

PARIS, Jan. 5.—We repulsed an enemy raid south of Juvincourt and took prisoners. In Champagne one of our detachments penetrated, north of Main De Massignes, the German trenches, where they carried out destructive operations.

Quite lively artillery fighting took place in the Avocourt wood and in the neighborhood of Caurieres wood.

AVIATION.

On Jan. 4 five German airplanes were brought down in the course of engagements by our pilots.

DAY STATEMENT.

Active artillery fighting occurred during the night in the region south of Corbeny and on the left bank of the Meuse, near Avocourt wood.

North of St. Mihiel enemy detachments, which attempted to capture a French post, suffered appreciable losses under our fire without attaining any result. Another German effort, in the region of Flirey, met the same fate. We took prisoners.

Everywhere else the night was calm.

MACEDONIAN FRONT

FRENCH.

PARIS, Jan. 5.—There was feeble artillery action along the whole front owing to a snowstorm.

NEW QUAKE KILLS 300; WIPES OUT GUATEMALA CITY

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—Guatemala City has been completely destroyed by earthquake shocks Thursday and Friday, which followed those late in December. Messages received by the state department today said that 300 more persons were killed, the loss of life this week being estimated greater than that resulting from the earlier shocks.

A dispatch from the Central American Telegraph company said:

"Our manager at San Jose, Guatemala, telegraphs the following:

"'What was left of Guatemala City is now wiped out. Shocks at 10:35 p. m., 4th, finished everything. Steam is coming up in the streets. Cathedral fallen. Las Vacas bridge to Barrios now down. Slides on railroad between San Jose and city. No lines or trains reported. Further 300 killed.'"

Dispatches received by the navy department today from a warship in Guatemalan waters also told of severe earthquakes in Guatemala Thursday and Friday nights, with many deaths. Railroads were reported in bad condition, and a town near the railroad was badly damaged.

Immediate relief for the people of Guatemala City will be rushed from the Panama Canal Zone.

Sir Edward Morris Made Baron as Service Reward

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Sir Edward Morris, who recently retired as premier of Newfoundland, has been made a baron in recognition of his service to the empire.

SON OF GERMAN OFFICER TAKEN ON SPY CHARGE

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 5.—Following the disappearance of important military papers and a leak of important military secrets, Sergt. Maj. Thomas Helmuth Ritter of the divisional adjutant's office at headquarters building, Camp Lewis, is held today in the Pierce county jail. Ritter's father is in the quartermaster general's army corps in Germany.

Ritter enlisted in the United States army and was sent to the Philippines, where, it is said, he is supposed to have been intimate with the German consul general in Manila.

25,000 GERMAN TROOPS REVOLT ON RUSS FRONT?

The Bolsheviki News agency hinted that Prof. Paul N. Milukoff and former Minister of the Interior Tseretelli were seeking to restore Bourgeoise power in Russia. Minister Trotzky said today that the Bourgeoise are prepared to give away half of Russia if they can obtain control of the other half.

Ukraine Ready for Bargain.

Regarding the attitude of the Ukraine towards the Germans, a report here says the Rada is willing to strike a bargain with the Germans. The Germans, it is believed, are willing to recognize the Rada on the basis that the Ukraine supply Germany with foodstuffs and recognize German economic interests in the Ukraine.

Generals Kaledine and Korniloff are marching to Kharkoff, according to one report which reached here today. Another, directly conflicting report, had it that Kaledine had offered an armistice between his Cossacks and the Bolsheviki, if the latter would agree to arbitrate the difference between the two sides and to call an immediate session of the constituent assembly to conclude peace.

Support Russian Demands.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 5.—Vorwaerts, Germany's Socialist organ, is firmly supporting the Russian peace demands of withdrawal of German armies from all sections of Russia which they now hold, according to dispatches received here today.

"The Russians are right," an editorial from the newspaper asserted today. "It is of great consideration that we conclude a peace with Russia free from dishonesty and possibilities of misunderstanding."

German newspapers received here today all warn against acquiescence by the German government in the Russian proposals for conference of Socialists at Stockholm, alleging such a conference would be directly under British influence.

Threaten the Slavs.

"Russia must take the consequences on herself if she breaks off peace negotiations," was the veiled threat of German military blows contained in a semi-official dispatch received from Berlin today.

The message emphasized that a rupture of the Brest-Litovsk conferences would not change the military or political situation.

DIE IN FRANCE

Gen. Pershing Sends List of Men Claimed by Death Through Natural Causes.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 5.—Gen. Pershing today reported the following deaths:

Sergt. Harry H. Rowland, pneumonia; 151 Maple avenue, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

Sergt. Charles A. Fraley, pneumonia; 121 South Seventeenth street, Lincoln, Neb.

AMERICAN SHIP, HIT BY TORPEDO, IS RUN ASHORE

New York, Jan. 5.—The American steamship Surugua, a vessel of 4,374 tons gross register, and owned by the New York and Oriental Steamship company, was torpedoed and compelled to run ashore on Dec. 27 while in Mediterranean waters, according to a report received here today in insurance circles.

The Surugua left New York the latter part of October for an Italian port, and it is understood that it was returning and bound for a French port when torpedoed. So far as can be learned here, all the crew are safe.

Japs Repulse U-Boats.

TOKIO, Jan. 4.—[Delayed.]—Enemy submarines which attempted to attack British transports convoyed by Japanese warships in the Mediterranean on Dec. 30 were repulsed, says an announcement from the Japanese admiralty. The warships were not damaged.

Norway Loses 22 Ships.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—In December twenty-two Norwegian ships with total gross tonnage of 32,755 were lost in consequence of war measures, the Norwegian legation announced today. Seventy-five lives were lost.

U. S. AVIATORS BOMB FOE LINES

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Jan. 5.—United States aviators have flown over the German battle lines and dropped bombs, in conjunction with British and French pilots. The flight of the Americans virtually was a reprisal for the killing of two American wood cutters during a German bombing expedition a week ago.

Through the courtesy of the British and French flying authorities, the American aviators also have taken part in observation and photographic work.

It is not thought advisable to name the places where the Americans flew on the bombing expedition, but it was well beyond the German air defense lines at the front.

SENATOR SMOOT OPENS FIGHT FOR WAR TAX CHANGE

Says Income and Excess Profit Plan Will Give More Revenue.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Proposing to revise the income taxes and the excess profits taxes of existing law and to repeal the munition manufacturers' tax and the increases in the second class postal rates along with the zone system, Senator Smoot of Utah, a member of the finance committee, introduced amendments today to the joint resolution which has passed the house providing that members of congress and other government officials shall pay the excess profits tax.

Senator Smoot issued a statement in regard to his amendments in which he said:

"I haven't yet been able to find two persons who interpret the revenue acts alike. I am positive there are but few who will not freely state that the act of Oct. 3, 1917 should be amended. Not only is it unworkable, but it is unscientific and discriminatory.

So All Can Understand.

"The amendment provides a taxing system that any ordinary business man or individual can understand. Every individual, whether in business as such or as a member of a partnership is treated alike. Every corporation is taxed upon the same basis and the questions of capital invested, watered stock, bonded indebtedness, do not enter into the question of the amount of the tax to be imposed.

"Subnormal businesses during the prewar period are treated on the same basis as normal businesses of like and similar character.

Consolidates Surtax Rates.

"The amendment makes no changes in the normal rate of 2 per cent upon all net incomes of individuals, but it consolidates the surtax rates imposed by the acts of Sept. 8, 1916 and Oct. 3, 1917. It does away with the two different amounts of exemption on individual net incomes as provided under existing laws, and allows the sum of $1,000 exemption, plus $1,000 additional if the person making the return be the head of a family, or married man or woman with wife or husband living with him or her; there shall be an additional exemption of $200 for dependent child if under 18 years of age.

"It also adds a provision allowing a deduction for amounts paid to individual partners as reasonable salaries or compensation for personal services actually rendered during the taxable year, but in no case shall such salaries or compensation be in excess of the compensation customarily paid for similar services under like responsibilities by corporations engaged in like businesses.

Wants Immediate Action.

"It does not provide a higher rate of taxation upon unearned income than upon the earned income, as I do not think it wise to inject this question into the legislation at this time, as the amendment ought to be passed at as early a date as possible and could be passed before the end of this month if the administration would approve it. I believe in the principle of taxing unearned income at a higher rate than earned income.

"Instead of the different normal taxes imposed under existing revenue acts, amounting to 6 per cent upon the total net income of all corporations, the amendment levies a straight tax of 8 per cent upon the net income of all corporations except those whose income is less than $2,000.

Would Produce Greater Revenue.

"This 8 per cent tax is not imposed upon individuals or partnerships, thus equalizing the income tax required to be paid by an individual or an individual partner engaged in business, as compared with the income tax imposed upon the stockholders of a corporation. The 8 per cent rate on corporations will raise $180,000,000 over the amount that the 6 per cent rate yields; or, in other words, the amendment will provide a revenue to the government of $715,000,000 on corporations' incomes in place of $535,000,000."

The greatest changes are made in the war excess profits tax of existing law by the Smoot amendments.

"Under this title," Senator Smoot said, "the amendment only taxes the war profits and at graduated rates. Under this title the pre-war period means the three years of the calendar years 1909, 1910, 1911, 1912, and 1913, remaining after the exclusion of the two calendar years in which the net income of the business was respectively the greatest and the least. These five years, taken as the pre-war period, will result in a much fairer normal income, of all classes of business, than the three years 1911, 1912, and 1913 provided in the existing law.

Schedule of War Taxes.

"The war profits taxes to be paid, in addition to taxation under the proposed act upon the income of every corporation, partnership, or individual engaged in trade or business, are scheduled as follows:

"Ten per cent of the amount of such war profits not in excess of 10 per cent of pre-war profits of such trade or business, determine as hereinafter provided.

"Twelve and one-half per cent of the amount by which such war profits exceed 10 per cent of such pre-war profits and do not exceed 30 per cent thereof.

"Fifteen per cent of the amount by which such war profits exceed 20 per cent of such pre-war profits and do not exceed 30 per cent thereof.

"Twenty per cent from 30 to 40 per cent, 25 per cent from 40 to 50 per cent, 30 per cent from 50 to 60 per cent, 40 per cent from 60 to 70 per cent, 50 per cent from 70 to 80 per cent, 60 per cent from 80 to 90 per cent, 70 per cent from 90 to 100 per cent, and 80 per cent from 100 plus.

Total of $1,351,050,000.

"Senator Smoot estimates that his revised war profits taxes will bring in a total of $1,351,050,000, or an increase of $125,050,000 over the excess profits tax under the existing law.

KAISER SPOILED HIS OWN DREAM TO TAKE PARIS?

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—A remarkable story by Harry B. Hawes, a St. Louis lawyer, who has just left Germany with Mrs. Lily Busch, widow of the multi-millionaire brewer, Adolphus Busch, says the German army sweeping on Paris in 1914, had instructions to wait for the kaiser and crown prince to lead the procession into Paris, and that the emperor's delay upset the military machine and caused disastrous defeat in the battle of the Marne.

Hawes' letter, written in France, says he is impressed with the idea that America will be the decisive factor in the war, as men, munitions, food, and ingenuity will decide whether it will be a war of many years or one of two or three years' duration.

Hawes writes:

"A curious story is in circulation here regarding the German advance on Paris in 1914. It is said that the Germans were so confident of reaching Paris that they purposely delayed their entry until the kaiser and the crown prince could join in the triumphal entry, and that this delay, while waiting for the German emperor and his son, gave the French the necesary twenty-four hours in which to reorganize and ultimately defeat the German arms."

Reweds Divorced Wife to Dodge $300 Alimony

George C. Thorsen of 830 North Fairfield avenue was tried yesterday in the Court of Domestic Relations on a nonsupport charge preferred by his wife, Stella, of 3206 West Monroe street.

They were married first in 1916 and later divorced.

"Isn't it true," asked State's Attorney Rosinia, "that you remarried your wife to avoid the payment of $300 alimony you owed your wife?"

"Well, ahem—ahem, we were remarried," said the defendant.

"Did you ever pay the alimony?" was the next question.

"I didn't have to then," said Thorsen.

An order of $5 a week was made by the clerk.

"Pastor" Passes $5,000 Bad Checks Throughout Illinois

The Chicago police were asked to look for a man who gave the name of C. A. Burton and said that he was pastor of the Christian church of Virden, Ill.

Burton recently passed a number of checks through Illinois on the Raymondville State bank of Raymondville, Tex. They were made payable to C. A. Burton. He would walk into a bank, saying that he was in town on a visit and present a check. He dressed like a minister. He is said to have obtained more than $5,000.

DR. AND MRS. SIPPY HAVE SON.

Announcement was made yesterday of the birth of a son to Dr. and Mrs. Bertram Sippy of 5615 Woodlawn avenue. The new heir was born on Jan. 2.

Convicted as Embezzler; Had Enlisted in the Army

William Selby, former bank teller and now a private in the United States army medical corps, was convicted of embezzlement by a jury in Judge John P. McGoorty's court yesterday. Selby took the witness stand in his own behalf and denied that he had manipulated funds of the Noel State bank, Milwaukee and West North avenues, by failing to record deposits and destroying ledger pages crediting depositors with more than $5,200. He disappeared and was traced to more than ten cities and was finally located in San Francisco. He was arrested after he had enlisted in the medical corps.

DROP CHARGES AGAINST DOCTOR.

Charges against Dr. James H. Bradley, wealthy Los Angeles physician, arrested recently at the Hotel Morrison on a charge of violating the Harrison anti-narcotic act, were dropped yesterday. Charles E. Erbstein, his attorney, announced that a compromise had been reached. At the same time charges against Robert R. Robinson, 2310 Rice street, and Mrs. Rose Miller, 1449 North La Salle street, arrested at the same time, were dismissed.

WORLD'S FIRST PATRIOTIC FOOD SHOW STARTS

BY MARGERY CURREY.

"Chicago may be proud of having produced the first and only great show ever attempted to bring home to the people the message of the United States food administration." As Frederick C. Walcott, assistant to Food Administrator Hoover took his train last night to return to his office in Washington, D. C., after speaking as representative of his chief, this was the summary he made of the patriotic food show which opened yesterday morning at 11 o'clock in the Coliseum with a fanfare of trumpets from a jackie band from the naval training station, followed by the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner."

As the first music of the show sounded the flag was raised over the central booth, the hundreds of workers, who were in their places as food demonstrators, stood at attention, and a moment later the multitude who came for the opening of the food show cheered enthusiastically and broke into patriotic singing.

War Lessons Taught.

The spaces of the building are divided into five sections, labeled proteins, fats, sugars, fruits, and vegetables, and starches, and in these five sections are taught the great lessons of food conservation and food substitution that will help America to win the war.

The concreteness and practical order of the demonstration of the way to use those foods which will nourish our people at home while saving those foods which can be sent abroad for the maintenance of our armies and allies is one of the impressive features of the show.

In the booth demonstrating the use of fruits and vegetables, for instance, a score of young school children were busy canning under the direction of experts from the Chicago Normal school; in the booth for the demonstration of fats, their uses, their substitutes, and the reasons for the conservation of fats, Mrs. Grace Viall Gray of the School of Domestic Arts and Science directed several helpers in the home making of soap, in the use of vegetable oils for cooking, in converting coarse mutton fats into cooking material, and gave many other lessons of that branch of the work. In another booth two Chinese girls, Marion G. Moy and Hattie Don Sang, demonstrated the use of soy beans.

Uses of Corn Stressed.

Corn and its uses were stressed in the government exhibits, as January has been set aside as the month for making a special drive for saving wheat.

About 500 society women and other visitors to the show had their midday meal in the army mess kitchen and ate beef stew, spaghetti, tomatoes and cheese, lima beans, rice pudding, and coffee at mess tables with mess utensils.

"Women, the first agriculturists of the race, are the ones who are natural conservators," said Miss Jane Addams last night in an address in the lecture hall of the Coliseum.

"A tremendously surprising exhibit," is what Harry A. Wheeler, food administrator for Illinois, called the food show in his speech last night.

Samuel Insull in his talk dwelt on the purpose of the show and the necessity of saving wheat for shipment abroad.

The show will open this morning at 11 o'clock and continue until 11 o'clock this evening. Louis M. Stumer is chairman of the general committee.

SHRAPNEL

Among the recent promotions made in Camp Pike, Ark., are three Illinois men: James H. Hastie of 5329 Kimbark avenue, Garland B. Wale of Cora City, and Robert J. Biddell of Sparland.

Corporal Jack Matthews of the One Hundred and Sixty-first depot brigade, barracks 1,000, Camp Grant, had two days' pay coming when he went into service. His friend, whose name is withheld, promised to see that Mrs. Matthews, who lives at 4585 Oakenwald avenue, received that money and also $1 loaned to the friend. The friend hasn't made good yet.

Carl E. Buck has resigned as health commissioner of Oak Park and will enter the aviation section of the signal corps. He will be succeeded as health commissioner by Dr. Albert F. Storcke.

Louis Caldwell of 130 South East avenue, Oak Park, who was head of American ambulance section No. 65, recently disbanded in France, has returned home for a short visit before entering some other branch of the service.

The First Congregational church of Oak Park will hold special services this morning and will unfurl a service flag bearing seventy-five stars and presented by Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Stanton.

G. S. Ralston, commander-elect of William McKinley camp No. 12, department of Illinois, United Spanish War Veterans, announces a meeting of the camp on Tuesday, Jan. 8, for the installation of officers. Judge J. B. David of the Superior court will deliver an address. Clara Barton auxiliary will supply entertainment.

Sergt. Barnett L. Kerns of the Three Hundred and Seventy-first reserve militia yesterday announced his engagement to Miss Sylvia Clark of 1251 Marion court, a daughter of Morris Clark, hair manufacturer.

The international dinner, at which representatives of seventy-five nationalities included in the population of Chicago will meet and demonstrate their loyalty to the United States, will be planned in detail and the time will be set at a meeting of the 250 committee members at a luncheon at the Hotel Morrison Wednesday noon. The dinner is to be under the auspices of the Security league.

FREES OFFICER OF BLAME FOR KILLING CITIZEN

Cautioning policemen to "exercise a higher degree of care," a coroner's jury yesterday exonerated Policeman Elmer E. Bell of guilt in the fatal shooting of Joseph E. Abrams of 1014 North Mason avenue, Oak Park, on Christmas eve.

By way of opening a relief fund for the widow and her three minor children, Capt. Joseph C. Mullin yesterday collected $11 from among sympathizers. These are Edward Kugelman, $2; L. W. Weintraub, $2; J. W. Woltring, $2; M. J. Lynch, $1; B. Joss, $1, and M. Camator, $1.

Abrams had been at the home of William R. Bennett, his employer, on Christmas eve, assisting in trimming the Bennett tree. He and Bennett had talked of the increasing number of robberies in Chicago, and it is thought Abrams left for his home with a feeling of uneasiness. When he reached a point near his home Policeman Bell called on him to stop.

From evidence submitted to the coroner's jury it was considered that each thought the other was a holdup man. Abrams started to run and Bell fired a couple of shots in the air. He then aimed at the fleeing man and wounded him fatally.

Mrs. Abrams said she has not been able to summon the courage to tell her children of their father's death.

LOSS OF SYMBOLS RUIN OF RUSSIA, SAYS C. R. CRANE

First Hand Study Offers New Explanation of Turmoil.

When the Russian army lost its symbols it lost its morale and went to pieces.

Charles R. Crane, who returned recently from an official mission to Russia, was in Chicago yesterday. He said that the Russian army is absolutely demoralized and showed the reasons.

"The Russian people are strong for symbols," he said, when interviewed at the Chicago club, "and the biggest symbol of the army was the czar. When the czar went to the front all the people knew about it, and they sent food and clothing to the soldiers and committees to see that the soldiers got their tea and their baths when they got out of the trenches.

Even Flag Is Lost.

"The first symbol to go was the czar and the next was the flag. That was taken away from the army and a red flag substituted. It meant nothing to the soldiers. Our own country is not strong for symbols, but if the Stars and Stripes should be taken away you can imagine the effect it would have on the morale of our troops.

"And then they took away the national anthem. The Russians are a musical race, perhaps the most musical in the world. They go into battle singing, often led by a priest. It was another symbol taken away.

"With the czar gone, the flag gone, the national anthem gone, the soldiers looked to Petrograd as the one symbol left. And in Petrograd they found a group of men they had never heard of before at the head of the government. There was no incentive to fight for those men that they did not know.

Propaganda at Front.

"All the time the agents of the Bolsheviki were working at the front, urging the soldiers not to fight, telling them that the Bolsheviki would bring peace and that it was better for them to lay down their arms. And the men were reminded that the lands were being distributed and that if they did not hurry home they would be left out."

U. S. WILL WIN WAR AND MORE, SAYS E. H. GARY

various parts of the United States or of any locality.

"Our country as a whole, including the several branches of government, does not yet appear to appreciate that in order to win in this war it is necessary to appropriate every ounce of energy, every dollar of wealth, and every atom of skill within reach, to be drawn against when needed, and to offer every sacrifice, even of personal opinion or pride, or desire, for advancement of the interests of individuals or political parties."

Lists Essential Things.

And then immediately there was a return to the optimistic tone as he discussed the steps to be taken—the great measures necessary to win the war. These are the things he listed as essential:

Food,
Transportation,
Arms,
Barracks,
Aircraft,
Seacraft,
Munitions,
Fuel,
Men.

Discussing the action necessary to supply these, he emphasized the need for meeting at once the scarcity of labor, the necessity for an administration of governmental affairs marked by perfect organization and the advisability of conservation of resources within reasonable limitations.

The Labor Problem.

In treating of the scarcity of labor he said:

"Now it is manifest that in order to render the assistance that is asked of us and which seems to be imperative we must have more and more men, for soldiers and workmen, skilled and unskilled. We cannot produce the quantities or amounts demanded unless the number of men is materially increased, nor unless all who are willing to work are permitted to do so to the extent of their reasonable capability and desire.

"There is a shortage of labor in this country at the present time, on the farms, the railroads, the ships, in the shops, the factories, the mines, the offices. Production even up to present capacity cannot be secured unless more workmen are employed. And for the building of increased productive capacity and for the operation of the same additional men must be secured.

Demands Fair Deal.

"The weakest spot in our situation is lack of sufficient production of the things that are vital to the life and strength of armies, which might be obtained except for the scarcity of labor. It would be unwise, nay, unpardonable, if this shortage shall not promptly be overcome. This question is at present of commanding import."

He emphasized this importance at length and reiterated his already known attitude in favor of fair dealing for labor and continued:

"The precarious conditions compel the United States to do everything within its power to bring the war to a speedy and victorious close. We insist our soldiers shall not be placed in the trenches or on the firing line unless and until they are completely hardened, trained, and equipped and that they shall always be furnished with sufficient supplies to protect them and preserve their health.

"The fathers and mothers of this country have given their sons in defense of our beloved land. These men are entitled to every practicable effort on our part to assist them, and this without one moment of unnecessary delay. Efficiency, abundance, and promptness will save millions of men and billions of money."

With this he launched his judgment of the method that should be employed at once to relieve the scarcity of labor.

Would Import Labor.

"To the extent needed for the purposes named," he said, "the United States should immediately, under proper conditions and reasonable restrictions, draw from the islands of the sea and from oriental countries enough men, including soldiers and sailors, to meet every emergency.

"There would be no difficulty in obtaining within a short period large numbers of strong, healthy, intelligent, loyal men for civil or even for military duty and the number could be increased from time to time, as required. All who are acquainted with the facts know that we need more men and can get them if we are so disposed. If legislation is requisite, congress should act without delay."

He indicated plainly his belief that the importation should include the Chinese.

"There may be," he said, "there already have been, objections to the admission of certain nationalities, even temporarily and under carefully considered restrictions. These have been persistent, especially by foreigners who heretofore have settled in this country.

"But the thing to do first is to win the war—to stop the spilling of blood, the destruction of the lives and health of our noble and loyal men and the unjustified depletion of our resources. We can discuss and properly decide other questions later. If we now delay we may not have the opportunity to consider the other matters."

Considerable Optimism.

His optimism extended to cover the state of affairs at Washington. After emphasizing the unqualified necessity of coördinated administration, he said:

"It seems apparent that such an organization and system as have been suggested are being perfected. The people of this country are confidently expecting it and would not be satisfied with less.

"Presumably those in authority are taking counsel of the ablest and most experienced men in order to reach decision and determine action. Advice from the wisest and most experienced, whether adopted or rejected, is of the highest importance in any great organization."

Provide for Peace.

Reaching the after-peace part of his address Mr. Gary emphasized repeatedly the part played in the war by commercial competition and the necessity for protecting the commercial position and opportunity of the United States at all times.

"They are sure to do it and we must do it," was the substance of this argument.

"American industry," he continued, "must be protected, not unfairly, not to the prejudice of the general public, nor to the point of permitting abuse or oppression of any interest, but to the limits of reason and honesty, all things being considered.

"Laws which will secure just prices to the consumers, reasonable profits to the producers and to the transportation companies, and fair wages to the workmen, all based on inquiry and study, should be the aim."

He declared in favor of a merchant marine following the war, protected by a navy sufficient for all parts of the world.

Asks Aid to Business.

He also spoke for a "constructive policy" on the part of the government toward big business—toward "concentrated wealth, integration of industry, large units, big and capable organizations"—and toward the railroads. In the latter connection he contended that increases in tariffs sufficient to permit their developing in trackage, terminal facilities, and equipment to meet their needs, which, he held, are pressing.

He argued that Germany's policy toward industry had given it an immense advantage over the United States.

"During the last decade or longer," he said, "in varying degrees, the policy of the United States has not been favorable to conditions which, at present, are deemed wise, proper, and necessary."

The final point of his argument was that all war expenditures should be governed—without interfering with their military efficiency—in a manner best calculated to meet the needs of business and the whole people's well-being after the war.

Belgians in Secret Society Combat Terrorism of Kaiser

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—The Belgian legation made public today a statement on German terrorism, the national spirit, and hunger and suffering in Belgium, prepared by a Belgian civilian, who has just escaped from the country.

The whole nation, he declared, has become a huge secret society, its members seeking to frustrate and defeat the invaders in every possible manner. Patriots are shot, he said, every day, and every measure of brutality and cunning is practiced against the inhabitants.

"Belgium and northern France happen to be the civilian front in the west. This front has, as you know, its casualties like the other. Patriots are shot, literally, every day—there is an average of thirty death sentences a month. They belong to every class and every party.

Many Prominent Men Killed.

"Among the killed there is one deputy, one burgomaster, many people belonging to the professional classes, and, of course, many more workmen and peasants, including women and children. So far, that is all we know, for Von Falkenhausen, the new governor, has ceased to publish the names of his victims, seeing that, instead of terrorizing their compatriots, it only stirred their zeal to emulate them.

"Among the men imprisoned or deported to Germany are many well known names; at least ten deputies and senators, no less than fifteen burgomasters and aldermen, several judges, and some eminent professors. The post of burgomaster of Brussels is particularly dangerous. M. Max is still in a German cell, and his successor, M. Lemennier, and the alderman Jacquemain have followed him to prison also.

Only Law Is German Rule.

"Such is the fate of all those who openly or secretly oppose German rule; no matter whether they are right or wrong. The only law in the country is dictated by the German tribunals. Even those who do not belong to the various organizations which help the young men to cross the frontier to join the army, circulate forbidden papers, or manage to send news abroad are still exposed every day to the most severe sentences.

"The consequence is that thousands of men and a great number of women are engaged in some secret work and that all the spies of Germany have not been able to check their activity. I have heard people wonder how, after so many arrests, our organizations are able to go on with their work. There is a very simple explanation. For every man or woman arrested two others offer to take their places. The whole nation has become a huge secret society."

SWEDEN SEEKS ALAND ISLANDS IN PEACE TERMS

Hopes to Remove Menace When Bolsheviki and Germans Agree.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.
[SPECIAL CABLE TO CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 5.—As a result of Russia's debacle in the little Baltic archipelago, which Napoleon more than a century ago called "foreposts of Stockholm," it seems more and more likely, if not absolutely, to revert to Sweden, at least certainly to cease to be a menace to Sweden.

Despite cautious phrases of Prime Minister Eden S. Long, a declaration of Sweden's expectations concerning Aland islands, it is perfectly apparent that Sweden is determined to play a part in any general Baltic readjustment, but more especially to lift the obsession of a century long nightmare which Russian occupation of the Alands caused it. It has never forgotten how in 1809 Cossacks, galloping across the ice from the Alands, plundered near Stockholm, and it means that nothing like that shall happen again.

Means to Settle Question.

Sweden intends the Alands question shall figure in the deliberations of either the current Russo-German peace conference or in the general peace conference following the war, and how sincere is that intention is indicated by the fact that the cautious tone of the prime minister's declaration is resented.

The Stockholm's Dagblad comments: "Beautiful words and weakness."

The Swedish opinion on this question is so emphatic that it is pretty certain the spot on the map of the upper Baltic will change color with the end of the world war, and as the islands represented by that spot command the Bothnian gulf and a vast part of Sweden's pulp deliveries by water, the change will constitute an important bit of world history.

Treaty of 1856.

Sweden lost the Alands to Russia at the same time it lost Finland. A striking historical coincidence is that these islands now figuring in the peace deliberations were the scene of a peace conference between representatives of Peter the Great and Charles XII. That conference was suspended owing to Charles' sudden death.

POWDER MAKER NABBED BY U. S. ON TWO CHARGES

Bitterly condemning England and all out of joint with the United States war policy, Herbert Bachmann was drawing down a salary as expert chemist in a plant making high explosives, in Gary. Uncle Sam, learning this, reached out and grabbed him.

When he was arraigned before Judge Landis yesterday Bachmann, also accused of claiming to be 31 years old, while only 30, to avoid the draft, started to explain, saying: "When the United States declared war on Germany——"

"The United States never declared war," replied Judge Landis, with vigor. "Germany had been at war with the United States for two years before this nation, by resolution, finally recognized the fact. Suppose some one had been punching you in the stomach for two years and you finally hit back—would you be declaring war?"

So saying he continued the case of the chemist to Tuesday to permit the government to bring some more witnesses. Fellow workmen in the laboratories of the Pittsburgh Testing company at Gary will be among these.

GERMAN WOMAN PICKS UP FAGOT; FINED, THEN JAIL

Another Is Forced to Give Up Her Farm; Husband in War.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Interesting incidents of war time in Germany recorded in German newspapers and translated by the committee on public information include the following:

"Bremer Buerger-Zeitung, Sept. 25, 1917:

"A soldier's wife who had gathered wood in the common forest of Waldkirch near Freiburg in Breisgau was sentenced for the offense in the following terms:

"'Mrs. Clara Ganter, on June 13, 1917, has removed from the common forest of Waldkirch, section 1, 23, one fagot of dry fir twigs of the value of 10 pfennig. In punishment thereof she is sentenced to a fine of 1 mark and one day's imprisonment.'

Mother of Four Children.

"The husband of the culprit has been for three years at the front, she herself has four small children to support in the direst poverty. Similar reports of punishment should be reported in greater number. Our bureaucracy understands how to employ this period of shortage of wood and coal on a large scale for the benefit of the treasury."

"Leipzinger Volkszeitung, Oct. 15, 1917: A sample of the fashion after which bloated landlords treat the wives of soldiers has been brought to our attention from Upper Langenau in Silesia. One of the hired men of Dr. Mueller's agricultural estate has been for a long time at the front. His wife, who had worked alongside her husband before the war after the usual custom, remained in the ranks of the field hands and accordingly retained her farm cottage.

Chased from House.

Oct. 1 this woman got the following letter:

"'The undersigned bailiff of the estate hereby gives you notice as of this date to the field service for Jan. 1, 1918. On that day you are to give up your house. The work which you are doing on the farm does not compensate the farm for the loss which accrues to it through the continued support of your family. Look out for yourself away from this farm, your house is needed for other use.'"

22 ARE EXECUTED BY KAISER'S AIDS

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 5.—Twenty-two person, among them four from Antwerp, eight from Ghent, and a Dutch skipper, were executed by the Germans at Ghent Dec. 20 for alleged espionage, according to the Telegraaf's correspondent at Flushing. Three other Hollanders were condemned to three, four, and ten years' imprisonment respectively. A large number of Belgians also received long terms of imprisonment and many others still are incarcerated at Ghent awaiting trial.

FIND AUSTRIANS CLOTHED IN RAGS ON ITALIAN LINE

Prisoners of French Tired of War; Say Germany Will Fight On.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Jan. 4.—[Delayed.]—The officer commanding the 1,400 Austrian prisoners captured in the recent French success on Monte Tomba gave the correspondent an opportunity today of going among them and talking freely with officers and men on war conditions and what the enemy still could do in carrying on the struggle.

A more miserable lot of human beings would be difficult to imagine. The officers were in even worse condition than the men. Their clothing was ragged and the tinseled ornamentation on the uniforms was covered with rust.

The officers were unkempt and had not been shaved for a week. Their red hands looked like pieces of raw beefsteak. None had overcoats, as all were wearing light trench uniforms when the French swept around them. Yet despite this misery they put on a surprisingly bold front and any one thinking they are crushed is closing his eyes to facts.

Prisoners of All Ages.

All ages were seen among the prisoners. There was a boy of 18 and a man of 50 with a gray beard. A coating of trench mud made them look worse than they really were, for they had stout boots, leggings, and overcoats. Some had shawls and blankets. Their headgear consisted of battered helmets and caps with heavy hoods.

The correspondent was told by the prisoners that the method of the French attack was an entirely new experience for them, as they seldom had undergone such murderous artillery fire. Most of the men were Moravians, Dalmatians, and Galicians. The sudden French charge after the artillery fire bowled them over before they had any chance to offer resistance.

Concerning the war, they all expressed themselves as heartily sick of it and said that the Germans were keeping the others in the fight.

"We have not had warm food for days," said their spokesman, a stocky young Dalmatian officer.

Fuel Hard to Get.

"And our own French soldiers did not have warm food for nine days after they arrived here," the commandant said. He explained that fuel was almost impossible to get, and with no coal and little wood hot food was almost out of the question.

Asked about the war, the officers gave America's entry into it as an instance that all the world was against the central powers. One officer said the food supply was running low, but it was better in Hungary than in Austria.

EAST TO REDUCE TRAIN SERVICE FOR PASSENGERS

Frees Engines and Crews Today to Help Move Freight Cars.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—To free locomotives and crews for the more important freight transportation, 20 per cent of the through passenger trains on the eastern railroads will be discontinued tomorrow by approval of Director General McAdoo. The running schedule of others will be reduced to lower speed to facilitate the movement of freight trains.

This policy, announced tonight by the director general, will be gradually extended to affect train service throughout the country. Fast trains between New York and Chicago and St. Louis, and between Chicago and southern and western points probably will be the next to be affected.

Individual railroads will take the initiative in suggesting curtailments, but these will be approved by the director general in most cases.

Retain Parlor Cars.

In approving the new passenger schedules of the Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio, which go into effect tomorrow, and of the New Haven, which become effective Jan. 12, Mr. McAdoo ordered a number of modifications resulting in retention of more parlor cars than the railroads had planned.

Mr. McAdoo appealed to the public in a statement tonight to refrain from travel as much as possible, but promised that no commuter trains or others necessary for proper maintenance of business lines in cities will be eliminated.

Congress next week will take up the railroad bills introduced yesterday, following President Wilson's message on government operation, and discussion today among members of both houses indicated a marked difference of opinion over whether government control should extend only for a definite period after the end of the war or indefinitely until congress orders otherwise.

Priority Orders Suspended.

Coal continued to go forward today ahead of other freight. In answer to a number of inquiries from coal operators and dealers concerning the status of former priority orders, Fuel Administrator Garfield telegraphed this explanation:

"By direction of Director General McAdoo, all priority orders heretofore issued with respect to transportation have been suspended and no further priorities may be claimed thereunder. Further orders for priorities will be issued in emergencies under Mr. McAdoo's direction as occasion may require."

Mr. McAdoo took further steps to prevent friction in the government's dealings with railroad labor, by arranging with William H. Johnston, president of the International Association of Machinists, to call off several minor strikes of machinists until the railroad administration can formulate a definite wage and labor policy.

Use Rivers and Canals.

The director general also announced that as soon as the railroad bill is passed he will take steps to use more intensively the country's navigable rivers and canals.

"I am very much pleased," he said, "that provision is made in the pending railroad bill for use of the inland waterways of the United States in connection with the railroad systems now under government control. The proper use of these waterways will largely increase the transportation facilities of the country, and if the pending bill is passed giving authority to the president to expend money for the development of transportation facilities on the inland waterways every effort will be made to utilize them to the full extent of their capacity."

BRIDE AND BRIDEGROOM

Society Attends Wedding of Grandson of Former President of Northwestern.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Hughitt Frost

MR. HUGHITT'S GRANDSON WEDS MISS EDWARDS

Uncle Is Best Man at Ceremony in Trinity Church.

Miss Helen Rexford Edwards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilbur Edwards of 5345 Kimbark avenue, was married yesterday afternoon to Marvin Hughitt Frost, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Frost of Lake Forest and grandson of Marvin Hughitt, former president of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad. The ceremony took place in Trinity Episcopal church. Bishop Charles P. Anderson, who has officiated at the baptism, confirmation, and graduation of the bride, read the ceremony.

The bride's gown was of white satin trimmed in chantilly lace and her bouquet was of sweet peas and lilies of the valley. Mrs. James G. Kellogg, who was matron of honor, wore orchid chiffon made over flesh colored satin, and the maid of honor, Miss Margaret Frost of Lake Forest, a sister of the bridegroom, wore a gown of pink chiffon. Both wore dark blue tulle hats and carried pink roses. Miss Virginia Frost, another sister of the bridegroom, was flower maid and wore pink georgette crêpe with hat to match and carried a basket of roses.

Uncle Is Best Man.

Marvin Hughitt Jr., uncle of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers were Harry Dunbaugh, Charles S. Packer, Sidney French of Grand Rapids, James Fales of Lake Forest, and Lieut. Louis F. Swift Jr. and Lieut. Frederick Watson of Camp Grant. There was a reception at the Blackstone hotel after the church ceremony, which was attended by many friends of the two families.

Mr. Frost and his bride have gone to the northern woods for their honeymoon, where Marvin Hughitt Jr. has a camp. They will spend much of their time hunting.

The bride's going away costume was a hunting suit of dark tweed. Mr. and Mrs. Frost probably will live at Rockford.

Wilson-Smith Nuptials.

Miss Mildred Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Smith, 1462 Ridge avenue, Evanston, was married to Lieut. Myron Henry Wilson Jr. of the Three Hundred and Twenty-second field artillery, stationed at Chillicothe, O., in St. Mark's Episcopal church, Evanston, last night. The Rev. Arthur Rogers officiated.

GERMAN BINS EMPTY

Populace Clamors for Coal, but Kaiser Asks People to Accept Privation to Help Munition Factories.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 5.—The German coal bins are empty. The Berlin government's only reply to the frozen cry of the populace for coal, wood—anything to keep them warm—is a proclamation saying relief is impossible, according to official government advices received here today.

The kaiser has called on his people to "accept this privation also, in the consciousness that thereby they are giving our soldiers at the front the things they most need—guns and shells." It is declared that without civilian sacrifice of coal the "Italian victory would have been impossible."

Despite this, the Austro-German populace is becoming increasingly restive and angry. The Berlin landlords' association has so advised the government and counseled it to "go easy."

The Austro-German coal crisis is just like that in this country—broken down transportation. Most of the coal produced goes to munition factories.

MRS. LAURA AHLF HAS MARRIAGE OF 1912 ANNULLED

Action Based on Law Forbidding Wedding on Heels of Divorce.

Mrs. Laura Lund Ahlf, niece of A. J. Earling, retired president of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, has had her marriage to Harry T. Ahlf annulled. The decree was handed down yesterday by Judge Joseph H. Fitch in the Superior court.

The marriage was pronounced illegal by Judge Fitch and annulled because Mrs. Ahlf had not been divorced a year at the time the ceremony took place.

Mrs. Ahlf was divorced from Charles F. Lund on Dec. 18, 1911, and on Aug. 10, 1912, she and Harry T. Ahlf went to the Earlings' home in Oconomowoc, Wis., and were married.

"Why did you go outside of the state?" Judge Fitch asked.

"My relatives in Oconomowoc told us they would give us a wonderful wedding there," Mrs. Ahlf testified.

"You did not go out of the state to evade the law, did you?" questioned the judge.

"No."

"The marriage will be annulled," ordered the judge.

BOOTMAKER IN BAD AGAIN.

William Lawrence Sauer, society bootmaker and secretary of the D. Sauer company, was arraigned before Judge Landis yesterday on a charge of failing to register. When Sauer told the court that he didn't have any lawyer and didn't need one the case was continued to tomorrow. Sauer is also accused of making anti-American utterances.

MANY RAILROADS LIKELY TO CLOSE CHICAGO OFFICES

In keeping with the government's policy to eliminate competition between railroads and to economize through the reduction of duplication, it is probable that branch offices maintained in foreign territory will be closed.

The Southern Railway system has already discontinued its branch office at 35 West Jackson boulevard, and it is said that several other outside roads will close their Chicago offices soon.

All of the railroads are trying to evolve some plan whereby they can retain their soliciting freight and passenger agents on the pay rolls. With competition between roads eliminated there is no longer any need for these men, of whom there are thousands employed, and unless the government steps in it is probable that all will be forced to hunt new jobs.

"There is little to be done towards the improvement of railroad conditions in the west," A. C. Johnson, general traffic manager for the Northwestern, said yesterday.

"Everything in the Chicago district is in excellent shape and throughout the west the conditions are almost ideal, because so much already has been done."

362,941 Soldiers Take $3,105,776,500 Insurance

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—Secretary McAdoo announced today that 362,941 insurance policies, aggregating $3,105,776,500 and averaging $8,557 a policy, had been taken out by American soldiers and sailors under the war insurance law. The secretary also called attention to the fact that Feb. 12 is the final day upon which applications for insurance may be received by the government.

PICK JUDGE FOR MICHIGAN CITY MAYORALTY ROW

Michigan City, Ind., Jan. 5.—Word was received tonight from the Indiana delegation in Washington to the effect that the president has formally declined to take a hand in the alien mayoralty situation here.

Judge J. H. Gillett of Hammond, formerly a member of the Indiana Supreme court, after being appointed today, tonight refused to try the injunction case brought by Mayor Martin T. Krueger to prevent Mayor Elect Fred O. Miller, enemy alien, or Samuel J. Taylor, defeated candidate, from taking office Monday noon.

The matter will be certified to Gov. Goodrich, who will appoint a judge.

Krueger bases his petition on charges that Miller is not a citizen and was elected by the votes of 850 enemy aliens.

Miller declares nothing but death can now prevent him from taking office. He laughs at the effort being made in the state court to keep him out.

Mayor Krueger, acting upon the suggestion of Federal Judge Anderson, will refuse to turn over the office to Miller, but Miller says he and the entire Democratic ticket elected in November will take charge of the city affairs on scheduled time.

Miller says it is his intention to call the new city council into special session Monday night to wipe out some of the black spots the late Republican council put on the city in the last few weeks.

Fights 20 Years and Gets $30,000 on $1,000,000 Suit

George Nester sued the Diamond Match company for $1,000,000 twenty years ago, and the case was settled yesterday, when Nester was awarded $30,000 by federal Judge Sanborn.

U. S. MAY SEIZE MEAT INDUSTRY, HINT AT INQUIRY

Examiner Heney Infers the Government Must Take Action.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 5.—The United States government may take over the meat industry of the country in order to control three principal necessaries of war times—heat, coal, and transportation. This was plainly indicated at today's session of the federal trade commission here.

An official connected with the commission which has been investigating meat conditions here said that the government intended to seize all the packing and allied industries, and Francis J. Heney, who is examining witnesses, did not deny that the plan was being considered in Washington.

Course of Action Is Plain.

"The course the investigation is taking is plain enough," said Mr. Heney. "Draw your own conclusions. I must absolutely decline to be quoted in connection with the matter. It is up to the federal trade commission. I have been ordered to conduct the investigation along the lines taken. The government will do what it sees fit."

"The federal government will assume control of the business through a receivership," said a member of the commission who disclosed the purpose of the countrywide meat investigation now in progress. "I cannot be quoted. The meat supply is to the nation what the railroads are to transportation and it has been conclusively proved that regulation at this time is necessary."

Dealer Is Examined.

Roger J. Maynes, a local dealer, was put through a long series of questioning tending to illustrate how the government could operate the meat industry to keep down prices and conserve the supply. Maynes testified that he had already placed his ideas at the disposal of Washington and asserted that federal meat inspection should first be done away with.

Prices could be lowered and 25 per cent of the cattle and meat supply of the country could be conserved," said Maynes, who was subpœnaed as an expert, "if the government were immediately to fix prices every week."

Lid Tilting Saloon Man Refused Citizenship

Men who run saloons and violate the law are not material for the making of good citizens, Judge Landis decided yesterday in refusing naturalization papers to Samuel Loizzo, 321 West Sixtieth place. Loizzo admitted he had kept open after hours and in the admitting lost his plea for citizenship in the United States.

COAL, OIL, WIRES CONTROL BY U. S. SOUGHT IN BILLS

Iron, Steel and Radio Also May Be Taken Over Soon.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Legislation to take over all public utilities, including coal mines, oil fields, and electrical agencies of communication are being considered by members of congress.

Suggestions by Fuel Administrator Garfield at the senate coal investigation for government control of coal mines and oil fields are taking shape in legislation that may be proposed Monday. The house committee on mines and mining will meet then to discuss this matter and determine if action by the government is necessary.

Representative Aswell of Louisiana has introduced a bill to take possession of telephone and telegraph lines. It has been referred to the committee on interstate and foreign commerce.

Wants Fuel Oil Control.

The fuel administrator may be called before the mines and mining committee to present arguments previously made by him. Dr. Garfield wants power along with other authority conferred in the food control bill, to take control especially of fuel oils. He believes the government can effect a saving in gasoline by care in refining and conservation of crude oils. Appropriations may be necessary for construction of additional plants.

Many members believe it will not be necessary to provide for more legislation on the coal situation on account of the authority in the Pomerene amendment for coal control and because of the government operation of railroads. They believe the improved transportation will allay the critical coal situation.

Also Iron and Steel.

Measures to extend the control to iron and steel are already being considered by congress. A bill introduced by Senator Pomerene for this purpose has met with the president's approval. It is highly probable that legislation to control public utilities may be shaped into one bill.

The Aswell bill would authorize the government to take possession of marine cables, radio, telephone, and telegraph agencies and unify them and increase their efficiency.

"The war department is in grave need of trained telegraphers, telephonists, and electrical men," Representative Aswell said. "If the telephones and telegraphs be combined at least 10,000 telegraphers will be released at once for the military service."

Fuel Relief in New York.

New York, Jan. 5.—Warmer weather today gave New York City its first real respite in more than a week from intense suffering caused by severe cold coupled with a critical fuel shortage.

Hope that the coal crisis had been passed, based on reports that ample supplies were being brought to the city on barges from tidewater points, were dampened tonight by statements from fuel administrators warning against too optimistic a view of the situation.

DURHAM WINS U. S. PROMISE TO KEEP CHICAGO IN COAL

Will Accept Half Portion of Smokeless and Use Local.

After four days of conferences with government officials in Washington, Raymond Durham, fuel administrator for Cook county, was successful yesterday in assuring Chicago an adequate supply of coal for the remainder of the winter.

Fuel Administrator Garfield and his aids made an agreement with Mr. Durham that provides for Chicago coal supplies on the following basis:

A continuance of the normal supply of anthracite coal for domestic uses.

Arrangements for a regular supply of anthracite for gas and by-products plants.

A supply of smokeless coal equal to 50 per cent of the normal demand.

The reduction of smokeless coal to be made up by Illinois coal.

Returns to Chicago.

Fuel Administrator Durham returns to Chicago well satisfied with the results of his efforts.

He went to Washington after the word had gone out that the entire supply of smokeless for Chicago was to be cut off and diverted to tidewater. Illinois coal was then being shipped to Minnesota and the northwest. Reduction or suspension of anthracite shipments was threatened.

The fuel administration did not capitulate until today on the question of permitting smokeless coal shipments to go to Chicago. The 50 per cent supply finally obtained was not promised until arrangements could be made for diversion of enough of this coal from tidewater and navy fleet coaling stations to give Chicago half rations.

Get Illinois Coal Here.

Plans were worked out by fuel adminstration officials to assure Chicago an adequate supply of Illinois coal to make up the deficiency of smokeless.

Fuel Administrator Garfield made it plain that all priorities in connection with coal shipments are suspended under the government operation of railroads.

A typical telegram explaining the matter said:

"By direction of Director General McAdoo all priority orders heretofore issued with respect to transportation have been suspended and no further priorities may be claimed thereunder. Future orders for priorities will be issued in emergencies under Mr. McAdoo's direction as occasion may require."

MILITANTS AND FOES CLASH ON SUFFRAGE BILL

Woman's Party Ready to Renew Warfare, House Is Told.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—Threats of the Woman's party to resume militant tactics if the federal constitutional suffrage amendment resolution is not passed and charges that Socialists, pacifists, and pro-Germans would welcome enactment of the amendment for its effect on the war featured today's hearing on the resolution before the house suffrage committee.

Speakers representing the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, including the president, Mrs. James W. Wadsworth Jr., told the committee that those opposing the war want to see the amendment enacted, and in support of their argument presented figures to show that the "Socialist, pacifist, and pro-German vote" had forced woman suffrage on New York state.

Navy Jobs for Women.

Representatives of the Woman's party, who included several women who served jail sentences for picketing the White House, declared that they would resume militant methods unless congress gave the state legislatures an opportunity to pass upon the amendment.

Women can now help design ships for the United States navy. They are eligible for employment as ship draftsmen in the navy yards service and mechanical, marine, engine, and boiler draftsmen in the navy department.

Announce Examinations.

Other jobs for which women have become eligible since the war and for which examinations have been announced are passenger rate clerk, freight rate clerk, and express rate clerk in the depot quartermaster's offices, war department, various other clerkships in the war department, negative cutter in the geological survey, bookkeeper, typewriter, and clerk bookkeeper in the departmental service.

Britain Must Cut Down Beef Eating by One-Half

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Until the situation improves the consumption of beef in England must be reduced at least one-half, according to an official statement concerning the scarcity of meat.

The Daily Mail says meat will be the first food dealt with under Lord Rhondda's compulsory rationing plan. Butter and margarine will follow meat, and other foods will be added as they become more scarce.

All the chief foodstuffs, it adds, will be rationed by April.

December Sale of Thrift Stamps Here Is $344,000

Thrift stamps and war savings certificates to a value of $344,000 were sold in the Chicago postoffice and the 310 substations under its control in December, according to figures announced yesterday. The selling of these stamps began on Dec. 3. The quota Illinois is expected to take is $125,000,000.

U. S. TO BUILD BIG POWDER PLANT.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—The war department will establish a powder plant at Charleston, W. Va., costing between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000 and employing thousands of hands. Construction work will start soon.

Higher Grain Inspection Rates Approved by Board

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 5.—The Illinois public utilities commission today approved new rates of grain inspection in Chicago and East St. Louis. In the future the rate in Chicago will be $1 a car where moisture tests are necessary and 75 cents a car without moisture tests. The rate at East St. Louis will be 90 cents where moisture tests are made and 65 cents where no tests are made. The old rates at both places were 50 cents on incoming cars and 50 cents per 1,000 bushels on outgoing cars.

Mobilize the Children

THE TORCH OF LIBERTY

WAR Savings and Thrift Stamps give every child in America a chance to join that vast army of thrift which the nation have to back up the men in the trenches.

The boy or girl who invests in a Thrift Stamp may be lending the Government the very money that will supply our brave boys with the materials necessary to physical strength, irresistible courage and a glorious victory.

Even the baby in its crib may be serving its country if its pennies are invested in Thrift Stamps instead of being hidden away in some toy bank.

Parents, encourage your children to serve and save for their country. You will be teaching them a lesson in Patriotism and, at the same time, a lesson in Thrift. Their little savings, perhaps small individually, will be vast in the aggregate. They will be invested in the world's best security—baby government bonds.

These stamps can never depreciate, because every postoffice in the land stands ready to redeem them at full face value, plus interest, at any time.

Put the fund you are saving for your child's education into War Savings Stamps. Interest will be mounting up at 4 per cent, compounded quarterly, while the child grows, and your money, at the same time, will help to keep this country worth living in. $4.12 invested now will be $5 in five years.

Munitions

The supply of munitions is still inadequate. Hundreds of plants that are now producing non-essentials must turn in and manufacture necessities. The need for added facilities—increased production—has been recognized as vital by the government and the commandeering of private plants not at present making munitions has been suggested. Every plant, factory and workshop will be called upon to do its bit to promote the progress of the war. In short, the Government is anxious to give American manufacturers all the business they can handle and assist them with the work.

There are millions in capital lying idle; thousands of plants, misusing their energies and armies of labor engaged upon luxuries and non-essentials. These resources must and will eventually be utilized by the Governemnt.

There is no dearth of patriotism among manufacturers. The contrary is the case. As a class, the captains of industry have signified their willingness to help. But many are at a loss how to proceed. Government contracts have had a horror for certain individual manufacturers because of the red tape and restrictions appended. However, conditions have changed. War's necessities will strip war contracts of many needless restrictions.

Over night the railroads and the coal supply have been commandeered. Plants are being taken over. Coal and shipping privileges will be denied those plants not engaged on war work. Every plant must make SOMETHING essential. Sooner or later this condition will be forced upon us. It is better to make that for which your plant is fitted now than be compelled later to disorganize or rearrange your facilities to build that which is foreign to your own line upon the irrevocable order of the Government.

We offer you the benefit of a war-long experience in the preparation and equipment of plants; in the production, inspection and shipment of munitions and in the efficient management of munitions manufactures from the securing of orders to the collection of payments. A staff of British-French inspectors is at your instant disposal to assist you with every problem arising from war orders from their inception to completion. We give you an opportunity to profit by the experiences of the British and French munitions makers and enable you to avoid their mistakes.

Consultation is invited. Detailed analysis of the situation will be mailed on request.

U. OF C. SCIENTIST MAKES OVER WAR CHEMICAL TRADE

Ten Tons of Explosive Material Shipped in One Day.

A shipment of about ten tons of thorium nitrate, made yesterday by the Lindsay Light company, will have an important bearing on the manufacture of explosives for war uses by the allies of the United States. This rare chemical, which is produced in Chicago in larger amounts than at any other point, is used for gas mantles. By using mantles a gas with a large amount of heat units and comparatively few illuminating units can produce light. This liberates toluene, one of the illuminants in gas, for the manufacture of trinitrotoluene, commonly known as T. N. T. This is the explosive that destroyed Halifax, Nova Scotia. The shipment is the biggest of its kind ever made from Chicago.

This country's supply of thorium formerly came from Germany, together with cerium, which is also used in gas mantles. Both are extracted from a sand that is brought from India. The process that is used was developed at the University of Chicago under the direction of Dr. H. N. McCoy, who worked two years on the problem.

Rare Metals Recovered.

Under direction of Dr. McCoy radium, vanadium, and uranium, other rare metals, are being taken out of ores by the Carnotite Reduction company, at 2600 Iglehart court. The entire annual output of radium in the United States, in the form of radium bromide, could be put in two tablespoons, but it is worth $3,000,000. A large percentage of this is produced in Chicago from ores found in Colorado. The vanadium is used for toughening steel.

The manner in which these novel industries were developed in Chicago is one of the few romances of the laboratories. Dr. McCoy, originator of the processes that are used, held a professorship for sixteen years at the University of Chicago.

"During the course of some purely theoretical work," said Dr. McCoy yesterday, "I needed some thorium. The salts of this metal are what make a gas mantle glow and the only source of supply was some old gas mantles. I extracted the thorium and then we worked with some of the sand called monazite, that is found only in India.

Two Years on Problem.

"The problem proved interesting and it took us two years to solve it. We had no idea of using the process except in research work.

"Soon after we had developed the process war broke out. Germany had furnished the entire supply, but we had a process that we thought better than that used by the Germans. It was necessary to provide thorium. We had to put our process to practical use, so I went to making it. We have done similar work with radium, uranium, and vanadium. Radium and uranium are always found together."

William D. Kerfoot

April 16, 1837. Jan. 5, 1918.

[From a photograph taken ten years ago.]

W. D. KERFOOT, PIONEER REALTY DEALER, IS DEAD

Was Prominent in the Development of Chicago.

William D. Kerfoot, identified since early days with the real estate and business development of Chicago, died yesterday in the family residence at 1425 Astor street. He was 80 years old.

Mr. Kerfoot was born in Lancaster City, Pa., April 16, 1837. He came to Chicago in 1854 and entered the real estate business, remaining here with the exception of the period between 1856 and 1861, which he spent in St. James' college, Hagerstown, Md.

He was a striking character in the days following the fire of 1871, when he constructed a small frame building, the first to rise from the ruins of the downtown district. Upon this was placed a rudely lettered sign: "All gone but wife, children, and energy."

He immediately set about the construction of the first substantial business block after the fire, and the desk, which he only lately quitted, stands practically upon the same spot it occupied before the fire.

In 1837 Mr. Kerfoot became president of the Chicago real estate board and always remained a dominant factor in its affairs. He was a member of the board of directors of the World's fair of 1893 and was city controller during the administration of Carter H. Harrison in 1899-'01.

The funeral arrangements have not been definitely announced, but it is expected the services will be in St. James' church, of which Mr. Kerfoot had been a vestryman for many years, with interment in Graceland.

FIGHT ON LOAN SHARKS STARTS AT CAMP GRANT

Orders Aim at Vultures Who Seek to Prey on Soldiers.

Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—A line of first defense against commercial vultures was established today in every unit of the Eighty-sixth division. The pent up indignation of veteran officers, fostered through the constant overcharging met with by men in uniform at home and abroad, exploded when a telegram was received at headquarters from Washington warning selective soldiers against loan sharks intent upon securing the Liberty loan bonds purchased penny by penny by the nation's fighting men.

Loan Sharks Active.

Col. H. M. Lord of the quartermaster corps, officer in charge of the army Liberty loan campaign, issued the warning. His departmental investigation shows that soldiers in the various army camps are being made a center for the operation of unscrupulous civilians who offer to loan from $50 to $75 on the Liberty bonds and charge rates of interest as high as 10 per cent.

Orders against the practice have been posted on every company bulletin board in camp and the men are advised that any reputable bank will give the market price for bonds and should loan on them at a reasonable rate of interest.

Horses for Artillery.

Chicago men in the One Hundred and Sixty-first artillery brigade, commanded by Col. Phillip R. Ward, are swinging into the task ahead of them with renewed enthusiasm following the issue of fourteen hundred mounts to batteries in the brigade. Without a single piece of ordnance to give the men a taste of real action, the artillery regiments have trudged through endless infantry drill and "school of soldier" until even the proverbial army mule is hailed with joy by cannoneers who have given up nearly all hope of ever seeing a cannon.

Lieut. Col. Edwin A. Hickman reported every student present or accounted for this morning when the third officers' training school was officially opened. For the first time in months detachments of men in civilian clothing marched and counter marched on camp roads or lugged heavy suit cases through the snow to the newly opened school quarters. All of the men were assigned to their organizations today and given the final physical examination by army surgeons.

DAUGHTERS OF BRITISH EMPIRE.

The following officers of Prince of Wales chapter, Daughters of the British Empire were elected for 1918 at the annual business meeting yesterday: Regent, Mrs. George Cooke-Adams; first vice regent, Mrs. William J. Shank; second vice regent, Dr. Sarah Brayton; third vice regent, Mrs. John Williamson; treasurer, Mrs. A. P. Hyatt; recording secretary, Miss May D. Collins; corresponding secretary, Miss Mary A. Kiddie; standard bearer, Mrs. Luther Whittemore; directors, Mrs. M. H Chapman, Mrs. A. D Browne, Mrs. Dudley R. Welch, and Mrs. Roland Kay.

ILLINOIS GUARD DIVISION NEEDS 6,000 MORE MEN

Camp Logan, Houston, Tex., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—The training of the Prairie division is now well under way. The division staff is well satisfied with the progress made by the men and with the spirit of the instructors. But there is one thing lacking—that is, enough men to fill the division and put it on a war footing.

About 6,000 men are needed at once. Up to the present time there were more vacancies, but the motorization of the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth field artillery added about 400 men to the strength of the division, since a motorized artillery regiment does not have the same strength as a horse organization.

These men are wanted at once. A division officer pointed out the folly of filling the division just as it gets on the transports for the front.

According to the reports from Washington in the last few days, it does not seem that there will be a course of training in France when the division does get across. Therefore the 6,000 new men, untrained and undisciplined in the ways of the Prairie division, would weaken the whole organization.

A grenade contest for the men who have been in the hand grenade school for the last month was held this morning. Gen. George Bell Jr. and his staff were present. The general expressed deep satisfaction at the work of the men.

APPROVE PLANS FOR SAILORS AND SOLDIERS' CLUB

Architect's plans for remodeling the five story building, 205-207 West Washington street, for use as a service club for soldiers and sailors were approved yesterday by the war recreation board of Illinois, which will manage the club. Approval of the lease, as signed by Clifford W. Barnes, chairman of the board, and John J. Mitchell, treasurer, also was voted. The work of making improvements on the building and equipping it will proceed at once.

Members of the Commercial club, the Chicago club and the Union League club have declared their intention of giving the club their financial support. It is estimated that $12,000 will be spent on remodeling the building, that $5,000 will be spent on furniture and other equipment, and that the recreation board will expend $60,000 for maintenance up to the time of the expiration of the lease, April 30, 1920.

The architect's plans provide for lockers in the basement, a reception lobby, a reception room for women, a connecting lobby joining the club to a private dining room. On the second floor will be a general lounge, with player piano, Victrolas, and a stage.

The third floor will house a library, reading room, and writing room, billiards, pool, and other games. The fifth floor will be devoted to lockers, shower baths, a barber shop, and a gymnasium.

DRAINAGE BOARD VOTES U. S. CASH TO END LAWSUIT

Asks That 520,000 Feet Flow Be Given Approval.

Chicago's sanitary district trustees yesterday took a big step toward the compromising of all of the differences over the amount of water that may be drawn from Lake Michigan that exist between the United States government, the sanitary district, and the lake carriers, and to end pending litigation.

The board passed an ordinance—and by unanimous vote, which is somewhat significant in itself—tendering to the United States $475,000. This sum would be spent by the federal government to build compensating or contracting works in the St. Clair and Niagara rivers. The offer is based upon a report made to the war department by federal engineers, that such works will preserve the lake levels of Lake Michigan, Lake Huron, and Lake Erie, furnish a perpetual safeguard against the lowering of such lake levels to a point where it would be detrimental to lake navigation, and remove the only objection that the government makes to the use of as much Lake Michigan water by the sanitary district as is necesasry to protect the health of Chicago.

Asks Increase of Flow.

In return for its cash the sanitary district expects to get an unqualified permit, by act of congress, for the immediate use of 520,000 cubic feet of water a minute through the main channel, with provison that additional water may be withdrawn, up to 720,000 cubic feet, as the population increases, the latter figure being the maximum that can be handled by the channel and works as at present constructed. It would care for a population of approximately three and three-quarters millions and satisfies Chicago health necessities, it is estimated, until 1932.

To close the deal prompt congressional action is necessary. The Illinois delegation in congress will be asked this week by the sanitary board to unite in a movement to have congress approve of the proposition by including an amendment in the pending national water power bill.

The failure of congress to grant Chicago's request may mean the wrecking of the present sanitary district system, limitation of the flow to 250,000 cubic feet, as now sought by the injunction suit of the federal government that has been argued and which awaits a decision from Judge Landis, and the construction then of an auxiliary sewage disposal system at a cost estimated as high as $100,000,000 by the sanitary district engineers and officials.

To Make Permit Law.

The compromise tendered by the ordinance adopted yesterday contemplates the abrupt termination of the government's suit before Judge Landis and congressional legislation that will convert into an actual statute the permit of the secretary of war, under which the sanitary district has been acting since it reversed the current of the Chicago river and turned in the lake waters in 1901.

Yesterday's ordinance does not admit the contention of the government that the lake levels have been reduced by the sanitary district's withdrawal of water. It does admit that the drainage canal is now drawing 520,000 cubic feet per minute, in compliance with the requirement of the Illinois statute creating the district, and contends that such quantity is absolutely necessary to dilute Chicago's sewage and conserve the city's health.

The compromise ordinance is based upon the report of the 1914 board of engineers, of which the senior member was Gen. William M. Black, now chief of engineers of the United States army.

Take Engineers' Word.

The sanitary trustees, as the action was explained by Edmund D. Adcock, attorney for the district, simply take the government engineers at their word. The ordinance passed yesterday provides that the $475,000 shall be turned over to the federal government, which shall proceed to build and maintain the works. An item covering the amount, if congress acts favorably, will be included in the annual budget to be adopted this week.

It is understood that the action of the board was precipitated by the La Follette amendment that was offered by the Wisconsin senator to the rivers and harbors bill, last year, and which was inserted by the senate. The La Follette amendment provided that the sanitary district be restricted forthwith to 250,000 cubic feet of water per minute, without awaiting the decision of Judge Landis or considering the health conditions in Chicago. Only the quick work of Congressmen Mann, Madden, Gallagher, and Rainey in the house, it is said, killed the La Follette amendment in conference.

Prepare for Rush Work on Income Tax Returns

Belated income tax blanks, the lack of which has crippled the work of the tax collector's office in Chicago, were shipped out of Washington last night, according to a telegram. It is believed that they will be received on Monday and that from that moment the work of making the returns will be rushed.

Hundreds of automobile owners have assailed the experts in room 551 Federal building with a fire of questions about auto depreciation and when it is allowable. The reply is given that depreciation can be figured on an auto used for business but not for a pleasure car. A doctor's machine, for instance, is considered a business car.

Yet if the doctor uses his car partly for business and partly for pleasure, he can only claim a proportionate depreciation due to its business uses. Another problem which is causing many questions is the matter of charity giving.

Rulings on Charity.

Some charity gifts are deductable and others are not. The paragraph from the law governing the matter follows:

"Contributions or gifts actually made within the year to corporations or associations organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, or educational purposes, or to societies for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, no part of the net income of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual, to an amount not in excess of 15 per centum of the taxpayer's taxable net income as computed without the benefit of this paragraph. Such contributions or gifts shall be allowable as deductions only if verified under rules and regulations prescribed by the commissioner of internal revenue, with the approval of the secretary of the treasury."

Thus it will be seen that the quarter flipped to the beggar or money given to individuals is not to be deducted. Some other questions received by THE TRIBUNE and their answers are as follows:

Q.—I have a clerk in my office where I work myself. I pay the clerk a salary. Can I also deduct a salary for myself? A.—No.

Q.—I am a jewelry man, do my own engraving and repair work, which saves hiring a man. Can I figure a salary for myself? A.—No.

Undertakers Given Margin.

Q.—Can a business man deduct for contributions given to religious and charitable societies? A.—Under certain circumstances. See foregoing.

Q.—Can an undertaker who owns auto hearse, ambulances, and rolling stock deduct for wear and tear? A.—Yes.

Q.—Are there blanks to fill out for this tax? I live in a village outside of Chicago. A.—Yes, ask your banker for them.

Q.—Does a business man or a farmer report whether or not he has over the $2,000 tax? A.—He has to file a report only if he makes more than $2,000 income if married and $1,000 if single. If less, ignore scheduling.

Mother Is Family Head.

Q.—I am single, income about $1,500 a year, live at home, and support aged mother. Another single brother, similar income, also helps. Are we jointly "head of family" and are we both exempt to sum of $2,000 income? A.—Your mother is head of the family. You each get $1,000 exemptions if of age. If under 21 the mother will have to make the return and include both your incomes.

Q.—May the cost of supporting an invalid widowed sister be deducted from an income tax return? A.—No.

Q.—I own a two flat building, leased to tenants, and arrive at the gross income by figuring rents received. Therefrom am I allowed to deduct interest paid but on mortgages on property; also taxes; also repairs, cleaning, decorating, etc.? Will this deducted from gross leave the net? A.—Yes.

Teacher's Salary Exempt.

Q.—I am a Chicago school teacher receiving a salary of $1,300, and besides this have an outside income of $600. Do I have to pay an income tax? A.—No. A teacher's salary is exempt. You are allowed $1,000 exemption outside of salary, if single; $2,000, if married.

Q.—Do I have to prepare and file a schedule of income, even though I do not have to pay an income? A.—No, except that, were you a married man, as example, with two children, making $2,300. You would pay no tax, yet because you make more than $2,000 you would have to schedule.

Q.—Would a man, married on Oct. 11, 1917, be exempt from $2,000 income or $1,000 or would he figure his tax according to the proportion of the year he was single? A.—Your status of exemption is determined by whether you were married or single on Dec. 31, 1917.

Q.—Must I count in my income contributions of $1,000 to charities during the year? A.—Yes, with certain exceptions. See quotation above.

Invested Capital Ruling.

Q.—May a man who has a business of his own, no one else connected with it, buy Liberty bonds and call same invested capital, as corporations are doing? A.—The commission has ruled: "Surplus which is not invested capital as defined in section 207 of the war revenue act, if earned prior to the taxable year and invested in Liberty bonds, will be invested capital for excess profits tax. Surplus not earned prior to the taxable year invested in Liberty bonds is not invested capital."

Q.—I am married, have three children, and my salary is $2,700 a year. My stocks bring me in dividends of $360 a year, making a total of $3,060. My wife receives every month from her father $50, or $600 a year. In making my income tax return, do I include her $600? A.—If it is from an estate it is taxable; if a personal gift, no. You are allowed a deduction of $200 for each child under 18 years old.

DISCHARGE FROM NATIONAL ARMY NO DRAFT BAR

Physical Defects May Now Be Cured, Is the Ruling.

Men who have been drafted, sent to Camp Grant, and then discharged because of physical defects or for other reasons, must fill out and return questionnaires as if they had never been called.

This was the decision announced by Col. James Romayne yesterday.

"A great many were discharged because of physical defects, many of which were only temporary and have since been corrected or cured," Col. Romayne said. "Because a man has been once discharged is no reason why he should be placed permanently in class five or be excused from filling out a questionnaire. All such will be reëxamined by the medical advisory board."

Organize Relief Society.

Young men in division No. 55 who were rejected in the first draft because of physical defects have organized a relief society and will keep in touch with men from the district who have entered or will enter the national army. Penrose Reed, 824 Sunnyside avenue, is president. Meetings will be held twice a week and voluntary aid will be given to the exemption and legal advisory boards.

The names of more than 300 men classed as deserters were turned over to the police yesterday by various exemption boards. All had failed to return their questionnaires or had moved without leaving forwarding addresses.

Twenty of the eighty-six local boards have finished sending out their questionnaires and the others will finish up about Thursday.

Judge Barasa Helps.

For the benefit of Italian registrants unable to read and speak English, board No. 49, North avenue and Larrabee street, has procured three additional members for its legal advisory board. Judge Bernard P. Barasa and Vito B. Cuttone will give aid at the board's headquarters. Michael R. Durso will give advice at his home, 926 Milton avenue, on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Saturday evenings between 7 and 9 o'clock.

"TRIBUNE" MUSIC!

First in New Series of Concerts by American Symphony Orchestra Today at 3 O'Clock.

AN orchestra of fifty players who have been together since the start of the season, a soprano, a pianist, and a man's chorus—these are the contributors to the first concert in the series which, under the auspices of THE TRIBUNE, starts at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the Studebaker theater.

The orchestra is the American Symphony, which, under Glenn Dillard Gunn, last season gave ten concerts in the public schools by arrangement between THE TRIBUNE and the board of education, and with supervision by the Civic Music association. The soprano is Miss Sibyl Comer, who will sing Micaela's aria from "Carmen" and a group of ballads. The pianist is Clarence Loomis, who will play in a new fantasie of his own and in part of a Mozart concerto. The men's chorus is made up from the staff of the First National bank, is conducted by William Boeppler, and is down for three appearances, including one in Mrs. H. H. A. Beach's "Song of Liberty," to be given for the first time in Chicago.

This series of concerts is at popular prices and represents an amplification of the series given last season by Mr. Gunn under TRIBUNE auspices.

GASTON B. MEANS TOOK MRS. KING'S FUNDS, CHARGE

New York, Jan. 5.—As an aftermath of the recent trial of Gaston B. Means, acquitted at Concord, N. C., of the murder of Mrs. Maude A. King, an affidavit was filed in the Supreme court here today alleging, in effect, the appropriation of funds belonging to Mrs. King and her estate by Means for the benefit of himself and his wife.

The affidavit was made by the temporary administrator of Mrs. King's estate in an action in which it is sought to prevent Mrs. Means from drawing out money deposited in her name in the Corn Exchange bank here.

The bank refused to honor a check of hers against the account on being notified that the United States court for the western district, North Carolina, had issued an order restraining Mr. and Mrs. Means from interfering with any of the property of Mrs. King's estate.

Mrs. Means began suit against the bank to compel it to honor her check, but by an order of the Supreme court here, issued today on the strength of the affidavit, the temporary administrator of Mrs. King's estate is substituted for the bank as defendant in the suit.

SOULMATE PUTS HIM IN CELL BY TELEPATHIC JILT

Flashes '30' and Threatening Letter Writer Gives Self Up.

Word came to William T. Fondray while he was waiting to tell his story to Waukegan police officers yesterday afternoon that his soulmate had decided it was "all off." It came by the way of telepathy, Fondray said.

Fondray has been writing threatening letters to Police Magistrate Walter A. Taylor, who warned him some time ago to keep out of Waukegan. The last of the series bore a Waukegan postmark. Yesterday Fondray walked into the office of James C. Welsh, state's attorney at Waukegan, and waited forty-five minutes to give himself up.

He said he had been working for three days as dishwasher in a quick lunch restaurant in Waukegan less than two blocks from the police station. He gave himself up to bring his affair of the heart to a culmination. Now that his soulmate has sent him the wireless that all has ended between them he can turn his attention to less elevated matters. The first of these will be a sanity hearing Monday afternoon before Judge P. L. Persons at Waukegan.

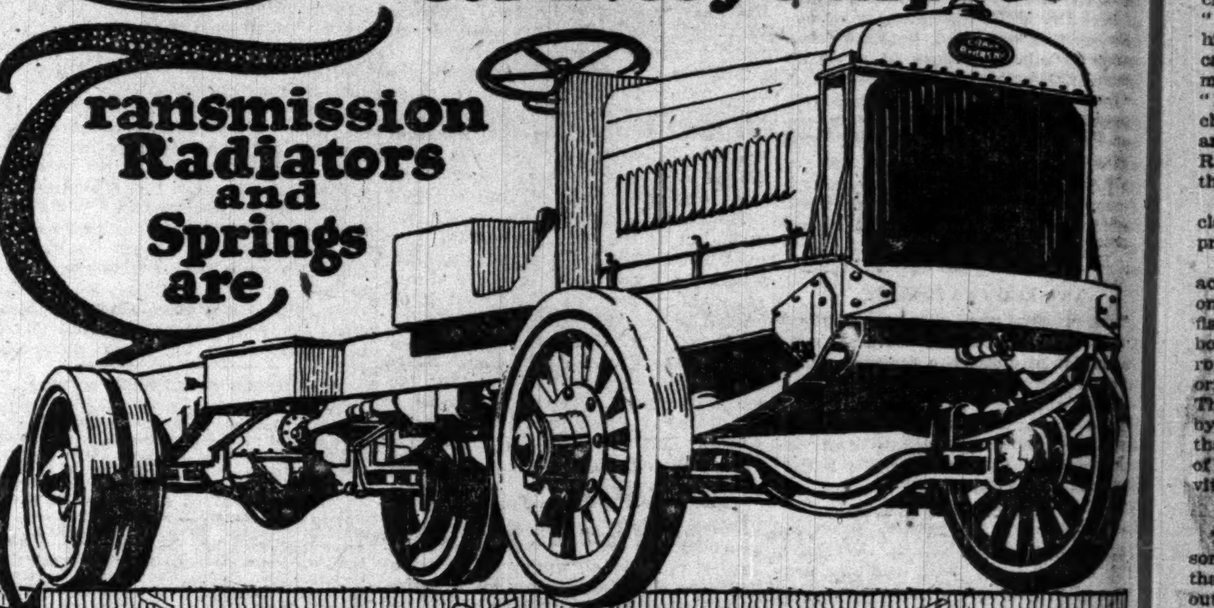
GRAMM BERNSTEIN
1½ to 6 Ton Trucks for Every Purpose



GUARANTEED
For "The Life of The Truck"
The broadest guarantee given by any American manufacturer

"Built-in" strength—based on 17 years of truck building experience—takes care of unusual strains—hard knocks—and rough handling of all kinds of drivers. Out of hundreds of Gramm-Bernstein Trucks used abroad in the past two years not even one transmission had to be repaired—no parts were replaced—and not a single spring failed to stand the test.

Builders of the First "Liberty Truck" for the U. S. Army

When the Government decided to build a standardized truck to withstand the severe usage of war service—the Gramm-Bernstein organization was selected to build the first model of the famous "Liberty" truck. Today hundreds of army trucks are being turned out in the immense Gramm-Bernstein plant.

Lowest Cost of Operation

is dependent mainly upon two things—elimination of repair bills—the greatest amount of power out of every gallon of gasoline—and uninterrupted service. From the 1½-ton Light Delivery Model to the Heavy Industrial Truck—no matter what the requirements—actual figures will prove that Gramm-Bernstein will cut down your delivery costs.

Our Traffic Engineers Will Tell You

after studying your own individual hauling problems, just what saving you can make by using Gramm-Bernstein trucks. We will furnish a report in writing based upon definite data covering every known hauling condition in the civilized world—which will supply some mighty enlightening information on what your hauling is now costing you. The request for this service will not obligate you or bring a salesman to your office until after our engineer's report has been submitted.

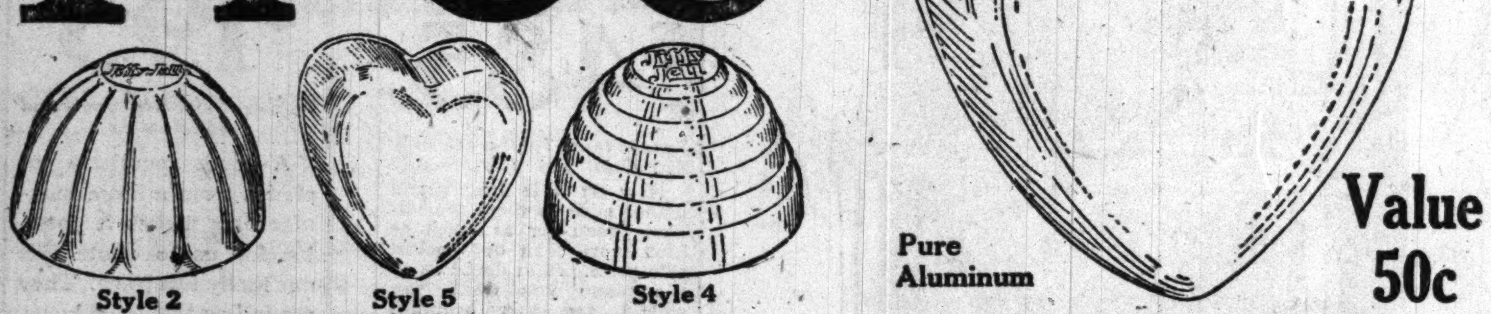
Dessert Molds



Three Individual Molds

Buy from your grocer this week two packages of Jiffy-Jell. Then send us the coupon below. Enclose 10 cents for mailing only. We will send you three aluminum dessert molds as pictured, all one style or assorted. Or we will send six molds if you enclose 20 cents. Their value is 60 cents.

Or One Pint Mold

Or we will send one pint mold, which serves a full package of Jiffy-Jell. Buy two packages of Jiffy-Jell. Enclose only 10c for mailing. We will send either this heart-shaped pint mold, or a fluted pint size similar to Style 2 at the left. Say which you prefer. The value is 50c.

To All Who Will Try Jiffy-Jell Desserts And Salads
Fruity, Economical—Patriotic Dainties

A million people are enjoying a new-type quick gelatine dessert. It will amaze you by its richness and its flavor.

We want you to know its delights. So we make this offer — this week only — to induce you to try Jiffy-Jell.

Old-style quick gelatine desserts had the flavor mixed with the powder. They lacked the fresh fruit flavor.

Jiffy-Jell has a liquid fruit flavor, which comes in sealed glass vials. There's a bottle in each package.

Each fruit flavor is made from the fruit itself. Each is highly concentrated. So every Jiffy-Jell dessert or salad has a wealth of ripe fruit taste.

The vial keeps the flavor fresh. It cannot lose its strength. You add it when the jell has partly cooled, so you do not scald the flavor.

Jiffy-Jell desserts and salads are ten times better than the old kinds. They will be a revelation. So we urge you to buy two packages for 25 cents. See what they mean to you. Then any mold offer is open to you if you send us the coupon this week. And they mean a lifetime gift.

PERSONAL

Our former mold offer to Jiffy-Jell users swamped us with orders. For a time we could not get enough molds to serve all promptly. Grocers and jobbers ran out of stock. Many customers were disappointed.

Grocers are now supplied. We have plenty of molds. So at the request of many who have written us we repeat this offer and urge every family to accept it.

Real Fruit Flavor. A Bottle in Each Package

A sealed bottle of liquid fruit flavor is in each Jiffy-Jell package. All fruit flavors are made direct from the fresh, ripe fruit itself

ARRESTED QUACK ADMITS ROBBING DOCTOR OF NAME

Arrest yesterday of W. Thomas in his "medical office" at 1300 West Madison street revealed, state officials say, with what ease medical quacks prey upon a gullible public.

Thomas, who for several years has been practicing medicine and surgery under the name "Dr. A. E. Thomas," which he admits having "borrowed" from a reputable retired practitioner, was taken prisoner by Detectives Joyce and Smith. He was taken to the Desplaines street police station and booked on a charge of practicing medicine without a license. John J. Conroy, inspector for the Illinois department of education and registration, was the complainant.

Condition Tells Own Story.

Instead of being a pompous, suave, well fed and dressed charlatan like other quacks who have fallen into the meshes of the law recently, he turned out to be a shaking, wretched, and miserable victim of morphine, whose condition when he was captured bordered on hysteria. And yet in spite of the fact that his condition left one only one guess as to its cause, he had been able to reap a harvest by selling to others medical advice which he was plainly in need of himself.

When the detectives stepped into his office and arrested him he sank weakly into a chair. To Inspector Conroy he admitted he was an impostor, and confessed he had obtained the state license hanging upon his office wall with fraudulent affidavits.

Indicted for Murder.

This man had been masquerading as Dr. A. E. Thomas through the simple process of opening the Illinois physicians' register and appropriating the "M. D." and initials of a physician of his own surname. In so doing he caused the authentic Dr. A. E. Thomas much embarrassment, for the fake "Dr." Thomas was indicted on a charge of murder last July following an illegal operation on Mrs. Frances Rinehardt, 1011 Throop street, of which the woman died.

This charge against him, Thomas declared last night, had been nolle prossed.

His pretended state license, which, according to law, must be displayed on the office wall, and which was confiscated, together with fake doctors' books and records, by Inspector Conroy, was an authentic copy of a license originally issued to the genuine Dr. Thomas. It was obtained by the faker by writing the state board of health that he had "lost" the original copy of "his" license and inclosing affidavits to that effect.

Covered His Tracks.

The impostor must have known something of the real Dr. Thomas, for that physician has for ten years been out of the active practice of medicine, living the while in the state of Michigan. It was the brother of the genuine Dr. Thomas, Dr. Wesley M. Thomas of 3036 Broadway, Chicago, who first suspected the imposition and notified the state board of health recently. The real Dr. A. E. Thomas was reached at his brother's home last night.

When told of the arrest of the purloiner of his name and degree, Dr. Thomas expressed satisfaction that the impostor had been unearthed and his activities curtailed, but declared himself sorry for the man in his wretched condition. He asserted he would look up his "counterpart" and possibly assist him.

Sues Officer for $10,000; Says That He Was Beaten

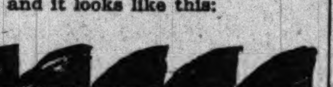
The praecipe of a suit for $10,000 damages was filed in the Circuit court yesterday by Frank A. Olson, 3709 Ellis avenue, against Patrolman John H. Magnus, assigned to the Stanton avenue station. Attorney F. J. Karasek, counsel for Olson, said his client was beaten by Magnus. The police-

READ ALL ABOUT THE HUM; IT'S A HUMMER; HO HUM

Dr. Muckey, Voice Expert, Tells Woman's Club the Secret.

Ever see a hum? The artists on this paper never have, and they passed it up. So the illustration for this story falls to the reporter, who saw a flock of hums at the Chicago Woman's club yesterday and heard of their habits from Floyd S. Muckey, voice specialist from New York.

A hum, according to Dr. Muckey, is a mild and gentle thing, good for the voice, and it looks like this:



It has no over tones hanging around waiting to be fed, but is all sufficient to itself. It's the next best thing to a whistling buoy on the lake, which the doctor urged the club women to learn to imitate if they wished to improve their voices.

"In learning correct voice production," said Dr. Muckey, who was talking before the American speech committee of the club, "the thing to do is not to force the tone. Start out by humming the tone; don't try to shout as loudly as you can. And if you don't know how to whistle, learn. Practice imitating the whistling buoy out on the lake."

Vowels and Consonants.

Dr. Muckey also predicted that the terms vowel and consonant would soon be out of use. "We don't like to use the names for the sounds," he said, "but we have at present no other way of differentiating."

A speaking voice should have as great range as a singing voice, according to Dr. Muckey. The ordinary monotonous voice heard in speaking has only about three degrees of pitch, he said, which accounts for sleeping congregations and audiences.

In an endeavor to inculcate the principles of correct speech into the young people of the country the committee on American speech has framed a set of r[illegible]tions, which were introduced by [illegible] Howard Willett, 190 East Chestnut street.

Pledge for Children.

They are to be in the form of a pledge for Boy Scouts and Camp Fire girls, and read as follows:

"I love the United States of America. I love my country's flag. I love my country's language. I promise:

"1. That I will not dishonor my country's speech by leaving off the last syllables of words.

"2. That I will say a good American 'yes,' instead of an Indian grunt, uh-huh, or a foreign 'ya' or 'yeh.'

3. That I will do my best to improve American speech by enunciating distinctly, and by speaking pleasantly and sincerely."

SWEDISH-AMERICAN WOMEN MEETING.

Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns will be the principal speaker at the meeting of the Swedish-American Women of Chicago at Butler house, 3212 Broadway, Thursday evening, Jan. 10. Her subject will be "The Red Cross."

MOTHER'S DUTY, GIRL'S EXCUSE ON FORGERY CHARGE

Adoption Mystery Is Revived by Tale in Court.

Her duty as a mother was the plea of Miss Gladys Neil, when arraigned in the South Clark street police court yesterday on a charge of forging a check for $50, which she is alleged to have passed on Charles Hanford, a clerk of the First National bank.

Miss Neil, who gave her address as 4020 Grand boulevard, said the father of her children is John Shakespeare, who, she charged, forged the name on the check.

"I needed money to support my two children," Miss Neil told Judge Newcomer. He continued the case until next Friday and a warrant was issued for Shakespeare's arrest.

Clerk "Don't Care to Talk."

The city directory gives the name of William H. Hanford, 4341 Kenmore avenue, as a clerk in the First National bank.

When asked last night if he is the Hanford who is the complainant against Miss Neil, he replied:

"I don't care to talk about it."

Miss Neil said her children are in a home at 1935 South Central Park avenue. They could not be located there yesterday. At 4020 Grand boulevard it was said that Miss Neil had been a roomer, but that nothing was known as to her identity.

Adoption Case Recalled.

John F. Shakespeare, a munitions agent of New York, made application before Judge Scully last February for permission to adopt the child of Mrs. Gladys E. Sandley of 4015 West Van Buren street. The petition was opposed by Elmer E. Sandley, an engineer for the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, who declared that his consent to the action would jeopardize a $10,000 alienation suit pending against Shakespeare. Shakespeare said at the time that Mrs. Sandley's child was his son and he desired to give it the name of John F. Shakespeare Jr.

Mrs. Arthur Dedrich, at 4015 West Van Buren street, Mrs. Sandley's sister, refused to deny or affirm that Miss Gladys Neil and Mrs. Gladys Sandley are one and the same person.

Jury Finds Woman's Death by Gas Was Accidental

A coroner's jury which on Friday held an inquest into the death of Miss Elsie Gustanson, 17, of 3840 North Harding avenue, who died Thursday night at St. Mary of Nazareth hospital, returned a verdict of "death from bronchial pneumonia and gas poisoning believed to be accidental." On Friday morning THE TRIBUNE published a police report that she turned on the gas.

YELLOW KID, WITH WHITE BARRAGE, DENIES CHARGES

Joseph Weil Gives a New Bond; Talks of Fraud Indictment.

A dapper little man with a carefully trimmed yellow beard pressed a handkerchief against his face and peered up at Judge John McGoorty yesterday. The judge took a quick, curious look at the trimly tailored little figure staring up at him and turned to some legal documents that Attorney Everett Jennings pushed across to him.

The judge took a look at the papers and carried on a short, low voiced conversation with the lawyer, another man, and a woman. He waved them aside and the court ceremony of Joseph Weil (the Yellow Kid) giving bond on another conspiracy and confidence game charge was finished.

"Ridiculous," declared Mr. Weil, flicking a bit of lint from his natty overcoat, in response to a reporter's question as to what he thought of the charges against him.

Barrage Against Camera.

"A cold?" suggested the interviewer, looking at the handkerchief.

"No, just a preventive," replied Mr. Weil, and he shot a wary glance at a newspaper photographer ranging in the offing.

"Now, Mr. Weil, about this case," the interviewer continued. "Is it a fact that you took a lot of real money away from the Indiana bankers and munition factory owners by selling them — ah — questionable mining stock?"

"Let me give it to you straight," he said. "From what I understand about that banker, Charles H. Worden of Fort Wayne, nobody could wring $15,000 from him. Why say, his business is to get money, not to give it up.

Not That Much in World.

"As to the other one—let's see—yes, Albert A. Charles of Kokomo," and there may have been a twinkle in Mr. Weil's pale blue eye, "why, they say he lost $100,000. I never knew there was that much money in the world.

"Now, that's about all I can say just now. Don't want to hurt my defense, you know, but glad to talk to you—glad to see you."

"We'll just say retired," he said.

Accompanying Weil besides his attorney were former State Representative John J. McLaughlin and Mrs. McLaughlin and several friends. Mrs. McLaughlin scheduled property valued at $200,000 for Weil's bond.

HINT TO HUSBAND TO EARN LIVING BREAKS UP HOME

Mr. Goodman Dislikes Idea, So Wife Gets a Decree.

Mrs. Rose Goodman, 7619 Bosworth avenue, had no hostile feeling towards her husband, Phillip. She merely suggested that the general atmosphere of the home might be cleared if Phillip found time to earn a few pennies for himself.

But such suggestions proved exceedingly annoying to Phillip, so he departed.

That was the explanation of the Goodmans' troubles offered to Judge Joseph H. Fitch yesterday by Mrs. Goodman. A decree of divorce was granted.

Boxing Wife Wins.

Virginia Noble, 2318 Jackson boulevard, made no "puns" about war, married life, Sherman's remarks, etc., when she took the witness stand. She merely testified that her husband, Charles H. Noble, was fond of boxing, that he liked to spar with his wife, and that she had tried to amuse him.

"But it's a poor game," she said. "When it got too bad I quit the prize ring, disregarded the Queensberry rules, and threw my hat in the divorce ring."

Judge Fitch gave her a decision.

Helen and Joseph Mariotti, 1311 West Huron street, had a merry time. She is Polish and her husband was born in Italy. Neither can speak the other's language—they were married in Crown Point. Helen says Joseph was generous—in "an old country way."

"One Sunday he gave me 25 cents, but my allowance was 10 cents a day usually," said Helen. She was divorced.

"Old Stuff" Fails.

Viola Marcus Levy, 1715 East Sixty-seventh street accused her husband, James, of infidelity, and said he, being a business man, often attempted to "pull that old out of town stuff." She was freed.

Although Fred William Sugden, 159 North Elizabeth street, was granted a divorce from Bessie, they are still relatives. Sugden's mother married his wife's father. Then Sugden became better acquainted with his step-sister, and they were married.

"But she went out stepping every night," said Sugden. Decree.

Five Children No Hold.

Belle Levy, 831 Sheridan road, announced to the court that her husband, Henry D. Levy, had strayed.

"Another woman and another apartment at 816 East Fifty-seventh street," said Mrs. Levy. There are five children, but Mrs. Levy asked for no alimony.

OLD MAN LOCKED IN VAULT AND $1,200 STOLEN

Robbers' Victim Shouts Combination Under the Door and Is Freed.

Three robbers fled unnoticed with $1,200 after overpowering Seamon A. Stone, 75 years old, assistant secretary of the Phœnix Building society, 405 West Division street, yesterday. No weapons were displayed. The old man was thrust into the vault and the door locked. The robbers walked away.

More than an hour later Stone managed to attract the attention of a patron, who called the police. He shouted the combination under the vault door and was released.

Mr. Stone said he was alone in the office when the three men entered. One of them approached the wicket behind which he stood and asked for change for a $1 bill. While he was busying himself with this, the others leaped the railing and seized him. The struggle was short and Stone was left bound on the floor while the men searched the vault and the safe inside it, both being open.

More than an hour later Mrs. Rosa Johnson of 1824 North Park avenue entered. She heard Stone rapping on the inside of the door with a bit of iron. After his release he described the methods of the robbers, but owing to a defect in his sight he said he was unable to observe them closely enough to offer a description.

M'CORMICK ASKS G. O. P. SUPPORT FOR U. S. SENATE

Congressman Announces Candidacy Against Thompson.

Medill McCormick is an announced candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator, which will be determined at the direct primaries on Sept. 11. Before departing yesterday for Washington for the session of congress, Mr. McCormick gave out a statement saying definitely that he is in the race.

McCormick headquarters are to be opened tomorrow in the Conway building. State Senator Clarence F. Buck of Monmouth becomes chairman of the general campaign committee, with particular reference to the downstate counties. Former Postmaster Daniel A. Campbell and William H. Weber, secretary of the Republican county committee, will direct the organization work in Chicago and Cook county.

Congressman McCormick's statement is brief and to the point. It says that he does not intend to enter, personally, upon an active campaign at this time, in view of the legislative situation at Washington that demands the coöperation of every member of congress. The issues of the primary campaign, he suggests, will be discussed much later in the year.

Delays Campaign.

Mr. McCormick's avowal, putting him into the senatorial going, follows:

"I shall be a candidate for United States senator in the Republican primaries this year. When opportunity presents I hope to speak in the state on the problems of the war, but I shall be able to give but little attention to the conduct of a campaign during the activities of congress this winter, therefore my friends have undertaken energetically to organize in my behalf in all the counties in Illinois.

"A discussion of the issues as they arise will be appropriate later in the year. In the meantime, my energies, like those of my colleagues, must be occupied with the constructive support of the American government, the fleet, and the armies of the American people."

Avoids Entanglements.

The McCormick managers, it is understood, in conferences held last week, determined a plan of campaign that contemplates the organization in city and downstate counties of the McCormick forces, independent of any entangling alliances and based upon Congressman McCormick's record in the Illinois legislature and as a member of congress. The regular organization in the Twenty-seventh ward is the first of the wards, acting through the precinct committeemen, to indorse a senatorial candidate. It has declared for Mr. McCormick. From now on it is expected that it will be a drive between the McCormick, Thompson, and Deneen lieutenants to capture as many ward indorsements as can be negotiated.

Mayor Thompson already has announced his own candidacy. His Chicago organization, maintained ever since he was nominated for mayor, has been busily pressing the pledge card system of securing support for him for senator. His downstate campaign is being handled quietly, for the time being, from Grand Pacific hotel headquarters by Harry B. Ward of Duquoin.

Expect Deneen to Run.

Former Gov. Charles S. Deneen has given no personal intimation that he will be a candidate, but there is every indication that he will get into the running within the next month, or as soon as the federal milk investigation is ended. He is engaged in that investigation as attorney for the milk producers.

Census Shows Illinois Ripe for Dry Victory

Illinois is ripe for a decisive dry victory at the legislative elections next November. This is the verdict of the leaders of the Anti-Saloon league of Illinois after a survey of actual conditions that exist in Chicago and downstate.

At the annual session of the board of directors of the league held last week the returns of the first real census of the licensed saloons in existence in Illinois that has been made since THE TRIBUNE's census of five years ago were presented by State Superintendent F. Scott McBride.

Features of Census.

These are the outstanding features of the census:

Fifty-four of the 102 counties of the state are entirely dry and only one—Monroe—entirely wet.

There are 1,416 dry townships—including 170 precincts in counties not under township organization—as against 199 wet townships, including twenty-four precincts.

Eighty-seven per cent of the area of the state is dry.

Forty-six per cent of the population of the state, counting the city of Chicago as entirely wet, resides in dry territory.

Seventy-four per cent of the population of the state, omitting the city of Chicago, resides in dry territory.

Seven senatorial districts are entirely dry.

City Has 6,055 Saloons.

In the saloon census Chicago is marked up with 6,055 saloons. The saloon men have admitted that this number will be reduced by between 1,000 and 1,500 at the next license paying period, due to the decrease in business and the prohibition of whisky making.

In the entire state of Illinois, on Dec. 6, 1917, the date of the census, there were 9,893 saloons. In Cook county, including Chicago, there were 6,708, and in the downstate counties there were 3,175. Of the 9,893, 9,777 were in cities or villages, and 116 were in the rural districts, licensed by the boards of supervisors or the boards of county commissioners.

The returns by counties show just where the pro-saloon strength is centered.

The fifty-four totally dry counties are: Boone, Brown, Champaign, Clark, Clay, Coles, Crawford, Cumberland, De Kalb, Dewitt, Douglas, Edgar, Edwards, Ford, Fulton, Gallatin, Greene, Hamilton, Hardin, Henderson, Henry, Jasper, Jefferson, Jersey, Johnson, Kendall, Knox, Lawrence, Livingston, McDonough, Macon, Marion, Massac, Menard, Mercer, Morgan, Moultrie, Ogle, Platt, Pike, Pope, Richland, Saline, Schuyler, Scott, Stark, Stephenson, Union, Wabash, Warren, Wayne, White, Williamson, Winnebago.

Saloons in Cook County.

The actual number of licensed saloons in Cook county on Dec. 6, 1917, is shown as follows:

Arlington Heights, 5; Bartlett, 2; Bellwood, 11; Blue Island, 42; Broadview, 4; Burnham, 10; Burr Oak, 15; Chicago, 6,055; Chicago Heights, 120; Chicago Ridge, 2; Cicero, 159; Dalton, 7; Elmwood Park, 4; Evergreen Park, 4; Forest Park, 45; Franklin Park, 7; Glenview, 6; Glenwood, 1; Harvey, 13; Hazel Crest, 1; Hillside, 8; Homewood, 4; Kolze, 6; Lansing, 3; Lamont, 19; Lyons, 26; Matteson, 4; Melrose Park, 19; Morton Grove, 12; Mount Prospect, 2 Niles Center, 9; Oak Lawn, 2; Palatine, 5; Palos Park, 1; River Grove, 8; Schiller Park, 6; Shermerville, 5; Steger, 5; Summit, 17; Thornton, 5; Tinley Park, 5; Wheeling, 5; Willow Springs, ; Worth, 6; outside of municipalities, 17. Total, 6,718.

PROF. BRAMHALL OPPOSES MAYER BEFORE LEAGUE

The high spots in current events for the month were touched upon by Prof. Frederick Bramhall of the University of Chicago in a half hour talk before the Political Equality league in the Congress hotel yesterday. He discussed the Healey trial, defended Secretary of War Baker, and rapped Levy Mayer and his recent talk on the "follies of 1917."

Frederick T. Howe, commissioner of immigration of New York, who had been scheduled to speak, sent word, according to the members of the league, that he had been delayed on account of a severe storm. Louis Wallace of the Sells commission spoke in his place.

Mrs. James B. Morrisson of the woman's committee made a plea to the club women to assist in the thrift savings stamp campaign.

SHOOT AT SIGHT, BULLETIN TELLS STATE BANKERS

In a special criminal bulletin recently sent out by the Illinois Bankers' association bankers are told that bank burglaries and holdups are so frequent that every member bank is notified to adopt measures for its protection. Members are advised to install an electric alarm system with push buttons at various locations in the banking room and contacts in the floor surrounding the vault or safe, set to alarm at the approach of any one and with the wires running underground to neighboring stores.

"Have your neighbors be prepared to shoot," advises the bulletin. "A dead burglar will rob no more; if given a sentence he is soon paroled, to rob again. Illinois laws need to be changed to provide heavier punishment for these criminals. This, however, cannot be done until the next session of the legislature. In the meantime, 'safety first.'"

Disappearance of Child May Cause Reconciliation

A statement from the attorney representing William H. Simpson of 730 Cornelia street, who is charged with concealing Edith Green, his 5 year old granddaughter, since Dec. 10, declares that a reconciliation between Simpson and Lieut. Reginald H. A. Green, his son-in-law by a former marriage, may be effected at an early date.

OFFICIAL WEATHER REPORT.

CLEVER CROOK NICKS BIG LOOP BANK OF $2,800

The Continental and Commercial National bank is believed to have been the victim of a very clever crook who a short time ago presented two checks for collection on the First National bank of Racine, Wis. One was for $1,500 and the other for $2,000, and bore the signature of the cashier of the Racine bank. They were both signed George Hamtil.

A short time ago a man who gave the name of George Hamtil answered an advertisement in which a garage was offered for sale, and on the representation that he intended to purchase induced the owner to introduce him at the bank with the view of opening an account. Through a misunderstanding regarding the official approval of a check for $280 tendered by Hamtil, he was permitted to deposit this check, together with two others, one for $1,500 and the other for $2,000. The last two were drawn on the First National bank of Racine, apparently certified, and the check for the smaller amount was drawn on the Peoples bank of Waukegan, all signed and payable to George Hamtil. The checks were returned, there being no such account, and the certifications declared forged. In the meantime he had drawn $2,800 from the Continental and Commercial National bank.

The forger is described as age 40, 5 feet 8 inches tall, 150 to 160 pounds, fair complexion and hair.

"Knitting, knitting,
Knitting for the heroes over there;
Knitting, knitting,
Knitting useful things for them to wear.
While they fight against autocracy,
And for a world-democracy,
The heroes left behind,
Good and kind,
You will find,
That they are knitting, knitting,
Knitting for the heroes over there."

NEW CAMPAIGN AGAINST VICE IN FULL BLAST

Schuettler Begins New Form of Control of Social Evil.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Without public announcement and without any change in laws or ordinances, Chief Schuettler is establishing what for Chicago is an entirely new form of control of the social evil.

The first steps toward putting it into effect have been taken. The final regulation of the police machine to the new scheme alone requires time. But even the department does not suspect the full extent of the plan, for Schuettler himself is loath to discuss its final scope. He first wants to watch it "work out." He is confident of the result.

In Europe his plan would be recognized as that of creating a "morals police" distinct and separate from the regular police force. The municipal code does not permit of such a step here, but that approximately describes what Schuettler has begun to put into effect up to the limit allowed by the ordinances.

Civilian in Control.

He has done it by placing directly under the exclusive direction and control of a civilian—as distinguished from the "active force"—the biggest detachment of men ever assigned to combat the social evil in Chicago. The squad may be increased or decreased as developments require. But it will remain the vice fighting force of the municipality. There this activity will be concentrated.

Following this action Schuettler is endeavoring—without disturbing any of its functions—to readjust the department to the new arrangement of things. To avoid disorganization he believes this is accomplished best by gradual means.

The change to be brought about is the divorce of his crime fighting organization from the handling of vice to the utmost degree possible without permitting it to wink at flagrancy. He wants, he says, to have the patrolman devote his brain and muscle to the prevention of holdups, burglaries, safe-blowings, and murders, and to the capture of the men who commit those crimes.

Sees Other Gains.

"Using a minimum number of men to get results better than we ever got before," is his own description of the goal ahead.

But he sees other gains in his plan. He eliminates the special vice squad in the precinct which in the past has been the channel for dirty money and the tool of political favoritism. The district or the precinct commander will be made to understand that he will not be held responsible except for open, flaunting vice. Every patrolman must arrest "on view," but cases requiring investigation are to be reported so they be given the expert attention of the "morals police."

This will please the average patrolman. He despises vice. But under the old system he was told to keep hands off, that the vice squad of the precinct would take care of such cases. He no longer will be "the goat" for protected women, for teh activities of the "morals police," Schuettler believes, will make any promise of protection impossible.

• Now Headed by Funkhouser.

The "chief" of the "morals police" is Maj. M. L. C. Funkhouser, the civilian second deputy. His organization consists of a variable number of investigators of his own selection on one hand and on the other a detail of young policemen, now numbering thirty-five, who are under the immediate command of Lieut. William H. Schoemaker. Lieut. Schoemaker takes his orders directly from Maj. Funkhouser.

The investigators are not under civil service. One may be employed or discharged at will. The identities of most of them are secret. They are selected for their ability and primarily for their ability to "get in." The policemen are men who have been on the force only a few months in most instances. They can be shifted whenever contamination is suspected. New men, not known as members of the "morals police," may be brought in.

Hit 'Em Quick System.

The investigators "get in." Secret methods indicate they have found what they were trailing. In come the police. That, in brief, is the "hit 'em quick" system now in use.

When the Schoemaker raids began recently there was a general belief that they were a temporary thing due to some extent, at least, to the exposures incident to the trial of ex-Chief Healey. There was no notice that there had been a big shift in the organization of the police department. It was feared that such an announcement would cause district and precinct commanders to "lie down" and "pass the buck" in toto to Funkhouser's force.

Schuettler does not intend to permit anything of the sort. The captain or lieutenant in whose district there are raids upon places which he should have been able to handle, or raids in such numbers upon secret places which he fails to report, will be taken before the trial board for inefficiency.

CHICAGO'S NEWEST HOSPITAL

The Mothers' Aid Club Recorded a New Achievement Yesterday When the $90,000 Aid Pavilion Was Transferred Officially to the Lying-In Hospital.

At bottom;—Mothers' Aid Pavilion—Chicago Lying-In Hospital.

A new achievement of the Mothers' Aid club of Chicago was recorded yesterday in the official transfer to the Chicago Lying-In hospital at 5038 Vincennes avenue of the mothers' aid pavilion. The building cost more than $90,000 and is now at the service of the public and the medical profession.

Among those present at the ceremonies were the officers of the Mothers' Aid club—Mrs. Hugo Hartman, president; Mrs. M. H. Singer, vice president; Mrs. Leo Koretz, secretary; Mrs. Max Sickel, treasurer—and the officers of the hospital, including Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, president of the women's board, and Dr. Joseph B. De Lee, physician in charge.

All maternity cases will be accepted, as well as any other cases where the patient is nearing motherhood, and "therefore," a brochure issued by the Mothers' Aid reads, "the aid of the public is especially necessary at this time, when local charities suffer from the more dramatic appeal of the war. A large endowment is needed."

To Make Your Morning Marketing Easy

WHEN you visit a retail store, make your purchase of Armour's meats, fish, vegetables, fruits, condiments or other perfectly prepared foods, and have your selection placed in the basket to carry home, do you ever stop to consider how this easy marketing has been made possible for you?

LOOK into it. For you should realize the operation of the systematic plan which offers you this range of choice and value.

Here are over a score of packing plants located in the centers of production constantly gathering and preparing the country's choicest yield.

Carrying Foods to You

HERE are refrigerator cars on every main line and branch spur with icing stations to care for them, steadily transporting these foods to over four hundred branch houses—each a huge, local ice-box in the midst of a congested population district.

Here is a great foreign investment—plants in the Argentine, Brazil, New Zealand, Canada—relieving the drain on this country's production.

Here is a national selling organization working, day in, day out, to equalize distribution and keep your food supply constant—laboring to hold producers' markets always open that there may be neither shortage nor surplus and that prices may hold at true value levels.

The important thing for you to remember is that without such a far-flung system continually at work for you by day and night, your supply of foods would be neither constant nor at existing prices. You would be paying very much more. And you would be denied the privilege of national selection—forced to live on the foods produced in your own locality.

Feeding the Allies

INDEED, it is in no small measure due to systems of handling foods such as that operated by Armour and Company that we as a nation are able to extend to our Allies the food-aid we are giving them today.

Think, if you can, of any other people in the war who are so certain of their regular food supply as we here in America!

When you consider facts such as these you can not fail to realize the advantage you must get in both quality and value when you ask by name for Armour food products.

TEAMS QUALIFY IN "TRIBUNE" RELAYS

RUMOR POINTS TO ED BARROW FOR CUB JOB

Eastern Man May Get Place as Assistant to Weeghman.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

More changes have been made in the Cubs ball club since the close of last season than have taken place on any other major league club, but if the latest rumors are correct there still is one more big change planned besides the effort to get Roger Hornsby to play shortstop. The newest rumor is that President Weeghman contemplates trading himself out of the job of head of the club.

While it is likely Weeghman will remain as president, it is the plan, according to rumor, to put a practical baseball man in the job to attend to all the duties usually handled by the president. Just at present it looks as if Ed Barrow, former president of the International league, is the man sought, and it would not be surprising if he is installed at the desk at the north side park before Feb. 1.

Other Duties Call.

It is known that on several occasions Weeghman has expressed a desire to get away from active service, as his other business duties require so much of his time that he can't give baseball the attention it needs. At the last meeting of the board of directors, according to Mr. A. D. Lasker, one of the heaviest stockholders, all were strongly in favor of Weeghman's retaining his position as president, and he was given the big bank roll and authority to purchase stars to make the Cubs a pennant contender.

But it always has been Weeghman's belief that the club needed a practical baseball man in the office to attend to the numerous matters that come up and it is known that last fall an approach was made to James J. Callahan. Probably no better man could have been named for the place in Chicago, but before anything was done Callahan had hooked up with his father-in-law in the contracting business, and now it is doubtful if he would consider returning to the national game.

Barrow at New York.

Mr. Barrow declined to remain head of the International league when his salary was reduced last fall from $7,500 a year to $2,500. He attended the National league meeting in New York in December and came all the way to Chicago for the joint session of the two leagues. Several times he was in secret conference with President Johnson of the American league, who undoubtedly was anxious to place Barrow in some responsible baseball job. Not more than two weeks ago, Johnson made several attempts to hold a conference with Weeghman, but if it ever took place no one knew about it.

Weeghman will leave tonight for Cincinnati to be present at the meeting of the national commission tomorrow. The National league men in general will be there for an informal meeting of their own. It is understood that Ed Barrow will come on from his New York home, and it is more than likely that Weeghman will meet him and discuss the proposition of becoming business manager, or a vice president, or a secretary, or some sort of title with the Cubs.

Barrow a Capable Man.

The fact that Charles Williams was let out after more than thirty years of service with the Cubs, also boosts the rumor that another man of experience is slated to step in. Barrow has given most of his life to baseball, and his record has been a worthy one. Undoubtedly he would be a valuable man to handle the Cub affairs, providing he was given sufficient power to do things his own way.

For a time it was thought the job would go to Tom Chivington, former president of the American association, but only last week it was reported that he had accepted a similar position with the Louisville club. Another former minor league president, Joe O'Brien, who had some experience as business manager of the New York Giants, was thought a possible candidate for the Cub place.

JENKINS OF SOX WINS PLACE IN OFFICERS' CAMP

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Joe Jenkins, reserve catcher of the Chicago White Sox, has been selected as one of the soldiers to be admitted to the third officers' training camp at Camp Gordon. He will start the grind Monday and will strive for a lieutenancy in the field artillery. Jenkins made such a strong impression with his officers he was recommended. His name headed the list of enlisted men chosen from 40,000 troops.

Tom Bowden, the University of Georgia star who gained a trial with the Cardinals, and Sammy Mayer, former Kansas City and Brooklyn outfielder, were other two professionals admitted. Sherrod Smith, Brooklyn pitcher, will seek entrance to the fourth camp.

WORSE THAN WAR

Pitcher Bob Shawkey Tries to Dodge Army, Mrs. Bob Objects, and Hot Time Follows.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 5.—(Special.)—Bob Shawkey, formerly pitcher for the Athletics and now of the Yankees, has been chased by Mr. Umpire, but he faced a new experience today when Mrs. Bob chased friend hubby from their abode and put his two trunks out on the icy sidewalk. Then she telephoned a Broad street hotel to reserve a room for the wanderer.

After attending to these preliminaries Mrs. Bob, who is familiarly known as the "Tiger Lady," swore out a warrant for her husband's arrest, alleging he struck her three times in the face. According to Mrs. Shawkey, the assault was made after her husband had claimed exemption from war service and had requested her to sign the exemption affidavit, which she refused to do.

"He is husky enough to serve Uncle Sam," declared Mrs. Bob. "At any rate, I am through with him."

FORGET $ SIGN, HELP BASEBALL, SANBORN URGES

BY I. E. SANBORN.

To all baseball club owners, officials, managers, editors, scribes, and fans: Here's a suggestion for a belated New Year's resolution—delayed by annual reviews, etc., to-wit:

Let's resolve to eliminate the dollar sign from our baseball conversation, writings, and sport pages, as far as possible, for one year "for the good of the game."

Before anybody springs that old stuff about the "beam in thine own eye," I'll say none of us has been entirely blameless in the matter in the past.

Money Talk Hurts Game.

Professional baseball is going to need our help to survive the war if that lasts as long as they say it will. The injection of the dollar sign has done the game more harm than any other one thing I can think of. It has introduced a commercial spirit and atmosphere into what ought to be merely a grand old pastime. It has made the popular estimate of a player's ability depend on his salary or his market price in a trade. It has created the false idea that success in sport is measured by coin scales instead of by pennants.

The world's series started it, when the receipts of that event began to run into big money. It would be a blessing to the game if those figures could now be censored out of all baseball reports, without creating suspicion in the minds of the beneficiary.

Bank Rolls and Brass Bands.

To the credit of the club owners, it must be said they are as a rule least to blame for the intrusion of the dollar sign. There are exceptions, but most of the men officially connected with the sport have refrained from talking in dollars, and even under pressure have refused pointblank to give out the monetary details of their business or deals. We have recently had, however, an illustration of the harm that can be done by a bank roll and a brass band. Both bank rolls and brass bands are mighty good things for baseball, but not in conjunction.

The great majority of the dollar signs that have been injected into the game have been the work of scribes, who have had to guess at the figures to a great extent. For instance, Comiskey, to my certain knowledge, never has told exactly what he paid the Athletics for the release of Eddie Collins, nor the exact figures in that star player's contract. Yet the guess which we made at the time has been published so often it has come to be accepted as authentic.

As to Players' Salaries.

The salaries paid to players seldom are disclosed even to close personal friends of the club owners. The players, if they talk salaries, are prone to add a few ciphers, knowing their words will not be disputed or disproved. So the great majority of the figures having to do with baseball finances, except during the world's series, are guesswork or unauthentic hearsay. Consequently they are of small value.

We have recently been reading about a couple of player deals which surpassed all previous transactions of the kind in stupendousness. The dollar sign was evoked to prove it. But it is doubtful, when you stop to think of it, if the coin said to have been paid for Alexander and Killifer would buy any more food or other necessities of life today than the price alleged to have been paid for Marty O'Toole would have purchased when that deal was made.

Let's speak and write of deeds instead of dollars for a spell when discussing baseball and see how it works. Let's change the label of Connie Mack's "$100,000 infield" to "world's champion infield"—which it was.

By RING W. LARDNER

ISABEAU.

Chicago, Jan. 4.

Friend Harvey:

Well Harvey I got bad news for you. When you come back there won't be no chance for you to go over to the Auditorium and see Isabeau because they have made up their mind they won't give it again for fear Sweet Rosie Raisa might catch her death of cold. The best I can do is try and tell you something about it, but remember, when it comes to a ready flow of words, I'm no Hughey Jennings or Fred Donaghey.

Sweet Rosie plays the part of Isabeau, which is a king's daughter, but the king's in tough luck like most of them now days and all the clothes Izzy's got is a bathrobe and a union suit. So not having no trousseau or no case on nobody, she don't want to get married. But the Colonel House of this court, a guy named Messer Cornelius, tells the king she's got to.

"If she doesn't," says the Messer,
"You won't have no successor."
And the king answers: "Yes, sir.
I'll make her wed, God bless her!"
"But first you'd better dress her;
Dress her besser," sezzer Messer.

So when Izzy comes back from Sunday school, the king pulls the dope on her. She's to put on some day clothes, and a flock of knights are coming to compete for her in a joust; not a regular joust, Grecian style, but using only their eyes for weapons. She says the idea's O. K. and——

"I'd much rather look at their eyes than their fights,
But why should I dress up in day clothes for knights?"

So the king says, all right, she can remain disable as usual, and then the goldfish begin to wake up and cry and they both go in the house. While they're in there, old Mrs. Giggles, from Hubbard Woods, and her grandson, Folco the Forester, come on the stage from towards Van Buren Street. Mrs. Giggles thinks she's soon going to die laughing and she wants to place Folco in a good home, though if he was a right guy, the lodge would take care of him. Izzy looms up again and Mrs. Giggles asks her if she'll give Folco a job.

"What can you do?" Izzy asks him.

"I can clean the rug," says he.

"Beat it!" says Izzy, and turns away disgusted.

"But lookee!" says Folco. "I've brought you a pair of squab." And he hands 'em to her.

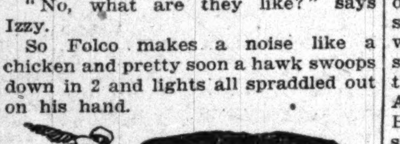
But she says:

"I don't like squab, you woodland slob. Besides, we've got a big family, and what are two among so many?"

"Did you ever taste falcon?" says Falco.

"No, what are they like?" says Izzy.

So Folco makes a noise like a chicken and pretty soon a hawk swoops down in 2 and lights all spraddled out on his hand.



"My goodness!" says Izzy. "Who are you that you can make a noise like a chicken and attract a hawk?"

"I'm Hawkshaw, the Defective," says Folco. "But if I could make a noise like a worm and attract a chicken, I'd be better off."

"You'd be better off anyway," says Izzy.

So he and Mrs. Giggles exit.

The next scene is the eye-joust. A lot of supers dressed as knights ease up one at a time and joust look at Izzy, who's all dressed up in a new, opaque kimono. Each of them was introduced by a newspaper reporter, but I can't remember names. Their googling was a frost and Izzy wouldn't fall for none of them. Honest, Harvey, if I'd been feeling bigamous, I could of gone up there and knocked her dead with my owl-eyes, especially with her so interested in rara avises.

She turns 'em all down, Tracy the Outlaw inclusive, and that makes everybody sore except Folco, who's mushed on her.

"Come on, Izzy! Get busy!" says the king.

"Not for these stage hands," says Izzy.

"All right, then!" yelps the old boy. "Daddy'll have to punish!"

"What shall the owner do to redeem it?" says Izzy.

The king ponders a while and then pronounces sentence.

He speaks in an awed way:
"This noon, right down Broadway,
With none of your clo'es on,
No shoes and no hose on,
And us looking at you,
You stubborn young brat, you
Shall ride on a palfrey.
The show will be all free."

So she's willing, provided they can find a sufficiently dissolute palf'. But most of the crowd's been in the chorus so long that the program don't entice 'em and to show the king what they think of it, they all agree to stay in their apartments with the blinds down during the Midday Ride of Pal-frey-vere. But Folco's been backwoods all his life and he makes up his mind he'll get an eyeful.

The next scene is where Izzy's supposed to September Morn all round the Loop. They've got a white mare from Zwergel's Livery. Izzy comes out wrapped up in a counterpane and stands for a minute by the mare. Then, while the audience holds their breath, she undoes fifty-eight safety pins and throws off the covers. And is she—— Ah, no, friend Harvey. The one-piece Balbriggan camouflage clings to her still.

Well, Harvey, Folco the Forester stands on the corner of Forty-second Street and watches the parade (which is more than the five dollar ticket holders can do), singing all the while:

"How raw, boys! How raw!"

And some other Peeping Tom catches him at it and tells the rest of the gang there's a cheater in the game and next thing you know Folco's in the hoosegow, charged with keeping his eyes open after one o'clock. Well, around here, the penalty for that offense is temporary revocation of your license. But where Folco was at, they make you a permanent homesteader in Rose Hill.

So Gammer Giggles comes to plead with Izzy for Folco's life and Izzy says she'll think about it. She sends Tracy down to the jail with a habeas corpus and pretty soon Folco staggers in. He's been asleep and that makes her sore. No girl likes to be a sedative, especially when taken balbrigganing up and down Main Street.

"Your grandma tells me you want to get off," she says.

"Yes, indeedy," says Folco.

"Well," says Izzy, sneering, "if you really are a birdman, why don't you fly, why don't you fly?"

He makes her tell him why she's peeved and then he explains that he only went to sleep so's he could dream about her.

"And did you?" she asks him.

"Si, si, O Reginotta blonda!" he says. "I had a nightmare. About a white mare."

"Well," she says, "here Isabeau that Isabeau!" And tickled to the point of matrimony, she chases into the house to tell pa. But while she's gone, Messer, who's been hiding on the Messerine floor, signals to the mob outside and they rush on and grab Folco and divide him up into souvenirs. And when Izzy returns and sees him thoroughly separated, she produces one of the knives which infest sopranos' garments in the last act, and carves her monogram in her jugular vein.

Hoping you are the same, Harvey,
I am, etc. R. W. L.

MOTOR SHOW IN N. Y. BAROMETER OF CHEER FOR '18

BY SHEPPARD BUTLER.

New York, Jan. 5.—[Special.]—The yearly gathering of the motor car clans began here today with the opening of America's first wartime trade exhibit of national importance—the New York automobile show.

To those who are interested in the event as an industrial barometer—and many are, in this year of uncertainties—it may be said that the show gives no evidence of the country's slowing up at home while we are fighting abroad. The exhibition spaces are crowded, nearly every manufacturer has some new wrinkle to display in the fashioning of his product, and, what perhaps is more important, folks in general seem to be keenly interested.

Thronged in 15 Minutes.

Within fifteen minutes after the doors of the Grand Central palace opened the building was thronged with an intelligently curious mob, peeping about and asking questions as eagerly as if there never were a war or talk of wartime economy.

Service flags hanging above many of the factory exhibits, and the emblems of the allies in the general decorative scheme, suggested the war note, however, and Gov. Whitman of New York emphasized it further by starting things off with a wartime speech in which he declared that Europe has "placed American cars on trial before the world."

Eighty-six Makes of Cars.

Altogether, there are eighty-six makes of passenger cars on view—approximately the same as last year. Of these, seventy-nine are gasoline vehicles, five electric, and two steam. Including those who have parts and accessories to show, there are exactly 350 exhibitors.

To the prospective buyer the biggest news item of the display is the appearance, absolutely unheralded, of the new Baby Overland, which is to be sold this summer at a price probably somewhere between $450 and $500. Reports of the designing of this car were published several weeks ago, but no one knew until today when the public was to be given a good glimpse of it.

Innovation in Construction.

The car is the one real novelty of the year, not only because it marks the entry of the second largest automobile factory into the field hitherto dominated by Henry Ford, but because it incorporates one or two ideas in motor car construction that are nothing less than revolutionary.

Of these I shall have something to tell later on. It is enough now to say that for an extremely low price—no one knows just what it will be—we are to be offered a car with a complete electric starting and lighting equipment, sliding gear transmission, and the riding effect of a 130 inch wheel base—some thirty inches longer than the Ford.

Here Are 1918 Auto Styles.

Mechanically, there is little else at the show that is really new. "Hot spots," manifolds, and special heating arrangements for carburetors, to facilitate vaporization of low grade fuel, seem to be the items of most interest. In body designing, the 1918 styles run largely to four passenger sport motors, more or less close coupled, and to the staggered door sedans, closed cars with a door set forward on one side and half way back on the other.

Over at the Hotel Astor, the usual automobile salon is under way, crowded as never before with the aristocrats of motordom, cars at $10,000 or $15,000, and more if you like.

REDS MAY TRAIN AT ARMY CAMP

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 5.—Plans were virtually completed today for the Cincinnati Reds to shift their spring training camp from Shreveport, La., to Camp Sheridan, Montgomery, Ala., this spring. The move, if made, will be for patriotic purposes, as the big leaguers can help relieve the monotony of the soldiers' lives by playing three games a week.

Christy Mathewson, manager of the Reds, now at Camp Sheridan directing a checker tournament, favors the change. President Herrmann also favors it, but will leave the decision to Mathewson.

Herrmann believes the Chicago Cubs would be glad to take the Shreveport contracts off the Reds' hands. Mathewson has donned an army Y. M. C. A. uniform and will remain at Camp Sheridan as Y. M. C. A. director until the training season opens.

SKATING STARS IN FRANKLIN DERBY

Close to 200 skaters will take part in the first annual derby of the newly organized Franklin Skating and Athletic club today at Humboldt park. Such well known skaters as Roy McWhirter, Brick Larsen, and Charley Fisher will compete in the class A events, while the local class C and class B racers are expected to furnish interesting competition.

There will be races for boys of different ages, and Miss Mabel Bohle will attempt to retrieve her laurels lost to Miss Johnsen last Sunday at the Sleipner derby. The first event will start at 1 o'clock.

NINE SQUADS GO IN FINAL SKATE RACES

Field Branch and Fiske Ponds Get 2 Places Each.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Hundreds of rosy cheeked, healthy looking boys journeyed to playgrounds in three different sections of the city yesterday to take part in the preliminary relay trials of the third annual playground skating tournament of THE TRIBUNE, the finals of which will be held next Saturday at Garfield park.

Although yesterday's events were held to eliminate some teams which had no chance to win in the finals, the competition was keen enough to work up plenty of enthusiasm among the thousands of spectators at the three parks. The honest efforts of the contestants, ranging in age from 13 to 20 years, sent the onlookers home well satisfied with the exhibitions.

Youngsters Plucky Clear Through.

The little fellows put forth every ounce of energy in their makeup to bring honor and glory to themselves and to the playgrounds they represented. Some had not competed in races before, and as they stood on the marks to receive instructions from the referee they showed every symptom of stage fright. Some fell on the turns, but they got up and continued to the finish although hopelessly out of the running.

Because of the large number of entries it was decided to divide the playgrounds into three sections and allow the first three teams in each relay race to qualify for the finals. This will place nine teams in the final for grammar schools and as many in the open final. It therefore will be necessary to run two heats next Saturday and then a final to determine the playground relay champions.

Fiske Qualifies Two Teams.

Two playgrounds were successful in winning the grammar schools and open events. Fiske playground, which last year won the shield awarded to the team scoring the greatest number of points, won the grammar school and open relays in the southern section. Field Branch accomplished the same feat in the northern division.

The Fiske teams, organized and coached by Director Harry Collins, are evenly balanced. The skaters are placed in such order that the ground lost by the slow man is easily picked up by their speedier followers. Fiske's teams had little trouble winning the preliminary titles, and are certain to be strong contenders in the finals.

Director William Hartman of Field Branch, which won the two relays in the northern division, has fast teams, but they are not as evenly balanced as those of Fiske. Director Sonnenleiter of Corkery, on the west side, developed a fast quartet, which won the open relay, while Director Bracher of Delano succeeded in putting over the winning grammar school team.

Miss on Changing Baton.

As relay racing according to strict rules, is new to the kids, several teams were disqualified for illegal passing of the baton. Others lost ground on pickups because they did not know they were allowed to skate twenty feet on the racing side of the line before passing the stick.

There also were disqualifications for fouling, and in some instances it was thought the rulings of the officials were too strict. In some cases a team was disqualified, when one boy elbowed an opponent on the turn or cut in to take the pole without being the required six feet in the lead. This was purely accidental.

At Waters playground on the north side, the Agassiz team was disqualified because one of its skaters did not cover the entire distance. The team was confident of winning. After the race some of the little fellows went to the dressing room and cried.

Kids Tumble on Turns.

Spills were frequent on the turns because the skaters did not use enough precaution at these critical places. Those who fell tried to skate too soon when taking the turns, instead of coasting half way around before starting to stroke. In every heat this was the reason for some team being put out of the running.

As is generally the case in youngsters' events, there were certain tricks pulled which should result in the punishment of the offenders. At Waters playground a member of the Mozart team was tripped by a rooter of one of the other teams. The skater got up and managed to finish second. At Hamlin rink sticks and paper were thrown on the course to make the skaters fall. None of this will be permitted in the finals, as police will be on hand to put offenders out of the park.

May Make One Substitution.

After the races the committee agreed to allow any director of a qualifying team to make one substitution on his team, in case one of the original members cannot compete because of sickness or some other reason. Superintendent Gross of the playgrounds and H. J. Fischer, in charge of athletic activities, visited Waters and Hamlin playgrounds and both were more than pleased with the turnouts.

M'LEAN SKATES MATHISEN FOR TITLE TONIGHT

Stars to Settle World's Speed Laurels on Ice in Two Days of Races.

Chicago, where champions have been developed in nearly every branch of athletics, will endeavor to increase its roll of honor tonight when Bobby McLean, who learned to skate on the parks of the west side and now is proclaimed the professional champion of the United States and Canada, will meet Oscar Mathisen, the Norwegian, who claims the championship of Europe. They will compete at the Arena in the first three of six races to decide the world's professional championship.

The meeting of these great skaters is the first match of its kind ever held in Chicago and because of the boom of skating in the last three years, followers of the steel blade sport are expected to turn out in force.

Worthy Opponents.

There is no questioning the right of these speed artists to struggle for the title. Each has worked his way to the foremost rank by defeating every man of ability on both sides of the ocean. Each holds world's records and some of the marks which have stood for years are expected to go by the board.

Since matching, they have been in training to improve their speed on the turns and stretches. Each knows the ability of the other, and the least little slip may decide the result of a race. The track will be scraped today and no skating will be permitted until after the races.

Pick McLean for Sprints.

Close followers of ice racing are in a quandary in picking the winner. Many believe McLean will win the shorter races and Mathisen the longer contests. The Norwegian has been accustomed to long distance skating and has done little racing on curved tracks. McLean has done most of his work on circular courses.

If McLean has the necessary endurance to retain his speed and hold a sprint at the finsih, he may upset the best laid plans of the Norwegian. Although the races will be decided on the pursuit plan, each is a good enough judge of pace to know just how fast he must go to be on even terms with his opponent.

Will Meet Challengers.

Although the meeting of this pair will be for the world's championship, the winner has agreed to meet any challengers so there will be no cloud hanging over his title. The first race tonight will start at 8:30 o'clock, and there will be twenty-five minutes intermission between each of tonight's three races, and the same interval between tomorrow night's events. During the rests exhibitions of fancy skating by Miss Bunny Moore and speed races between local amateurs will be held. Walter Eckersall of THE TRIBUNE will act as starter.

CARDS TO TAKE FEW MEN SOUTH

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 5.—Fewer players will be taken on the spring training trip of the St. Louis Nationals next season than in several years. The squad, according to President Rickey, probably will number twenty-five. Although the camp has not been selected, President Rickey said it would be somewhere in Texas.

The Cardinals have trained at San Antonio for the last three years and it is probable the club will return there, although Houston, Temple, and San Angelo are under consideration. There are no high winds in the vicinity of San Antonio and the climate usually is dry and warm in the early spring.

President Rickey expects to have the squad start training on March 18. The new National league rule in regard to training trips provides no team shall start its spring work until thirty days before the opening of the season. The Cardinals probably will put in two weeks in the camp, as they must return to St. Louis in time to play the Browns in the spring series and have a day or two of rest before the opening.

Indians Announce Games for Spring Training Trip

Cleveland, O., Jan. 5.—James C. Dunn, president of the Cleveland Indians, and Business Manager E. S. Barnard have arranged for the Cleveland team to leave here March 16 for its regular training grounds at New Orleans.

Exhibition games already arranged are:

March 24 and 31, at New Orleans; April 4 and 5, New York Giants at Dallas; April 6 and 7, New York Giants at Houston; April 8, 9, and 10, New York Giants at New Orleans; April 11, New York Giants at Memphis, Tenn.; April 12, Giants at Chattanooga; April 13, Giants at Lexington, Ky.; April 16, at Indianapolis.

Braves to Get Herzog for Doyle and Wilson

Greenville, S. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Walter E. Hapgood, business manager of the Boston Nationals, who was here today, arranging a game to be played here April 6 between the Braves and the New York Americans, tonight announced his club would secure Charley Herzog from the New York Giants in trade for Larry Doyle and probably Catcher Art Wilson. Doyle and Wilson were secured from the Chicago Cubs Friday in trade for Pitcher George Tyler.

Heine Zimmerman Signs Giant Contract for 1918

New York, Jan. 5.—Heine Zimmerman, third baseman of the New York National league club, today signed a contract for 1918.

President Tener and Secretary Heydler of the National league will leave here tomorrow for Cincinnati to attend the annual meeting of the national commission next Monday. President Hempstead of the Giants also will attend the meeting.

PRESENT AND FORMER CHAMPS TO CONTEST IN CARY SKI EVENT

One of the best fields that has ever competed in a ski tournament will be seen in the national championship meet to be staged by the Chicago Norge Ski club at Cary on Jan. 27. Champions in all classes will be on hand, and former titleholders in nearly every division will try to win back their honors.

Owing to poor railroad facilities on Saturdays it has been decided to stage the entire tourney on one day, Jan. 27. Originally it was planned to spread the contests over Jan. 26 and 27.

Ragnar Omtvedt and Ludwig Holby, professional and amateur titleholders, will both be on hand to defend their championships. Sven Welhaven, Milwaukee; Einar Jensen, Chicago; Ingolf Sand, Stoughton, Wis.; Gilbert Hagenda, Mount Horeb, Wis.; Oscar Soudby, Stoughton; Hans Hansen, Minneapolis, and Tom Hagen, Menominee, Mich., are some of the star amateur entries. Among the well known "pros" who are coming for the tournament are Lars and Anders Haugan Henry Hall, Barney Reilly, and Andrew Olsen. Hall and Lars Haugan are former champions.

All of last week was spent in preparing the steel slide and the hill below it for the tournament. The snow has been packed firmly on the steel runners and unless a prolonged warm spell sets in the meet will have no chance of postponement. The hill has been cut away somewhat, allowing the jumpers more chance to keep their feet as they land, and also to increase their marks.

FRISCO MAY NOT BOOK CUB GAMES

That the spring training trip plans of the Cubs may go amiss is indicated by a telegram received yesterday from San Francisco in which Henry Berry, owner of the Frisco ball club, declared he would not consent to playing the Chicago team this spring. It was the plan of the Cub officials to train at Pasadena and run up to San Francisco for a week end series of four games, two against San Francisco and two against Oakland. Because of the late starting date for training, it would be impossible to schedule any more.

When asked by a TRIBUNE correspondent concerning the matter, Mr. Berry said:

"There is no rule in the Coast league against our teams playing exhibition games, but the Cubs have none scheduled with us as yet. I would not bother to open my park for two or three games and will not consent to playing the Cubs at all if they figure on running up here from Pasadena for only three or four games in this vicinity."

In the past big league clubs training in California have found that the only place they could get any real money at the gate was in San Francisco and in Oakland on Sunday mornings. If the Cubs have to depend only on small towns for exhibition games, it is likely the trip to the coast will cause the paying out of a lot of money and the taking in of only a little.

A report from Cincinnati yesterday stated the Reds were likely to train at Camp Sheridan at Montgomery Ala. This would leave Shreveport, La. open for some big league club, as the Reds have a contract to train there

BASKETBALL GAMES

DEFEATING the Polish American A. C. lightweights last night, 23 to 6, the Kosciuszko Mercuries won their eleventh straight game. The game, played on the losers' floor, was featured by the basket shooting of Cold. He had five baskets and one free throw. Lineup:

HAMLIN TRIANGLE JUNIORS ended the streak of Davis square 130 pounders in a hot basket game at Hamlin park. The home five piled up a good lead in the first half, and although the Davis square bunch made a gallant fight through the second period, Hamlin won, 43 to 22. It was the victors' eighth game in a row. De Caulwe at center and Carmody at right forward started caging field goals as soon as the game began. At the interval Triangle Juniors were ahead, 24 to 7. Order Appeal Bond Paid in Old Mineral Springs Case

Valparaiso, Ind., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—The appeal bond of Peter Crumpacker and twelve others concerning the failure of the Mineral Springs racetrack at Porter, which was closed years ago by Indiana soldiers, was ordered paid tonight by Special Judge Funk. Judgment was rendered for the Manhattan Lumber company of Chicago for $33,441.40, and for twenty-one cross-complainants for $8,823.44. This case has been through three Circuit courts and the Indiana Supreme court, and may be again appealed.

Death Takes Dave Holland, Builder of Aqueduct Track

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 5.—Dave Holland, well known hotel and sporting man, who built the Aqueduct race rack at Queensborough, and was a stakeholder in the Fitzsimmons-Jeffries fight, died here today.

BOOKS DISTRICT GAMES FOR H. S. BASKET HONORS

Rock Island, Ill., Jan. 5.—The annual high school district basketball tournaments will be held on Friday and Saturday, March 1 and 2. A. J. Burton, vice president of the Illinois High School Athletic association, announced this today. Officials of the association decided in their last meeting to set the meeting of the state tournament later.

District tournaments will be held in the following cities, including the following counties:

Rockford—Jo Daviess, Stephenson, Winnebago, Boone, McHenry, De Kalb, Lee, Ogle, Carroll, Whiteside, Lake.

Joliet—Cook, Will, La Salle, Grundy, Putnam.

Galesburg—Knox, Warren, Henderson, Mercer, Rock Island, Henry, Stark, Peoria, Bureau, Schuyler, Hancock, Fulton, McDonough.

Decatur—Macon, Piatt, Logan, De Witt.

Bloomington—McLean, Tazewell, Woodford, Marshall, Livingston.

Champaign — Kankakee, Iroquois, Ford, Champaign, Vermilion, Douglas.

MAROON QUINTET RUNS OVER IOWA IN FIRST BATTLE

Capt. Gorgas and Vollmer Lead Attack Which Nets 46-20 Victory.

BY MAROON.

Chicago opened its Big Ten basketball schedule with a 46 to 20 victory over Iowa at Bartlett gym, running up the biggest score made by a Maroon team in several years. Capt. Bill Gorgas, who scored twenty-two points, more than the Hawkeye total, with nine baskets and four free throws, and Vollmer, a sophomore, who tossed nine through the ring, gave Page's quintet its topheavy count.

Capt. Gorgas scored first with a long toss from the corner; then Iowa started off as if to do business. By a fast passing game the Hawkeyes fed Forward Olson four times, and he scored every time. Then Gorgas batted two baskets on jumps, and when Vollmer started to ring up his goals the rout started. At the half the Maroons had a 26 to 10 margin.

Second Half a Rout.

The second half was a duplicate of the first. The Maroon floor game, with Bryan, Hinkle, and Gorgas sweeping the weak Iowa team aside, rushed the ball to another series of baskets, which piled up the big total.

Purple, 33; Badgers, 17

Scoring the first point and never being in danger of being headed, Northwestern opened its conference basketball season last night at Patten gymnasium by trouncing Wisconsin, 33 to 17. The Purple players showed the results of hard practice, and their perfect team play and accurate passing bewildered the Badgers at times. Underhill and Ellingwood displayed exceptional form in shooting baskets, each making four from difficult angles. The score at half time was 15 to 9, in favor of the Purple.

Wisconsin showed a flash early in the second half, when Zulfer and Chandler each made a basket after the whistle blew, but Northwestern soon rallied and quickly stopped the visitors' attack. The Purple received many penalties for fouling. A capacity crowd saw the game. Lineup:

THE CLUBMAN HAS HIS SAY.

NOW that the open season on water fowl is over, suppose we take a look into the club question. While clubs or shooting preserves are not ideal, compared with the old "free shooting," the old days and ways are gone never to return, and perhaps the present day preserve system has some advantages after all.

These columns have been and are open to those who dislike the club idea, and it is only fair to hear the other side of the story. The following, although discussing the Illinois river clubs in particular, applies to preserves generally and was written by a member of one of the better known clubs on the river:

"A recent correspondent from Beardstown, signing himself A. M. B., made the statement: 'I live where there is supposed to be the best duck hunting in the United States. Thousands of ducks fly over here every year, but I cannot get a shot at them because all the hunting grounds are owned by clubs.'

"The statement is literally untrue. If A. M. B. really resides at or near Beardstown he knows, as every resident of Beardstown knows, that there are countless good hunting points within a stone's throw of Beardstown, and many residents of that town annually make good incomes guiding hunters to the good hunting places.

"The tracts owned by the duck clubs are insignificant and wholly lost in the vast expanse of territory around Beardstown, Browning, Chillicothe, Bath, Havana, Chandlerville, and many other points along the Illinois river, where annually thousands of hunters assemble and shoot countless thousands of migratory birds. If A. M. B. cannot get a shot at the millions of ducks which inhabit that region, it is not because of lack of opportunity.

"The one thing that your correspondent did not tell is that because of the existence of some of these clubs there are now millions of game birds in that region where there used to be only thousands, and that because of the scientific manner in which these clubs have handled the subject and cooperated with state and federal fish and game commissioners there is duck shooting for everybody in the Illinois river valley, where formerly only a comparatively few enjoyed it. If these clubs were not there, and if they did not annually spend thousands of dollars establishing resting and feeding grounds for wild fowl, there wouldn't be enough ducks in that valley to supply even the few.

"Because these clubs have established resting and feeding grounds, millions of birds are lured to this locality which otherwise would pass it by. If this work of establishing such grounds were left to the residents of the valley it would not be accomplished at all, and in a short time that valley would be wholly burned out. Because of these clubs, and particularly the Crane lake preserve and Grand Island club, the locality west of Bath and near Beardstown, Browning, and Chillicothe has become one of the greatest game preserves in the United States, and the government gives the credit to the clubs because it has kept in close touch with everything that has been done.

"Last year Mr. McIlhenny of Louisiana, the leading American authority on wild fowl conservation and appointed by the government to conserve the interests of game birds, visited this locality in person and made a careful inspection of conditions. He reported that Crane lake and Grand island, two of the hated institutions, were solely responsible for keeping the ducks in the Illinois river valley and that without their money and their efforts the valley would soon cease to be a good duck shooting neighborhood.

"It was his intention, and still is, to create a string of preserves for resting and feeding, all the way from Canada to the gulf, and establish a flyway which would annually be followed by the great mass of ducks and geese that originate in the Saskatchewan country. And, much to his gratification, he found these two large clubs not only eager to help the cause but more than willing to yield the big lakes to the government without charge.

"The duck clubs do not begin to own all the good hunting grounds. They do not own one-fiftieth of them. They are insignificant in extent and tucked away in pockets away from the river The Grand island and Crane lake preserves do not own over 5,000 acres each. The land is marshy and overflown. They are fit only for duck hunting.

"For outside proof that the natives have good duck shooting all through the region, ask the crews of the trains on the C., P. & St. L., which runs from Peoria to Jacksonville, how many thousands of ducks have been carried by natives the past fall. The officials of the railway will tell you that they have never seen so many ducks taken from the hunting grounds, and they, as well as the responsible residents of the country, give credit to the clubs. Yours truly, W. K. C."

Purdue Fans Foresee Title as De Pauw Bows, 48-15

Lafayette, Ind., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Purdue easily defeated De Pauw at basketball tonight, 48 to 15. Purdue's rushing offensive and strong defensive proved too much for the Methodists. Smith led the scoring for the Boilermakers with twenty points. Markley ran him a close second, having eighteen to his credit. Markley played the best all around game for Purdue, seeming to be everywhere on the floor at once.

McClure and Carlisle did good offensive work for De Pauw. The Boilermaker fans were much pleased with the showing of the team and are confident it will cop the Big Ten basketball title this year.

Wabash Avenue "Y" Fives Score Three Victories

Wabash Avenue Y. M. C. A. fives made a clean sweep of the games played in their gymnasium last night. The 105 pound team defeated the Sacramento Triangles, 30 to 3; the Intermediates won from the Manual A. C., 25 to 6, and the heavyweight five won from Sacramento heavies, 32 to 6.

SKILL WITH CUE WINS FAME FOR MILK WAGON BOY

BY JOE DAVIS.

From delivery boy on a milk wagon in the quiet city of Amsterdam, N. Y., to pocket billiard champion of the world is the meteoric rise of Frank Taberski, now of Schenectady, N. Y.

By defeating Ralph Greenleaf of Monmouth, Ill., at Milwaukee last week, Taberski gained permanent possession of the Brunswick emblem, which he won from John Layton at Sedalia in September, 1916.

Since that time he has defended his title nine times, winning in turn from Ralph Greenleeaf, E. I. Ralph of Hightstown, N. J.; James Maturo of Denver, Louis Kreuter of New York, Bennie Allen of Kansas City, Larry Stoutenburgh of Buffalo, Joe Concannon of New York, Louis Kreuter of New York, and Ralph Greenleaf.

Rivals De Oro's Record.

This feat is one of the greatest in the annals of the pocket game. Alfredo De Oro up to 1908 lost only four individual matches in twenty-three years. In 1911 De Oro won an emblem outright, and was well on the way to another until defeated by Bennie Allen of Kansas City in October, 1913. Few players cared to tackle Allen and he won the emblem outright in December, 1914, having defended it only five times. This does not compare with Taberski's ten straight wins.

There was no title play in 1915, but in March, 1916, W. E. Blankenship won the tournament staged at Chicago. He was defeated by Layton in the first challenge match, Taberski next winning from Layton.

Three Great Finishes.

Taberski had three wonderfully fine matches. Against Layton he was 117 balls behind at the start of the third block, but won by 13 balls, and against Allen he won a nerve trying battle by 2 balls. Joe Concannon looked like a winner at the end of the second block, but Taberski made 277 while his opponent was getting 92.

This was the greatest finish in the history of the game and stamped the Schenectady's expert as one of the nerviest players the world has produced. He is the owner of three billiard rooms.

Taberski's victory is popular with the pocket billiard star, as it means the holding of another tournament and put the next emblem in commission.

Record as Champion.

In the tournament at Chicago Taberski finished third. The matches he played in gaining the emblem were as follows:

1916.

Sept. 6 at Sedalia—Taberski, 450; Layton, 437.

Oct. 20 at New York—Taberski, 450; Greenleaf, 407.

Jan. 12 at Pittsburgh—Taberski, 450; Maturo, 420.

April 13 at Akron—Taberski, 450; Allen, 449.

May 23 at Buffalo—Taberski, 450; Stoutenburgh, 367.

Oct. 3 at Buffalo—Taberski, 450; Concannon, 393.

Jan. 4 at Milwaukee—Taberski, 450; Greenleaf, 355.

Ten Stars in Tourney.

Plans for the all star three cushion tournament, starting Jan. 21 at the Inter Ocean building, are well under way. Ten of the leading experts of the country will compete for the gold medal donated by C. D. Peacock, Inc.

Pierre Maupome of Cleveland entered the New Year with a fine lead in the Interstate Three cushion league, although he lost his first game in twelve on his own table to Charley McCourt. John Layton took two games from Ora Morningstar and holds second place, while Bob Cannefax, by defeating Ryder twice, took third place from Augie Kieckhefer of Mussey's. Hugh Heal is due here this week, meeting Joe Capron at Bensinger's.

Kieckhefer Leads Circuit.

Kieckhefer won his opening game of the year in the Chicago league and strengthened his hold on first place. Morin, who has been on the sick list, was not in action, but advanced to second place. Standing:

DE ORO AND OTIS SET FOR CUE CONTEST ON CUBAN GROUND

HAVANA, Cuba, Jan. 5.—With the arrival today of Alfred De Oro, world's champon three cushion player, and his challenger, Charley Otis, everything is in readiness for the three cushion championship match of the world, which will be held at the Payret theater Jan. 10, 11, and 12.

Interest in this match, the first world's championship to be played on Cuban soil, is at a high pitch, not only among the large tourist population gathered here for the winter, but among Cuban people as well.

The match will be at 150 points up, and will be played in blocks of fifty. President Menocal and many members of his official family will attend the opening game, and the visit will mark a personal triumph for De Oro, as he was recently pensioned by the Cuban government for the part he has played in clean sport and for the fame he has brought to his native land.

De Oro in his fifty-fifth year holds the three cushion carom billiard championship. For many years he reigned supreme in the pocket billiard world. The Cuban was first champion as far back as 1887, when he won the pocket billiard title. Since then, over a period of thirty years, he has almost continuously held either the pocket or three cushion crown. For a time he held both titles.

MORIN VICTOR IN CUE MATCH

Charley Morin, by bagging a brace of fives nearing the finish, defeated Harry Burton [42], 52 to 35 in their Chicago league series at Bensinger's Monroe room last night. At the sixtieth inning Morin had 36 points and was only five ahead on an even string. Two innings later he counted five and followed with a similar run. These quintets paved the way to victory. Morin's top mark was 5, the Dearborn star getting a 4 for high.

Cue Men to Make Fight Against First Floor Rule

President Frank Pasdeloup of the Chicago Bowling and Billiards Protective league has called a meeting at 646 Otis building for Tuesday at 3 o'clock to take action on the refusal of Maj. Funkhouser to issue licenses to rooms located above the first story. The refusal of the second deputy of police is based on a law passed in 1911 which provides that a "clear view of such premises must be obtained from the street."

Still Trying to Decide Grid Title; Games Today

Although they've already prolonged the football season more than six weeks, officials of the Chicago league still are hopeful of deciding the championship. Four of the finalists will mingle this afternoon in a double header at Dexter Park pavilion, Mohawks meeting Evanston and Racine Cardinals playing Ternadoes. Pattie Driscoll will play quarter for Evanston.

Three Tie for Honors with 47 in 50 Bird Shoot

With scores of 47, C. G. Burmeister, O. H. Hassel, and C. Pike tied for honors in the fifty bird event from the sixteen yard rise at the Lincoln Park Gun club yesterday. In the other contest George Peck, professional, and O. H. Hassel tied for first place by breaking twenty-five straight targets.

DRAW IN LONG MAT BATTLE.

Peoria, Ill., Jan. 5.—George Roumas of Peoria and Young Americus of Omaha wrestled 1:15:00 to a draw last night in a match billed for the welterweight championship of the world. They weighed 145 pounds. Frank Beatty of Springfield won from Fred Holmes of Peoria in straight falls. They are lightweights.

Fierce Mat Bouts in '80s by Evan Lewis and Rivals

BY R. L. CARY JR.
[Hyder Ali.]

IN the early '80s Chicago was full of wrestlers, and the sport was more popular than it is today, and better patronized. Among the wrestlers who appeared in public at that time were Greek George, Farmer Burns, Tom Cannon, Billy Muldoon, Tom McMahon, and others. Later on they were joined by Evan Lewis, "the Strangler," who was brought to Chicago by Tommy Gill, a railroad man from Milwaukee.

Lewis for many years held his own when pitted against the best men in the country, and strangers from abroad came over to pit their skill and strength against him, only to be thrown, one after another. Tom Cannon, a noted English wrestler, considered a wonder in his day, came on to try conclusions, and was thrown rather easily. Farmer Burns, who had a great reputation throughout the west, fared no better, and the town grew fairly wild over Lewis and his wrestling ability.

Tackles Famous Jap Grappler.

About that time there blew into the city Matsada Sorachishi, a Japanese, who had been throwing all comers in his native land, and who was heralded as a world beater. He challenged Lewis for a match, and the bout took place at Battery D armory, which was then the theater of most of the important events in the wrestling and pugilistic line. Lewis fastened his famous strangle hold on the Jap and soon brought him to the carpet.

Matsada believed that, with the strangle hold barred, he could throw Lewis, and made another match with the strangle hold eliminated. Central Music hall was secured for the clash, it being the first time in history it had ever been leased for anything in the athletic line, and it proved to be the last. When the night of the match came the hall was crowded to its utmost capacity, many people being turned away.

Twists Oriental's Leg.

Harry Palmer, then sporting editor of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, was agreed upon as referee, but the men had been wrestling only a few minutes when Lewis clutched the Jap's leg and began to twist it, calling on him to turn over, which the Jap for a time refused to do. People arose from their seats and began hailing Lewis as a brute and cried out to hang him: I had been watching the match closely from the wings. Whether Palmer lost his head, or whether he was afraid, I shall never know, but he stood there, white in the face, while the whole house was in a turmoil, and it looked as though there might be trouble ahead.

At this juncture "Parson" Davies stepped over to me, having no idea of what I would do, and asked me to decide the match, saying that he was afraid there would be a riot unless something was done. I told him that Palmer was the referee, but that if he could not decide it, and would ask me to, I would do it. Palmer at once came over to me and made the request.

Catch as Catch Can Hold.

Stepping forward to the edge of the stage, I held up my hand to the crowd for quiet, and then informed them that catch as catch can was just what the name implied, only in this case the strangle hold had been barred, and that when the articles were being signed Lewis had informed the Jap that this time he was going to twist his leg, to which Matsada had replied, "You twisty my leggee, me twisty your leggee, too," and that he would doubtless have done so had he gotten the chance.

That being the case, I said, I should award the first fall to Lewis in 18:20, and if the Jap was not on the stage at the end of twenty minutes I should give Lewis the second fall and the match. At the end of twenty minutes the Jap failed to show up and I decided the match in Lewis' favor, amid hisses and cat calls from all parts of the hall. I was escorted out of the hall through the stage entrance by the police, and this action on their part doubtless saved me from bodily harm.

Loses Job, but Regains It.

The next morning I was condemned by my own paper, the Inter Ocean, for the decision I had rendered, and found myself walking the street, jobless because of it. But I was soon sent for and installed in my old position, as my employer was assured that that was the only decision that I could have rendered under the conditions of the match. That night I had something of a strenuous time on the streets, however, and in one State street resort I should probably have been mobbed had not Bill Bradburn and Pat Killen come to my rescue in the nick of time.

The papers the next morning came out with sensational statements about the Jap's leg being broken by Lewis, but these statements were made without investigation and were far from the truth. In company with the "Parson" I visited the Jap at his hotel the next morning. He limped a little, but had his leg been broken as alleged he could not have put his foot to the ground, but in less than two weeks he was wrestling again, proving that his injuries were not as serious as had been stated.

Lewis Pins Britisher.

It was shortly after this that "Parson" Davies issued through the Inter Ocean an offer to back Lewis in a catch-as-catch-can wrestling match against any man in the world, and one night there appeared in the office an Englishman who, in a cockney dialect, announced his willingness to accept the defi in behalf of Jack Wannop, who it appeared had acquired a reputation on the other side of the pond. The "Parson" was sent for and a match was arranged for a stake of $1,000 a side to be wrestled in Chicago.

It proved to be the biggest picnic that Lewis had ever struck, as Wannop was but a toy in his hands and there were at least a dozen men in Chicago at that time that could have thrown him. The result was a great disappointment both to Wannop and his backer, and the latter soon returned to England, while Wannop drifted into the fighting game with just as mediocre success as in wrestling.

GRAND CIRCUIT MEETS MAPPED

SCHAUER OUTFIGHTS MINOR.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 5.—Johnny Schauer of St. Paul got a newspaper decision over Jimmy Minor of Memphis, Tenn., in twelve rounds. The men are lightweights. Schauer forced the fighting from the start.

ATHLETIC SHOW FOR MAT FUND

Indoor ball, basketball, and wrestling, with the headline contest the City Indoor league tussle for first place between Hennepin Giants and Shaw Taxis, will set the money rolling in for the service camps' mat equipment fund at Hebrew institute this afternoon. The C. H. I. gymnasium is at 1258 Taylor street.

The basketball game between C. H. I. 135 pounders and Training-Dodgers will be the first event at 2 o'clock. In wrestling, Ben Reuben of Great Lakes Naval station will tackle Young Beall in the middleweight class and Singer of Great Lakes meets Fred Smith in the welterweight class.

The Taxi band of thirty pieces is an added attraction. It will be on hand to help root for the chauffeur ball players in their hard game. Neither Taxis nor Hennepins have yet been defeated in their league schedule.

DIES OF OLD BALL INJURY.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Arthur Vandenberg of Holland, Mich., is dead of injuries received in the spring of 1915, when he was hit in the chest with a baseball. The injury developed into tuberculosis.

BOWLERS OF CHICAGO MAY PROVIDE ALLEYS FOR ROCKFORD BOYS

Members of the Chicago Bowling association at their monthly meeting voted to ask the authorities at Camp Grant to accept a gift of at least ten bowling alleys, which will be provided by members of the association and the bowlers of Chicago. It is understood there are no alleys at the camp.

A committee, consisting of Louis Peterson, David Luby, Leo Schueneman, S. S. Berger, and Nick Bruck was appointed to visit Rockford Tuesday and seek with Gen. Kennon or other proper authority to learn if the proposed gift will be accepted.

It is assumed the Y. M. C. A. or K. of C. will be willing to provide a place within the camp for the alleys, maintain them, and operate them on a basis that will enable the privates to participate in their favorite sport occasionally.

If the proposition of the committee is accepted, plans are ready for holding a tournament in Chicago, from the proceeds of which the $12,000 or $14,000 required to buy and install the alleys will be raised.

CAMP SELECTS SERVICE STARS; NO ALL-AMERICAN

Walter Camp has picked an All-American service team, in place of an All-America intercollegiate team, for Collier's this year, out of deference to war conditions. The service team follows:

Ends—Rasmussen, Nebraska and Camp Grant; Gardiner, Carlisle and Camp Custer.
Tackles—Buckett, Oregon and Mare island; West, Colgate and Camp Dix.
Guards—Black, Yale and Newport naval reserves; Allmendinger, Michigan and Fort Sheridan.
Center—Callahan, Yale and Newport naval reserves.
Quarter back—Watkins, Colgate and Mineola aviation camp.
Half backs—Casey, Harvard and Boston navy yard; Minot, Harvard and Camp Devens.
Full back—Smith, Michigan and Great Lakes Naval Training station.

After reviewing the season Mr. Camp names some of the stars of the intercollegiate season, and his All-America team can be guessed from the names mentioned first. It would follow:

Ends—Robeson, Rutgers, and Weeks, Brown.
Tackles—Henury, Washington and Jefferson; Hauser, Minnesota.
Guards—Sies, Pittsburgh; Rollins, Rutgers.
Center—Bailey, West Virginia.
Quarter Back—Bell, Pennsylvania, with Boynton, Williams, second.
Backs—Guyon, Georgia Tech.; McLaren, Pittsburgh; Berry, Pennsylvania.

Rose Poly Will Promote More Sports for Students

Terre Haute, Ind., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—The Rose Poly Athletic association has followed Coach Rufus Gilbert's recommendation and planned for more varied work, including bowling, boxing, and handball. These latter will be interclass and interfraternity affairs. A local set of bowling alleys will be used two afternoons in the week, but handball and boxing will be in the Poly gym.

Fred Pence was elected president of the association and Clark Foulkes secretary-treasurer. Alvin Barnes was made manager of the basketball team, Rudolph Wiedemann of the football team, Heran of baseball, and Cromwell of track and tennis.

Chicago Man Qualifies in Pinehurst Golf Meet

Pinehurst, N. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—J. R. Towle, the veteran Chicago golfer, qualified for the handicap eight in today's special qualifying round of the New Year tournament.

DEMPSEY LOOPS LOOP IN SEARCH FOR J. WILLARD

Jack Dempsey, Pacific coast heavyweight, and his manager, Jack Kearns, made a round dozen unsuccessful tours of the loop and many excursions into Chicago's residence district yesterday in an effort to locate Jess Willard for a brass tacks conversation about a boxing match, but they couldn't find the ring champion.

"We're going to keep on his trail," Kearns said. "We'll stay right in the city, and we're going to see Willard and make him say whether he wants to fight Dempsey; and, if not Dempsey, Fred Fulton. If we can't get satisfactory answers from Jess Willard Dempsey is going to tackle the heavyweights as fast as they come. Jack will take on Fulton, if Willard doesn't, or he will fight Homer Smith or Bill Brennan at Racine. All we want is the chance to show the goods, and we'll force Willard to take notice."

Bryan Downey and Joe Eagan will box here next Wednesday night at bargain counter prices. Tom Jones, manager of Downey, objected to the prices and said he wouldn't let Downey fight. The state boxing commission informed Jones if that was the case the promoters would have to confiscate his forfeit money. Then Jones cooled off. There will be a fight.

Fulton's Speed Impresses Hot Springs Ring Fans

Hot Springs, Ark., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Fred Fulton played through three rounds each with Heavyweights Jack Coleman of Texas and Marshall Clairborne of this city last night before a large crowd. Fulton was declared the fastest big man seen here. He made no effort to stop either of the men.

ST. LOUIS AFTER ALLEY TOURNEY.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 5.—The St. Louis Tenpin association will make a determined bid to land the 1919 tournament of the American Bowling congress. The event will be awarded at the tournament to be held in Cincinnati beginning in February. St. Louis was the scene of the national tournament six years ago. Several other cities, including Milwaukee, Detroit, Chicago, and Peoria, also are in the field for the event.

Ritchie in Draft Class 1 Despite War Camp Boxing

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 5.—The district exemption board here has refused Willie Ritchie's claim that he should not be put in class 1 under the new questionnaire, on the grounds that he is "in the military service." The board ruled that boxing instructors are not in the military service and are subject to draft the same as other individuals.

W. A. A. U. EXPELS CLUB.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 5.—The Columbian Athletic club of St. Louis today was expelled from the Western Amateur Athletic union because the basketball team of the club took part in an unauthorized match with Sparks college of Shelbyville, Ill.

INDOOR TENNIS COURTS AT PIER READY FOR PLAY

The marking of ten indoor tennis courts was completed at the Municipal pier last week, and these will be thrown open this week to devotees of the game without charge, for play all through the winter. R. E. England of the Sherwood Tennis club will control the indoor play, having been delegated by President C. A. Pierce of the Chicago Tennis association. The marking of the courts and other routine was handled through efforts of the Chicago Tennis association after permission of the city authorities had been secured.

An indoor city championship will be held later, making the second annual event. Last year W. C. Miller of the Chicago Tennis club won the singles, and Marshall Ketchum and Harold Gifford the doubles. Miller will play through the tourney this year in an effort to retain his honors.

The courts are covered and protected from the weather. They are laid out in rows in the long sheds along the elevated street car tracks on the pier. They are open for play seven days in the week, with play limited to one hour when parties are waiting.

After working for weeks to round up the names of tennis players of the Chicago district, the special committee in charge of the Chicago Tennis association's project of publishing a directory of sport here, has assembled most of its data. The directory will include a complete list of all Chicago and suburban clubs, with officers' names and addresses, and will list all players of Chicago, both club members and unattached.

In order to have the roster of unattached players complete, President C. R. Pierce of the association requested THE TRIBUNE's aid in notifying those players who do not belong to clubs that they can register their names and addresses at any of Chicago's athletic goods houses or with him directly. Address C. R. Pierce, 4423 North Hermitage avenue.

BANKERS' TEAM IS VICTOR.

The First National bank team gave the Oak Park North Ends their first defeat in nine games, winning 23 to 13, at Oak Park. Hanneman made five baskets.

Are you prepared for accidents or illness?

A SCRATCH or cut may develop into blood-poisoning. An ordinary cold may turn into Pneumonia.

STAR NATATORS AT GREAT LAKES OUT FOR TITLE

Laubis and McGillivray Two Headliners of Jackies' Team.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

With Chief Yeoman Harry Hazlehurst as coach and First Class Hospital Apprentice Herman Laubis and Chief Yeoman Perry McGillivray as a star nucleus, the swimming team representing Great Lakes Naval Training station is right up in the fight for A. A. U. honors. This is the first time a team representing a service post ever competed in such championships.

Laubis, former Missouri A. A. of St. Louis distance star, was third in the National A. A. U. half mile event last year and won two of the famous St. Louis Mississippi river swims. He is nationally known. He started the jackies on the right road by capturing the mile swim in the Central A. A. U. championships last week at the Illinois Athletic club. His first was the only one not carried off by the I. A. C.

McGillivray Has Great Record.

Perry McGillivray needs no introduction. This holder of world's sprint records, former captain of Illinois A. C. water sport teams, and member of American Olympic teams, has not yet rounded into his best form, but is sure to pile up points for the jackies. He won second in the Central A. A. U. quarter mile last week, and now is determined to better this by a first in the half mile yet to be decided. Another swimmer of local prominence is B. G. McClanahan, former sprinter and relay racer for the Hamilton club.

Hazlehurst, McGillivray, and McClanahan are now in the athletics department at Great Lakes. They are busy from morning to night, six days a week, training the jackies to swim. Hazlehurst is in charge of indoor tank and water sports.

Other Members of Team.

Other fast swimmers who will help make the naval station team one of the big factors in A. A. U. competition this year are:

W. U. Biesterfeld, Radio school, distance swimmer from St. Louis.
Harold Keidel, gunners' mate, all around athlete from Milwaukee.
C. L. White, second class yeoman, former Chicago A. A. dash swimmer.
B. V. Doane, gunners' mate.
B. Weinberg, hospital school.
E. K. Boyce, oeal office.
B. G. Hildner, boat house, second class seaman.
A. Wilson, petty officers' school.
First Class Hospital Apprentice Phillips.
Gunners' Mat[illegible]itts.

Novices to Be Developed.

"We have had to take the sailor boys and teach them how to swim before we could work to develop any speed or fit them for competition in races," Hazlehurst said. "Some of the men who are real 'comers' on the team a week or so ago could barely keep afloat the length of our big 90x35 foot tank. All the jackies are enthusiastic, however, and if we are able to keep together our squad of water polo players we can give all the other swimming teams a run for the title, even including the big Chicago athletic clubs."

The Great Lakes jackies are anxious to keep their team together as long as possible during the championship season, but are likely to lose stars at any time by having men sent to sea. A wholesale order directing men to ship may break up the water polo combination just when the team is working smoothly.

Officials Boost Sport.

Lieutenant Commander J. B. Kaufman, naval athletic officer of the Great Lakes station, and Director of Athletics Herman Olcott are more than proud of the showing already made by their swimmers, and are sponsoring the sport and working hard to make swimming as popular as football or basketball among the young sailors. They point out no other form of athletics could be so valuable for boys whose lives may be jeopardized at sea.

STAR MERMAIDS MAY RACE HERE

Miss Olga Dorfner of Philadelphia, Miss Claire Galligan of New York, and little Miss Thelma Darby of Indianapolis, the three stars among American women swimmers, are likely to be seen in races at the Illinois Athletic club this winter. Miss Dorfner holds the American women's records from 50 yards to 300 yards, and Miss Galligan from 300 yards to one mile. Miss Darby, who is a 14 year old lassie, made a sweep of the races in last summer's outdoor Central A. A. U. championships, and made a great hit with that portion of Chicago's swimming fans.

Efforts were made to get the three mermaids for races in eastern cities after the Indianapolis girl and Miss Dorfner challenged Miss Galligan's present title at 220 yards, but these fell through. The Detroit A. C. made a bid for the three cornered event and offered to bring all three girl stars to that city during the indoor tank season just opened if sanctioned by National A. A. U. officials.

The Illinois A. C. officials hope to induce the girl stars to extend their journey west to this city for a special race here. They came to that decision after the women's races of Thursday night at the tricolor club won such popularity.

HUNTING DEATHS IN STATE NOW 15

Bloomington, Ill., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Another name was added this week to the list of hunting fatalities in central Illinois this season, making fifteen. Lawrence St. Peter of Papineau, crawling through a hedge fence after rabbits, caught the hammer of his gun upon a twig and the weapon was discharged. The load entered his lungs. He was able to reach his home, but died immediately afterwards. Thomas Fletcher of Lisbon lost his right hand while hunting rabbits. His hand was over the muzzle when the weapon was accidentally discharged. Paul Reed is in a Springfield hospital recovering from a bullet wound in his foot, received when his gun was accidentally discharged while hunting.

CHICAGO GIRLS LEAD IN SHOOT

Pinehurst, N. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—The trophy for the best rifle score made during the week among Annie Oakley's pupils at the Pinehurst Gun club today was awarded to Miss E. Beck of Chicago, who scored 137 out of a possible 150. Second prize was won by Miss Marian Hyde of Chicago, whose best score, 135, made some days ago, looked good for the prize until Miss Beck today added three points to her previous best score of the week.

DISPUTE FOLLOWS SWIMMING RACE

As a result of a protest over the timing in a race at the recent invitation swimming meet at the Union League club, contestants who were awarded first, second, and third places respectively in the forty yard free style probably will hand over the medals they won and swim the race again. M. Raphael, M. Fitzgerald, and H. Leahy of Sinai Social center got the medals on the basis of times in preliminary heats, as the final was dispensed with.

B. Meyer of Independence park claimed his time should have placed him second, instead of fourth. Swimming Instructor Fox of the Union League club has suggested Jan. 19 at 2 p. m. as the time for a reswim, with the four principals competing.

Another jumble in timing the forty yard back stroke led to a second protest by Independence park. This also will be investigated by the instructor.

NEW BOXING BILL WILL BE OFFERED NEWYORKSOLONS

"Real Fellers" Are Back of Effort to Restore Ring Sport.

BY RAY PEARSON.

Judging by the activity being displayed by followers of boxing in New York, the Empire state will not long be without legalized sport. There are a number of persons who may be tabbed the good ones of the game who, even before the demise of the Frawley law on Nov. 15, had set the wheels in motion to bring about the return of boxing. The result of these efforts will be shown at the next session of the state legislature when a new measure is presented.

It is said this bill already has been framed, and while it bears resemblance in general construction to the Frawley law, there are several modifications. A little more than six years of boxing under the Frawley law gave plenty of opportunity to find out the strong and the weak points of such sport and it is the hope of those who have their hearts in the mitt game that the weak points that cropped up in the past can be eradicated.

Club Bouts Not a Success.

The effort made to institute "club boxing" after the Frawley law died has not proved successful; in fact, it might more properly be called failure. It is no easy business to line up enough bona fide members to pull off shows without losing a lot of money, for the boxers and their managers aren't in the habit of scrapping for "love." They demand the coin and won't do business unless they get it, so it's up to the promoters to come across or close up, and the latter has been done in most cases.

The matter of police interference also had to be considered, and some of the "clubs" were haled into court to explain their methods of conducting shows. The "clubmen" scored a big victory, when one judge ruled it was O. K. for them to go ahead and stage contests for their members. But even that does not make the sport under the present plan successful.

War Booms Ring Game.

It is surprising how many big men of the country are strongly in favor of boxing, and in view of this it is even more surprising that the sport is curbed in so many states. There is little doubt that the war is resulting in a lot of good for the boxing game. At all the army camps boxing is the biggest sport, and most every cantonment has a star boxer for boxing instructor. Benny Leonard, Charley White, Johnny Kilbane, Mike Gibbons, Richie Mitchell, and numerous other ring stars are spending their time teaching the soldiers how to fight with their maulies.

A Brooklyn newspaper, taking the whip hand to aid in the passage of a new boxing measure in New York, has asked for and received the views of numerous big men on boxing.

T. R. Likes the Game.

Heading the list of indorsers of boxing are ex-Presidents Roosevelt and Taft. Ex-President Roosevelt said: "I have never been able to sympathize with the outcry against prizefighters. Most certainly prizefighting is not half so brutalizing or demoralizing as many forms of big business and of the legal work carried on in connection with big business. I have always regarded boxing as a first class sport, whether professional or amateur. I shall always maintain that boxing contests themselves make good, healthy sport."

Ex-President William Howard Taft said: "I think boxing is a very admirable exercise. I tried it for several years when in college and I thought I had derived benefit from it."

Even Gov. Whitman, who made the determined and successful fight against the Frawley law, could not deny that boxing was a beneficial sport, for he so states: "It is very likely that boxing is one of the best exercises to put men in good physical condition."

Other governors in favor of boxing are: Walter E. Edge, New Jersey; Marcus Holcomb, Connecticut; James M. Cox, Ohio; Horace F. Graham, Vermont; Frederick D. Gardner, Missouri; Lynn J. Frazier, North Dakota; Emmet D. Boyle, Nevada; Thomas E. Campbell, Arizona; M. Alexander, Idaho; Ernest Lester, Washington; E. L. Philipp, Wisconsin, and Sidney J. Catts, Florida.

West secured ten tricks.

The no-trump bid was, of course, risky, but offered a fair chance for game. The feature of the play was the king of diamonds from dummy at trick one. West was obliged to play desperately to secure the lead, and had he been more timid, north and south would have secured eight tricks.

After the first trick west proceeded to annex game and rubber. One trick at the end was a present from north, who should have led a low diamond at trick twelve. North had carried home an ace in a previous deal and could not forget it.

A change the suit signal is always fascinating, and the next deal offers a splendid example:

West secured four tricks only.

Had south led another spade at trick 4, west would have been certain to make at least the odd trick; but by playing the ten of spades at trick 3 north shouted to his partner to quit.

The heart suit, of course, was the only one which it was desirable to lead up to dummy, and the prompt response of south to the signal annihilated west.

South was careful also to discard his last heart at the first opportunity, which informed north that the king of hearts would fall on his ace.

QUESTIONS THEY ASK.

Keokuk, Ia.—[To the Editor.]—Would like your opinion on a game of pitch that came up yesterday. We were playing 7 points for the game. A had 6 points, B had 5 points, C had 4. C bid 2. B captured high, jack, and claimed he was out; A captured game and claimed he was out because he had but one to go; B claimed he went out in rotation, as high, low, jack, and game.
J. R. K.

Answer.—B won. Had B scored high, game, and A the jack, A would have won.

Learn Tia Juana Holding Drew Offer of $500,000

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 5.—It is reported that James W. Coffroth last fall refused an offer of $500,000 for his stock in the Tia Juana racetrack. This was before the government regulations prevented the opening of the Tia Juana winter meeting.

PURDUE'S CHART OF GRID GAMES ALREADY DRAWN

Purple Missing First Time in Years; New Foe in Michigan Aggies.

Lafayette, Ind., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Purdue's 1918 football schedule will in clude games with Chicago, Illinois, Notre Dame, Michigan Aggies, Wabash, Franklin and Depauw. The Michigan Aggies game will be played at Lansing on Nov. 9, taking the place of the game with Northwestern which Purdue expected to play at Evanston. The Boilermakers and Purple eleven will not meet next season, due to the fact that a satisfactory date could be arranged.

It was Purdue's turn to go to Evanston and there were two dates considered, Nov. 9 and Oct. 26. On Nov. 9 Michigan plays at Chicago, which would have been too strong a count attraction for a Purdue-Northwestern game at Evanston. As Oct. 26 is the Saturday between Purdue's games with Illinois and Chicago, it was thought best to keep that date open and give the team a needed rest.

Michigan Ags New Foe.

Michigan Ags will be on Purdue's program for the first time. The date will be the next to the last. The Boilermakers will open the season with Franklin on Stuart field. Following is the rest of the card for 1918:

Oct. 5, Oct. 12—Depauw here.
Oct. 19—Illinois here.
Oct. 26—Open.
Nov. 2—Chicago at Chicago.
Nov. 9—Michigan A. C. at Lansing.
Nov. 16—Wabash here.

Plan of Two Year Contracts.

The season will end with the Purdue-Notre Dame game on Stuart field. Purdue has made a two year agreement with the Michigan Aggies and Notre Dame. In 1919 the Aggies will come here and Purdue will go to Notre Dame. The schedule has been completed, but faculty approval is necessary before official announcement is made.

Local Handball Players Seek to Revive Sport

Although handball, one of the leading athletic games of years gone by, has been a side issue for a number of seasons, efforts are being made by local players to revive the sport and form a national association. Only a few matches of importance are played each year and the general public knows so little about the inside play the game attracts little or no interest. Anton Bilski of 1752 West North avenue is starting the movement to revive the game.

HOLIDAYS BLAMED FOR SLUMP IN WEEK'S REAL ESTATE MARKET

SECURITY HOLDER FINDS MORTGAGE HIS BEST ASSET

Says Stocks and Bonds Cannot Be Converted Without Loss.

As is its wont occasionally, even in good times, the week's real estate market experienced something of a slump. A holiday, stormy weather, the quiet which always obtains about the first of the year, added to generally dull market conditions, were mainly responsible for the poor showing, which compared unfavorably with the previous week. There was nothing of any real importance either reported or filed for record, the entire week's business, with few exceptions, being made up of commonplaces.

Of much interest is the statement made to Edgar M. Snow by a large holder of stocks and bonds, as well as real estate mortgages, that he regards his mortgages as not only the best of his investments but also the only liquid asset he possesses. The one great objection urged against real estate and real estate securities has been their alleged nonliquid character, and the statement of this investor is suggestive of a growing realization on the part of investors of the great advantages of real estate securities in times like the present.

Mortgage Loan Market.

The statement is made in the following article by Mr. Snow, touching on conditions in the mortgage loan market:

"The mortgage loan market presents some interesting, as well as unusual features.

"The tendency is unquestionably to higher interest rates than have obtained for some time past.

"Instead of the usual spread of about 1 per cent between the annual interest rate for downtown and outlying security, the rates today are more nearly uniform.

"The minimum downtown rate may be said to be 5½ per cent, with a much narrower field of lenders than for many years past, due in part to the fact that many lenders in large amounts are not in the market for mortgages, because they are withholding their funds for future government requirement.

"For the highest grade of apartment building security a 5½ per cent interest rate is still obtainable, though 6 per cent is the rule for loans outside the downtown center, and the indications are that existing conditions as to mortgage interest rates are likely to continue for a long time to come.

Favor Mortgages.

"Good real estate mortgages, however, were never looked upon with greater favor than now, and the demand for desirable mortgages in moderate amounts still far exceeds the supply of such, thus necessitating the numerous mortgage bond issues being put out.

"It is surprising to some persons, with good railroad and other bonds, heretofore held in high favor and regarded as liquid assets, and now obtainable to yield a higher return than real estate mortgages, that the latter should be preferred at this time by many investors.

"There are several reasons for this: First, the desire of holders of bonded securities to diversify their investments, particularly in the light of recent observation.

"Then there are those who prefer mortgages in any event rather than securities, even the best of which fluctuate in value.

Explanation Offered.

"Perhaps one substantial explanation for the greatly increased popularity of real estate mortgages may be found in the not isolated experience of an investor, who, after looking over his investment list of choice stocks, bonds, and real estate mortgages, with a view of realizing upon some of them and ascertaining that he could convert any of his mortgages at their full face value through the channel from which he had, from time to time, purchased them, less a brokerage charge of only 1 per cent, and after determining that he could not convert what he had always termed his liquid assets only at a greater loss than he was willing to sustain, remarked recently to the writer that he regards his mortgages as not only the best of his investments, but the only liquid asset he possesses."

Five Per Cent Loan.

A 5 per cent loan was reported in the downtown district during the week, the low rate being due to the exceptional character of the security. It is for $80,000, and was made by W. H. Henkle, trustee, to Francesca R. H. Kehlor, secured by an undivided one-third interest in the property on State street, 184 feet south of Randolph street, west front, 40x150 feet. This is part of the site under the retail store of Marshall Field & Co.

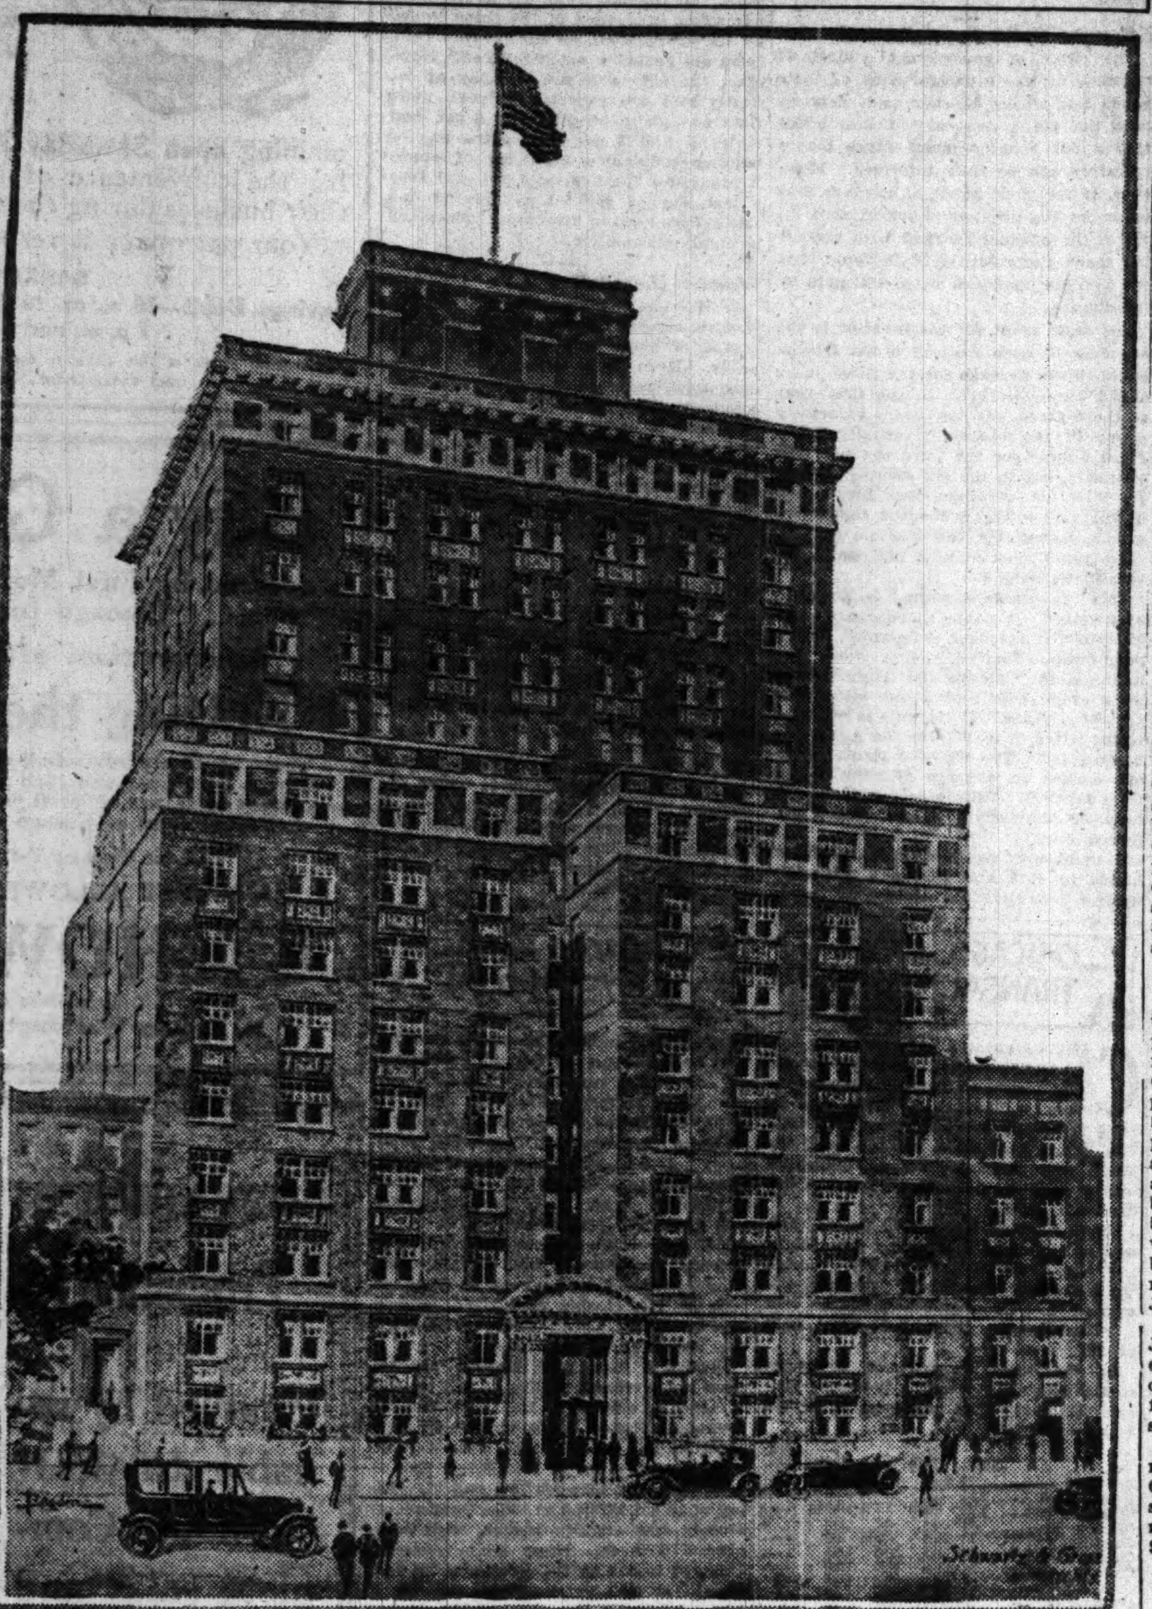
George Donnersberger has given to the Hibernian Banking association a trust deed to the northeast corner of Thirty-sixth street and Albany avenue, 615x475, and other property, to secure a loan of $150,000, five years at 6 per cent. This property was conveyed by quitclaim to Mr. Donnersberger last week by the Empire Car company.

Plan Two 24 Apartment Buildings for No. Kedzie

Architects Brand & Brand, formerly Foltz & Brand, 111 West Washington street, are preparing sketches for two three story buildings, each of twenty-four apartments, and a three story building, twenty apartment and six stores, North Kedzie avenue and Ainslie street, for Nelson Thomasson & Co., real estate and builders, 4813 North Kedzie avenue. They will have pressed brick and stone fronts, composition roofs, steam heat, and the stores probably metal ceilings. The two first mentioned buildings will each cost about $75,000 and the other about $80,000.

GOTHAM'S FIRST "SET BACK" HOTEL

New York's "Hamilton" Will Be Built According to the New Zoning Law Which Many Believe May Be Adopted in Chicago Some Time.



Hotel Hamilton

Chicago real estate men and builders are discussing with much interest the Hotel Hamilton now being erected in New York City. This building is the first hotel to be built under the "set back" plan, required by the new zoning law in New York, which many believe will be adopted in Chicago. The law regulates the height and character of building and segregates each type in certain districts called "zones." It is intended to discourage the erection of high buildings and relieve congestion.

The Hotel Hamilton will be fifteen stories in height, on a plot 133 x102 feet. It is built up flush to the sidewalk for nine stories, one and one-half times the width of the street (the limit under the zone law). It is then set back twenty feet, in accordance with the law, and built up six additional stories. That is the limit allowed for this type of building.

In view of the effectiveness with which the architectural problems caused by the zoning law have been met, the hotel is most unique. It will contain, when completed, 211 rooms and 200 bathrooms. It is located close to Riverside drive, at 141-153 West Seventy-third street.

The building will cost in excess of $1,035,000.

HARD COAL FOR CITY REQUESTED BY REALTY MEN

The Chicago real estate board is endeavoring to induce Fuel Administrator Garfield to lift the ban on the shipment of Pocahontas coal into Chicago, and at the monthly meeting of the organization last week President Perkins B. Bass was instructed to send the following telegram to Mr. Garfield:

"Over 75 per cent of Chicago's flat buildings are equipped with heating plants especially adapted for the use of Pocahontas coal. The cutting off of the supply of this coal has brought great hardship to many owners and tenants. The continuance of this supply will enable the owners to modify their heating plants during the warm weather for use of Illinois coal next winter."

It is claimed that sufficient heat cannot be obtained from Illinois coal, which is the only kind building owners can now obtain.

Action upon the matter was urged by Adolph F. Kramer of Draper & Kramer, who stated that in the recent cold spell it was almost impossible to keep apartment buildings properly heated with soft coal, and there resulted much hardship among tenants.

The date of the annual banquet of the board, scheduled for Jan. 12, has been changed to Saturday, Jan. 19, according to an announcement made at the meeting by Wyllys W. Baird of the banquet committee. Mr. Baird stated the preparations for the affair were proceeding very satisfactorily and that an excellent program will be arranged. The change in the bylaws of the organization by which the membership of its valuation committee will be reduced from fifteen to five will be discussed at a special meeting Thursday, Jan. 10.

Sue Former Directors of Realty Realization Co.

An echo of the disastrous failure of the Realty Realization company has found its way into the courts. Two suits for $30,000 each have been filed in the Superior court by Sig Niederberger and Alfred C. Langworthy against Potter Palmer Jr., George K. Owsley, Stuart H. G. Shepard, Frank Hall Childs, William M. Rumely, Perry M. Shepard, Henry S. Judson, and several other former directors of the company. The action was brought to recover money alleged to have been lost by the complainants.

St. Louisan Invests in Chicago Property

Henry Vahlkamp of St. Louis has purchased as an investment the property at the northwest corner of Elston and Wabansia avenues, 100x150 feet, for a cash price of $25,000.

WEEK'S SHOWING IN APARTMENTS IS A POOR ONE

Slump Not as Pronounced as in Other Classes of Property.

Although the market's activities were confined principally to apartment property, the showing was not up to that of the previous week, as regards both the volume of business and the character of the properties handled. While the slump was not as pronounced as in some classes of property, it was bad enough to make the week's showing an exceedingly poor one.

One of the most interesting deals of the week, although of no great magnitude, was a cash sale of clear property in the Hyde Park district. It covered the property at the northeast corner of Fifty-fourth place and Harper avenue, 72x123 feet, which has been purchased by Harry L. Mooar from the Chicago City Bank and Trust company, as executors of the estate of John G. Uschlies, for a reported price of $49,000 cash, clear. The corner is improved with a three story building containing eighteen apartments, with a gross annual rental of more than $8,000. The transaction was negotiated by Malooly & Co.

Apartment House Sale.

The eighteen apartment building at the northwest corner of Seventieth place and Crandon avenue, 127x127 feet, has been purchased by A. B. Crist from Seth Anderson for a reported price of $85,000, subject to $53,500 incumbrance. In part payment the purchaser transferred to Mr. Anderson a 160 acre farm at Plymouth, Ind., with a value of $20,000, it is said, and two buildings of three apartments each at 5219-21 Kimbark avenue, having a total value of $26,000, subject to an incumbrance of $12,000. The transaction was negotiated by George W. Simpson of J. L. Hess & Co.

Fred Johnson has acquired from John J. Johnson the apartment property on Kimball avenue, 271 feet north of Lawrence avenue, 60x125 feet, east front, for an indicated price of $30,000, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000.

The apartment house property at the northeast corner of Homan avenue and Grenshaw street, 48x125 feet, has been sold by Benjamin Schechter to Benjamin Hoffman for an indicated price of $28,500, subject to $20,500 incumbrance.

North Side Deal.

An apartment house transaction on the north side involved the sale by Alexander R. MacDonald to John C. Karr of the premises at the northwest corner of Ashland and Wilson avenues, 92x165 feet, for an indicated consideration of $73,500, subject to $59,250 incumbrance. The seller conveyed in part payment the flat building at the northwest corner of Lincoln street and Wilson avenue, 42x152 feet, for an indicated price of $23,000, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000.

Martin Gunderson has purchased from Olaus O. Krabel the property at the northwest corner of Kedzie boulevard and Altgeld street, 55x200 feet, improved with a building containing fifteen apartments, for a reported consideration of $40,500, subject to $10,000 incumbrance, the buyer giving in part payment the two apartment structure at the southwest corner of Belden and Spaulding avenues, 50x150 feet, for $10,000.

Charles A. Johnson was the broker in the deal for both parties. Several months ago Mr. Krabol sold to Charles F. Krueger the southwest corner of Kedzie and Altgeld, improved with an eighteen apartment building, for $55,000. The large building in the present deal has a yearly rental of $6,400.

Flat Changes Hands.

Another apartment house deal covered the property at the southwest corner of Ridge avenue and Paulina street, 60x125 feet, which has been sold by Mathias Blesius to George Hayward of Aurora, Ill., for an indicated consideration of $47,000, subject to $35,000 incumbrance.

The apartment property at the southeast corner of Langley avenue and Sixty-first street, lot 77x122 feet, has been conveyed by Bertha C. Callner to Franklin L. Haskell of the Haskell Trunk company, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $67,500, no stamps showing on the deed.

2 NORTH SHORE RESIDENCE DEALS FIGURE IN WEEK

Two north shore residence deals figured in the week's business. One covered the eight room colonial dwelling at 368 Moraine road, Highland Park, 150x250 feet, which has been purchased by Edgar M. Neff from Capt. John Roberts, president of Roberts & Oake, packers, who is now at Kansas City with the United States quartermaster's department, for a reported price of $14,000 cash. The brokers in the deal were Howard S. Evans of Broomell Brothers and Frederick B. Thomas of Whiteside & Wentworth. Mr. Thomas also sold to Carolyn W. Parker for Raynor F. Starr the eight room residence at 418 Cedar street, Winnetka, said to have been valued at $10,000.

The residence property at 246 Sheridan road, Winnetka, a twelve room dwelling, has been sold by L. H. Roach to A. A. Patterson for a stated consideration of $23,500.

A residence sale in Jackson Park Highlands covers the property at 7027 Euclid avenue, a twelve room brick dwelling on a lot 150x134 feet, which has been sold by F. I. Bickett to Dr. W. G. Hewitt for a reported consideration of $23,000. George C. Bour & Co. were the brokers.

County Realty Board's Annual Meeting Jan. 8

The Cook county real estate board will hold its annual members' meeting Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the board rooms, 1737 Conway building. Newly elected officers will be installed and committee chairmen will present their annual reports for 1917. A large number of proposed amendments to the bylaws of the board, including the reorganization of the valuation committee and its methods of procedure, a change in the membership fees, and provisions for the recall of officers, will be voted upon.

DULLNESS MARKS WEEK'S DOINGS IN BUSINESS SITES

Nothing in the Loop and Little Outside of It.

Business proporey, both that in the downtown district, as well as outside, shared in the general dullness of the week. There was nothing doing downtown and little of an interesting character outside.

The property at the northeast corner of Madison street and California avenue, 92x122 feet, has been purchased by the John D. Jennings estate, through the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, from Charles E. Williams, the land figuring in the deal at $40,000, or at the rate of $430 a front foot for the Madison street frontage. Mr. Williams leased back the land for ninety-nine years at an annual net rental of $2,400, or 6 per cent on the purchas price. On th 5 per cent rate, the usual basis for capitalizing outlying ground leases, the land would be given a value of $48,000.

The improvements upon the plot comprise a two story structure containing stores and offices, with a white tile front, which was erected a few years ago at a cost of about $65,000. The transaction was negotiated by Dibblee & Manierre.

Business Block Bought.

The business block at the northwest corner of Elston and Wabansia avenues, 100x148 feet, through to Besley court, has been purchased by Lavern W. Thompson from the Peter Schoenhofen Brewing company for an indicated price of $50,000, subject to an incumbrance of $25,000.

The West Madison company has acquired from Isidore H. Stone the leasehold interest in the property at 1422-30 West Madison street, seventy-four feet east of Bishop court, south front, 95x125 feet, for a nominal consideration.

Quitclaim Deed Filed.

There has been filed for record a quitclaim deed by E. C. Bisbee to the Midland Linseed Products company, of which he is vice president, of the property which the company occupies at the southwest corner of Kingsbury and Blackhawk streets, and the northwest corner of Eastman street, east front, 401x220 feet, to the north branch of the Chicago river, for a nominal consideration. Mr. Bisbee has held title to the property for the company for several years.

$50,000 Loan Made on Catholic Church Land

The Hibernian Banking association has made a loan of $50,000 five years at 4½ per cent to the Catholic Bishop, secured by St. Edmund's school property at the southeast corner of Oak Park avenue and Pleasant street, Oak Park.

OFFICE BUILDING IMPROVEMENT IS SHOWN IN REPORT

Big Banks Tell of Gains Over the Previous Year.

Evidence of improved conditions with respect to office buildings is found in the annual reports of the Continental and Commercial National bank and the First National bank. They both show gains as compared with the previous year, the statement being made that the Continental and Commercial has at present 99 per cent of its available space rented, and also has a considerable waiting list.

The rent roll of the First National Bank building shows an increase of over 6 per cent.

Demand Continues.

Mr. Reynolds says in the report submitted by him:

"I would also call your attention to the excellent position of the Continental and Commercial Bank building, which has at the present time 99 per cent of its total available space rented to tenants of the highest class. The demand for space continues, and in fact we have a waiting list of those desiring to obtain offices in our building at the first opportunity. The building shows for the last year a net return of 10 per cent on the $6,000,000 invested by the bank and is more than fulfilling expectations."

Increased Costs.

Mr. Forgan says in his statement to shareholders that the rent roll of the First National Bank building shows an increase of over 6 per cent. Increased costs, however, offset the gain in earnings, leaving the net profits practically the same as 1916, being sufficient to pay 6 per cent per annum in dividends and provide for depreciation. The share capital of the First Trust and Savings is $5,000,000, the surplus fund $5,500,000, and undivided profits $148,797. The share capital of the First National is $10,000,000, the surplus fund $12,000,000, and undivided profits $1,173,732.

Takes Title to Sheridan Rd. Property Near Broadway

A. Irving Jordan has taken title from Jacob Schnadig to the property on Sheridan road, 100 feet east of Broadway, 100x290 feet, north front, for an indicated price of $54,500. Mr. Jordan is erecting on this property a six story building containing sixty two and three room apartments, to cost $225,000, to be known as the Firwood.

ERRATIC ACTION IN OATS MARKET; CLOSE IS EASIER

Prospect of an Increased Movement Next Week Depressing Factor.

Action of the oats future market was erratic yesterday, with prices finally lower, although the net declines were small at ⅛@¼c. May oats advanced to a new high point on the crop during an early bulge and this delivery was active. Buying by houses with seaboard and northwestern connections was a feature, but prospects of an increased movement next week encouraged a lot of scattered selling and toward the finish there was free unloading by longs, with offerings by a leading elevator concern also liberal. Exporters were out of the market and the railroad situation is such that it is practically impossible to ship anything east.

Premiums in the spot market were weaker and sales of cash oats were mainly steady, with late transactions ½c lower. Local shipping sales were 30,000 bu. Primary receipts were 913,000 bu, against 605,000 bu a year ago. Local receipts of oats for the week were 1,940,000 bu, compared with 1,250,000 bu a year ago. Shipments were 1,202,000 bu.

Small Trade in Corn.

Volume of trade in corn was small, but the undertone of the market was firm. January corn closed ⅛c higher, while May was ⅛@¼c lower. There has been so much talk lately about maximum prices that the trade shows little disposition to sell corn, even when favored by bearish news, realizing that with cash corn so much higher than the futures there is small likelihood of a material break. There were general advices of free selling of corn by the country, consignment notices to some houses being the heaviest on the crop. Cars are quite plentiful in many sections of the belt and weather conditions are favorable in that a free movement will be permitted.

Cash corn was steady to 10c lower, the market being weakest at the finish. Arrivals here were 147 cars. Primary markets had 982,000 bu corn, against 1,107,000 bu a year ago. Local receipts for the week were 1,282,000 bu, against 2,381,000 bu a year ago. Shipments were 542,000 bu.

Firm Market for Rye.

Rye closed unchanged to 1c higher. Cash No. 2 sold at $1.85@1.85 and No. 3 at $1.82. Receipts, 2 cars.

Barley was firm. Malting was quoted $1.42@1.59 and sold $1.45@1.57; feed and mixing quotable $1.40@1.52, with sale at $1.38; screenings were quoted 85c@$1.25 and sold 80c. Receipts, 18 cars.

Timothy seed was steady. March closed $9.10 bid and $9.25 asked. Cash lots sold at $7.00@7.60. Clover seed ruled firm. Cash quotable $21.00@27.00 and spot prime $28.75.

Flaxseed closed 1c lower. Cash quoted $3.60½@3.64½.

LIBERTY BONDS BREAK TO 96.80

New York, Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Renewal of the reports that the secretary of the treasury will announce a new government bond issue about the middle of February, although it had no official basis, caused renewed liquidation in the 4 per cent Liberty bonds, which today broke to 96.80, making a new low record.

Various suggestions have been made as to means for restoring the 4 per cents to investment favor. One has been that congress extend the exemption to $100,000 principal, and some bankers believe that it could be raised considerably higher without providing the very rich men of the country with an opportunity of evading their taxes.

The hope is generally expressed in financial circles that the forthcoming issue will bear an interest rate of 4 per cent or less, so that savings bank deposits may not be affected. The suggestion has been made that the issue of a 3½ per cent bond, tax exempt up to $100,000 principal, or perhaps double that amount, would prove extremely popular.

GOSSIP OF THE PIT

At a special meeting of the Board of Trade directors yesterday it was unanimously decided that present trading conditions in corn for future delivery would not be disturbed in any respect. In view of the insistent demands made upon officials of the exchange by country grain dealers and farmers to bring about some change in trading conditions in corn futures, so as to permit hedging of cash corn, the directors deemed it wise to discuss the question without further delay.

At the time the maximum of $1.28 was established the expectations were for a 3,500,000,000 bu corn crop, but the yield not only proved disappointing in volume, but the quality of the grain is the poorest on record. Cash corn has been selling far above the futures and most of the trade has given up hope of seeing spot corn values decline to levels within reach of the pit prices. There is such a big demand for the grain that buyers are willing to pay high prices, and it would take a very big movement to swamp the demand.

Fees for inspecting grain in Chicago were raised to $1 a car where a moisture test is necessary, and 75c a car without moisture tests. The old rate was 50c per car. This advance was approved by the Illinois public utilities commission. The rate at East St. Louis was also raised from 50c to 90c where moisture tests are made and 65c where no tests are required. The state grain inspection department asked for this advance in view of the smaller movement of grain and the fact that the poor quality of the corn crop meant unusually large amount of moisture testing.

Eastern roads have issued orders to turn over all empty cars at western junction points and terminals to western lines. The latter have given orders not to allow their cars to be loaded for the east. This is regarded as a practical embargo on eastern lines. The Wabash is the only road taking any eastern business, and that in a limited way.

Evidence of an increased supply of cars through the belt is seen in the larger country offerings of corn. Notices of consignment yesterday were large, some houses reporting them the heaviest on the crop, and everything points to good receipts next week. The offerings were not only from Iowa, but also from a number of Illinois points. The forecast for next week is for fair weather, with probable snow about the middle of the week. No unusually low temperatures are expected.

Annual election of the Board of Trade will be held on Monday and the only fight will be for directors. A. S. White for president and James A. Patten and H. N. Sager for vice presidents are unopposed. With six places in the directory to fill there are thirteen candidiates—Emanuel F. Rosenbaum, Frank E. Alstrin, Francis L. Schreiner, R. W. McKinnon, Adolph Kempner, John E. Brennan, G. W. Hales, Edward Andrew, J. A. Bunnell, W. L. Phelps, W. H. Colvin, Earl O'Neil, and H. H. Newell.

Frank E. Alstin of Block, Maloney & Co., a candidate for director of the Board of Trade, states that in view of the big premiums prevailing for cash corn and oats, it appears foolhardy to become enthusiastic on the bear side of the market. He says that while an increased movement is anticipated, no big receipts are looked for, and offerings will have to be very much larger than they have been thus far this season to swamp the demand.

Wheat receipts at primary markets from July 1 to date total 136,545,000 bu, against 256,673,000 bu for same period last year, and 341,567,000 bu two years ago. Corn receipts since Nov. 1 are 36,324,000 bu, against 54,911,000 bu last year and 51,050,000 bu two years ago. Oats receipts since Aug. 1 total 171,511,000 bu, compared with 178,184,000 bu last year, and 159,099,000 bu two years ago.

Alexander C. Harsh and Ed S. Sheehan have made application for membership on the Board of Trade. Fred A. Wood and estate of Trave Elmore have posted memberships for transfer.

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 8 cars; corn, 147 cars; oats, 126 cars; rye, 2 cars; barley, 18 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 42,000 head, and for all next week 240,000 head.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—DRY GOODS—Cotton goods and yarns here today were firmer and in better demand. Linen supplies are being cut off still more by order of the British government. Knit goods were firm.

N. Y. DEPOSITS DECREASE OVER $73,500,000

Loan Account, However, Shows Unusual Steadiness.

The New York bank statement again showed some large changes with a decrease of over $73,500,000 in deposits. The loan account, however, showed unusual steadiness, with a decrease of but $1,342,000.

There was a heavy draft on the banks, presumably by the government, a decrease of over $42,623,000 in cash being shown. This led to a shrinkage of $51,106,310 in the excess reserve, bringing that item down to $61,272,520.

Since the flotation of Liberty loans began the weekly figures have shown such regularity that changes of the size noted are significant of government operations rather than a normal flow of money and credit occasioned by general business. The figures follow:

COTTON.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—COTTON—The market was comparatively narrow and irregular today, with the general list closing irregular net five points higher to 11 points lower. The opening was firm at an advance of 10@17 points, with active months selling 15@19 points net higher right after the call, but there was a good deal of realizing, and the disposition to take profits on long contracts was evidently increased by the better prospects for rain in the southwest. After easing off to 31.40c for January and 30.56c for May the market steadied on trade buying, but rallies were not maintained, the close being within a point or two of the lowest on the near months. October was relatively easy during the day and showed the maximum loss at the close. Futures:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.	Prev. close.
March	31.10	31.15	30.93	30.96	30.98

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 5.—COTTON—Small trading and rather narrow fluctuations, both above and below the level of yesterday's close, featured cotton today. Buying was based on the continued good accounts from the spot departments, while selling was based on hopes of the breaking of the drought in Texas. Last prices showed a net decline of 1@3 points. Futures:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.	Prev. close.
January	30.34	30.38	30.22	30.22	30.23

October	28.55	28.60	28.43	28.56	28.51

Spot steady, 25 points up; middling, 30.88c.

COFFEE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—COFFEE—There was a further advance in the market for coffee futures today. Prices opened unchanged to 3 points lower under scattered realizing, but comparatively small offerings were readily absorbed by brokers with Wall street or foreign connections and May soon sold up to 8.70c, while September touched 9.02c, or about 12 to 14 points net higher. Reactions followed under realizing, with the close showing a net gain of 2 to 6 points. January, 8.25c; March, 8.45c; May, 8.61c; July, 8.77c; September, 8.93c; October, 9.03c; December, 9.13c. Spot coffee was firm. Rio 7s, 8¾c; Santos 4s, 10⅝c. The official cables showed no change in the Rio market. Santos spots were 50 reis and futures 25 to 100 reis higher. Rio cleared 17,000 bags and Santos 29,000 bags for New York. Brazilian port receipts, 58,000 bags; Jundiahy, 40,000 bags.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—SUGAR—No fresh business was reported in the raw sugar market and prices were unchanged at 4.985c for Cubas cost and freight, equal to 6.005c for centrifugal. In refined business is quiet, and while there is considerable sugar now en route for New York, much complaint is heard regarding the scarcity of tonnage to carry sugar from Cuba, where the supplies are increasing daily. Prices were unchanged at 8.15@8.35c for fine granulated.

ROSIN AND TURPENTINE.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 5.—TURPENTINE—Firm, 43¾c; sales, 182 casks; receipts, 10 casks; shipments, 109 casks; stock, 26,900 casks. ROSIN—Firm; sales, 1,086 brls; receipts, 793 brls; shipments, 300 brls; stock, 87,282 brls. Quote: B, D, E, F, G, H, I, $6.10; K, $6.80; M, $7.00; N, $7.20@7.25; WG, $7.40@7.45; WW, $7.50@7.65.

Effect of Government Control.

The effect of government control of railways on the intrinsic value of their bonds and stocks depends so largely on how the plans are carried into effect that a few months must elapse before investors can be fully informed. However, if the same spirit of fairness that pervades the original announcement inspires the officials charged with executing them, there can be little doubt that the average bond and share will gain by the change.

The main point for the investor is the assuring to each railway a net income equal to the average for the three years ended June 30, 1917. In the first year of those three, earnings were extremely poor; in the second, unusually good. Final figures for the third are not now available, but in the six months to Dec. 31, 1916, net earnings were large, and in the following six months they were poor. Apparently the average for the three years must make a reasonably favorable showing.

This "favorable showing," is, however, an average. It means satisfactory earnings to the stronger companies, but a poor outlook for the weaker ones. For instance, the Chicago and Alton showed an average deficit of about $450,000 in the three years. If the rule is enforced to the letter, it may force the Alton into bankruptcy. The Chicago Great Western earned an average of slightly less than $900,000. This is only half enough to cover cumulative dividend on the preferred stock.

A number of roads were in receivers' hands in 1915 and 1916 and naturally made a poor showing. Unless the rule is modified for their benefit, some of them will suffer a severe setback.

United States Steamship.

C. R., Crawford, Ind.—The United States Steamship company was formed two years ago. It purchased control of a dozen steamship companies and a shipyard. In the last year the government has taken over most of the ships owned by its subsidiaries, so that profits from them are probably much reduced. However, the shipyards are working at capacity and are expected to earn more than enough to continue the 6 per cent dividend and 3 per cent extra on the holding company's $9,024,300 of stock. A report for the five months ended Dec. 1 last showed $503,891 net profits and $386,177 paid out in dividends. The stock is highly speculative.

Western United Gas.

A. W.—The Western United Gas and Electric company has shown a steady increase of gross and net earnings for years. Even 1917, when many utility companies reported declining net, this company, through owning a coal mine, continued to show a gain. Its first and refunding (now first) mortgage bonds are a most conservative investment. The general mortgage bonds are a second mortgage, but as total interest charges are earned more than twice, they are well secured.

Brief Answers.

E. S., Jersey City, N. J.—The Peoples Gas Light and Coke company cannot well build a coal gas and byproducts plant until it can obtain capital at much lower rates than those obtaining now. In the meantime a resumption of dividends is not in sight.

P. C., Cicero, Ill.—The Woman's National Publishing company is under the direction of E. G. Lewis, whose companies at University City, St. Louis, collapsed a few years ago, causing the loss of millions of dollars to women investors all over the country.

CHICAGO STOCK TRANSACTIONS

Chicago stocks were irregular and generally lower, with the principal decline in Sears-Roebuck common. The fall in price was to 139½ from the previous close at 144½. The issue had risen rapidly in New York, and yesterday's final quotation was a decline of about 10 points from the high price.

Union Carbide was fairly active, and declined 1½ points to 48½. The packing house stocks were lower, though the movement was small. Swift & Co. was off ⅝. Commonwealth Edison was 1 point lower. Pneumatic Tool sold at 49.

In the bond department Commonwealth Edison 5s were up ½ at 92. Chicago Railways first mortgage 5s gained 2 points at 83.

Brass
Comparatively few people outside of New England are acquainted with the magnitude of the brass industry, the importance of it in connection with present world conditions, and the enormous profits that have been and are now being made by the brass manufactories in the State of Connecticut.
In the City of Waterbury, Conn., alone (the brass center of the United States) more than 100 brass plants are in operation.
The subject, which is a very interesting one, is fully described in a special booklet which we have prepared and which, among other things, shows how investors may participate in the profits of this giant industry.

Farm Land Investment
I have a tract of 480 acres, every foot in growing crops of corn, wheat, alfalfa and clover; all well tiled, intersected by highways; near to good schools and churches; plenty of good water; four sets of farm improvements; within five miles of railroad shipping point, near to river shipping point; good black, Illinois corn land; no better soil; no alkali, rocks or sand. Corn this year made 75 bu. and matured; wheat 40 bu. This land paid a gross income this year of more than $80.00 per acre. I have other land that needs my attention and I am offering this for a quick sale, no trades wanted. This land is a good investment, and a desirable place to live. For sale at $150.00 per acre for a quick sale.

GENERAL LIST DROPS.

New York, Jan. 5.—Reactions of 2 to 4 points in favorite stocks, and 3 to 7 points in special issues during today's brief but active session wiped out much, if not all of the midweek's gain and left the general list little above final quotations of last year.

The selling, which concentrated in steels and other industrials and equipments, as well as prominent rails and the group of war shares, resulted in large part from peace rumors. These gained force from Turkey's reported overtures to Russia and the highly significant speech of the British premier, of which Wall street had only an inkling before the market's close.

Losses in steels ranged from 2 to 5 points, in coppers 1½ to 2½, equipments, 2 to 3, with 7 for Pullman; in shippings an average of 2 points, as much for motors and accessories, and 2 to 5 in oils and tobaccos.

Rails Also Heavy.

Pacifics, grangers, coalers, and eastern rails figured more or less equally in the heaviness of transportations. Leaders made little recovery, the market closing near lowest levels.

Bonds were under pressure, especially minor rails. Liberty 4s changed hands at 96.92@96.80c and the 3½s at 98.80@98.78c. United States bonds (old issues) were unchanged on call during the week.

ON THE BROAD STREET CURB

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Outside of a few issues there was little attention paid to the consideration of the peace propositions, which were also a factor in determining speculative movements on the board, and price movements when they occurred, were the result of concentrated buying for some special purpose.

Chevrolet Motor held a most prominent place in this limited market all through the week, although its wide movements were not accompanied by any new developments.

In the oil group most interest was attached to Houston Oil, in which buying by southern and local houses was on a large scale at times.

MARSHALL FIELD REVIEW.

Marshall Field & Co., in their weekly review of the dry goods trade, say:

"Current wholesale shipments of dry goods for the week are well ahead of the corresponding period of last year. Road sales for both immediate and future delivery are about equal to the same week in 1917. The number of customers in the market has been slightly less than in the same week a year ago. The market on domestic cotton continues strong. Collections are good."

BAR SILVER ADVANCES.

Commercial bar silver sold in New York at 90⅞c an ounce, an advance of ⅝c.

FINANCIAL NOTES

THE trustees of the employés' savings and profit sharing fund of the Harris Trust and Savings bank announce that the bank has contributed $30,203 to the fund for the year 1917. For the same period the employés have paid into the fund $11,592. All told, there is now to the credit of each employé $3.60 for each $1 he invested during 1917.

The plan has been operating since January, 1916, and combining the results of two years, employés who have invested $100 a year in this fund, or $200 all told, have now to their credit $960.

The bank pays into the fund each year 5 per cent of its net earnings. Employés pay in not less than 2 nor more than 5 per cent of their salaries, and in no case more than $200 a year.

The Wright-Martin Aircraft corporation has orders on its books aggregating a total of $35,000,000 and is turning out ten motors per day. The price of the 150 horse power motor is understood to be under $5,000. The government allows them cost plus 15 per cent and one-quarter of the savings from the company's estimate.

Contracts for 9,000 freight cars for export to Italy are about to be distributed by the war industries board. The construction of these cars will require about 90,000 tons of steel. The Standard Steel Car company and the American Car and Foundry company, who have steel purchased for the building of Russian cars, which order has been suspended, probably will construct the largest number of cars for Italy.

President W. C. Arthurs of the Mount Vernon Car Manufacturing company is issuing to friends of the concern a memorandum book containing information concerning interest laws and rates, a table of approximate yield of stocks, domestic postal rates, and other miscellaneous matter, including the value of foreign coins in United States money.

MARKET COMMENT

FAIRLY good Wall sreet opinion is that, wholly apart from speculative view, the steps taken at Washington and developments in other quarters are necessarily of a bullish character. Uncertainty is expected to exist until after legislation is accomplished to the extent desired by the president, but it is held that this uncertainty is the only thing on which speculation can be based.

An interesting development will be the right of railroads which have not been paying dividends to distribute earnings allotted to them by the government. It is insisted there is no reason why railroads like the Erie and the Southern railways, which have an allotment of earnings sufficient to pay dividend on stocks that have not yet received disbursements, should not turn over to the shareholders whatever may be to their credit at the periods the accounting is made.

The biggest feature in the railroad control bill, as viewed in Wall street, is the provision giving congress the right to determine the time limit for government operation. That government operation will extend over the full war period is assured, but there is no assurance so far that the transitional period between the signing of peace and the restoration of complete order will also be provided for. Some bankers think that congress should provide for government control for at least one year after peace is signed. All the contentions for permanent government ownership could be aired in congress in this interim period.

The upturn in stocks last week gave some encouragement to the bond market, and a better inquiry developed for high grade issues. The decline which accompanied the fall in stocks ceased, and offerings of good bonds are reported greatly restricted. A considerable amount of short term financing is under negotiation, and there should follow some attractive offerings.

While call money has eased in New York to around 4 per cent, the time money market remains firm. Leading lenders of time money say that 6 per cent funds on half industrial and half railroad collateral is in somewhat better volume, but not much at that. An urgent demand for 6 per cent money on all industrial collateral exists.

New York financial interests in close touch with Washington are quoted as taking for granted that most of the suggestions of the president with regard to the railroads will be carried out within the next two weeks. General satisfaction is expressed over the president's address.

The estimate in New York of the unfilled tonnage figures of the United States Steel corporation, to be issued next Thursday, is that a decrease of 200,000 tons will be shown.

Hog receipts of 20,000 at Chicago yesterday sold 5@10c lower than the high time Friday, or about steady with that day's close. Trade was active and the market closed strong, especially for the mixed packing grades. Top sales were made at $16.55 and the bulk at $16.10@16.45. Pigs sold on a firm basis, with good strong weights at $15.25.

Final prices made hogs 10@35c lower than a week ago, with the bulk showing a 25c loss. Pigs were mostly 25c higher. The average price of all hogs here this week was placed at $16.40, against $16.85 last week and $10.20 a year ago. Receipts for the week aggregated around 176,000 head and showed an increase of 19,000 for the week. They were about 31,000 short of arrivals for the same week last year.

CATTLE.

High priced beef steers did not meet with much favor at Chicago this week and closed about 25c lower than a week ago, while low and medium priced offerings were 25c higher. Cows and heifers finished the week at a gain of 25@50c. Calves met with a narrow outlet and the market closed in a semi-demoralized condition, with prices fully $1 lower than a week ago. Receipts of cattle for the week aggregated about 60,000, increasing 6,000 and being about the same as a year ago.

Cattle at seven western markets for the week, 190,000, against 128,000 the preceding week, 175,000 a year ago, and 162,000 two years ago.

SHEEP.

Sheep and lamb market finished the week in a strong position, with prices largely 35@50c higher than a week ago. Closing sales of prime fat lambs were at $17.20. Receipts for the week increased 16,000 and totaled around 65,000, but there was a brisk demand from local packers and outside shippers, and all offerings were closely taken.

"ONLY THE BEST QUALITY" "AS WE LIVE WE GROW" "EFFICIENT SERVICE"

WHO IS "NUMBER ONE"?

The Joyous Business of Risking One's Life

KATHLEEN CLIFFORD, star of the new Paramount serial, is in the business of risking her life. In every chapter of Anna Katharine Green's mystery story she is the heroine of an astonishing thrill. Whether it is a dive from a mast or a leap from a speeding motor car to a train, Kathleen has a lot of fun doing it. She's athletic and plucky and doesn't mind a sprained ankle or a broken arm. You'll like Kathleen and you'll enjoy every episode of her new photoplay, "Who Is 'Number One'?".

The Best Theaters Are Showing It

FAMOUS SCULPTOR A ROOKIE—Jacob Epstein, one of the most daringly original sculptors, is a private in the Jewish battalion of the British Royal Fusiliers. His work has been acclaimed by the most discerning art critics. Mr. Epstein is being taught, in the picture, to handle his rifle in a bayonet charge.

PIERROT OF THE LIGHT HEART AMID SCENES OF DESOLATION—The soldiers of Great Britain and France on the western front strive always to derive as much gayety out of their lot as possible. Theatrical entertainments, in which the soldiers, many of them popular actors before the war, take part, are held as often as conditions will allow. Stunning effects are often procured by staging plays where bombardment has reduced the buildings to picturesque ruins.

ANCIENT METHODS IN MODERN ENTERPRISE—The British forces operating in Egypt have laid cables across the desert to insure rapid communication between the troops. Camels employed in the work are depicted here hauling a medieval chariot, used to lay the cables.

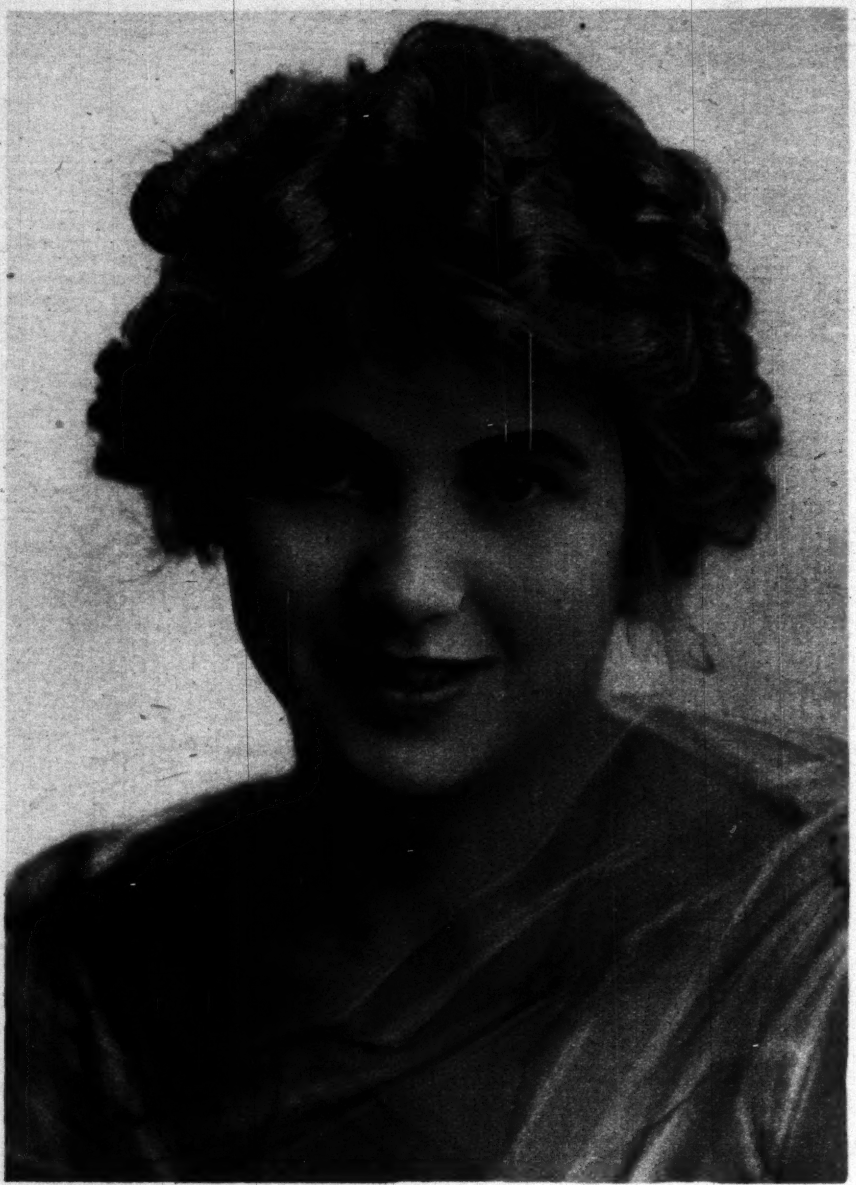
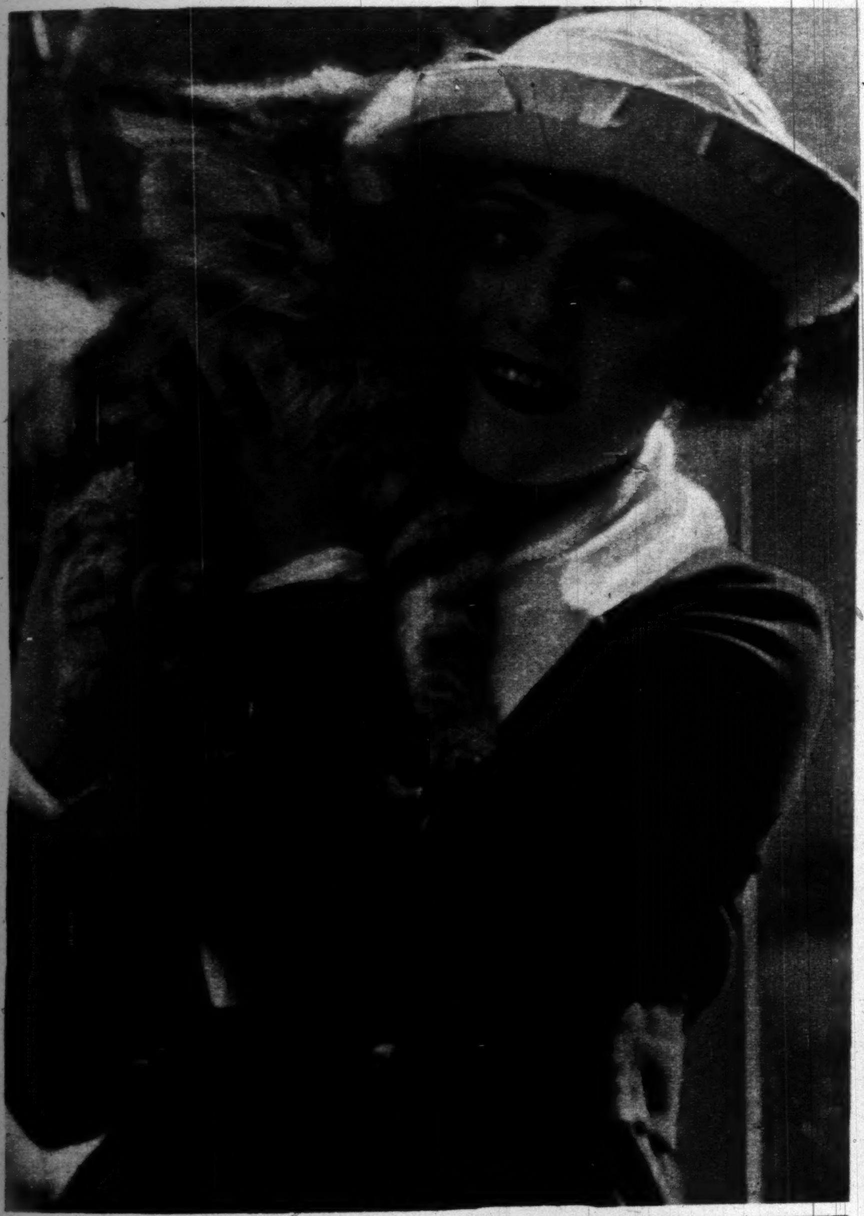
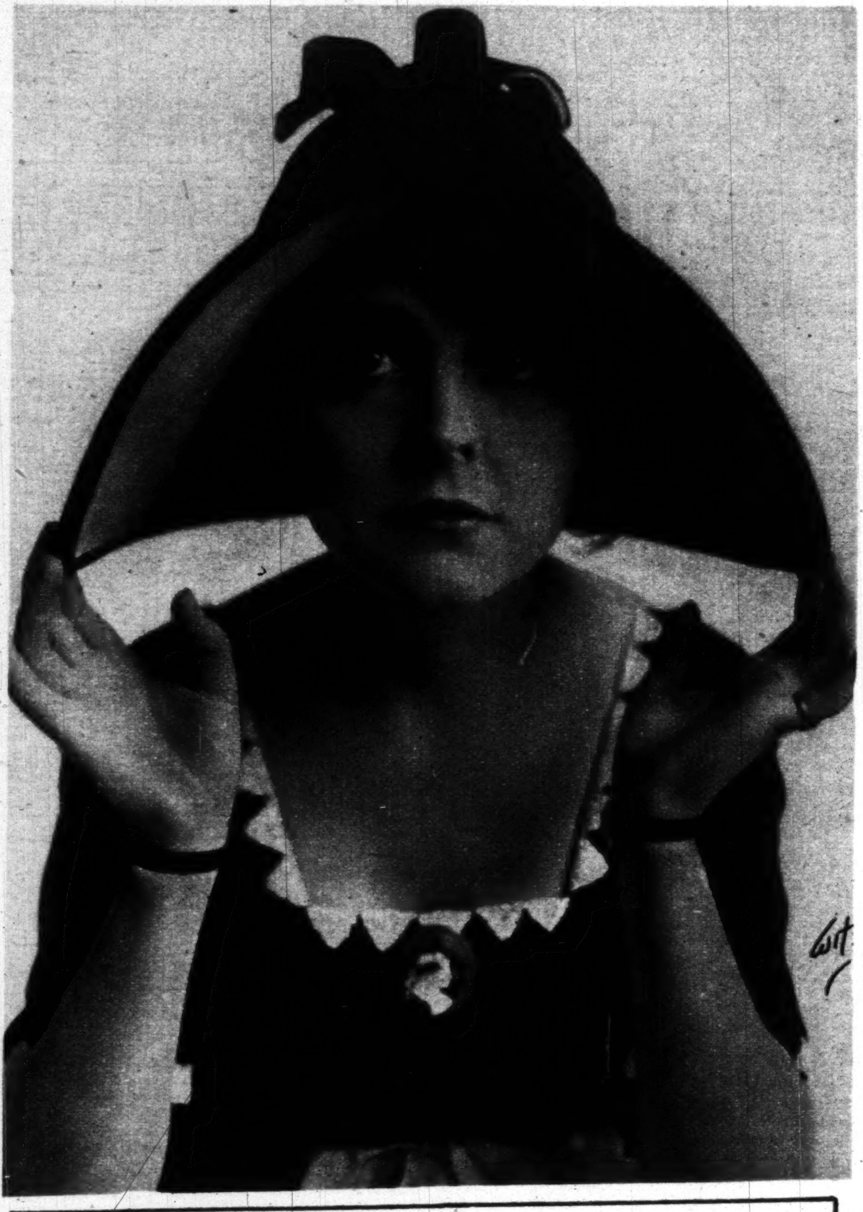
MARY McIVOR had not been with Triangle long when they gave her "leads" to play. She had started her screen career perfectly willing to begin at the bottom of the ladder and climb. Like all of us, however, she raised no objections to the "boost" when it came.



SALLY STARR came from afar (get the rhyme there!)—Holland, in fact. She brought with her the name she was born with—but it was too much! Nobody could pronounce it. She looked upwards for inspiration and received it. Miss Starr is a "Bluebird."



BILLIE RHODES, the merry little comedienne, has a Persian cat. This is it. The cat is said to have cost $1,000. Whether it did or not, one thing is certain—Miss Rhodes loves it $1,000 worth and wouldn't sell it for—O, much more!—(she says).



ENID BENNETT is a comparative newcomer to the screen. She was heralded as a "find" by Triangle, and accepted as quite a success by many. Miss Bennett has the kind of hair that inclines the jealously disposed feminine fan to curl up and die with envy.

Moistens Dry Air
Saves Coal—Saves Health

Dr. H. A. Garfield, Fuel Administrator, says "If every family reduced the temperature of its home five degrees, millions of tons of coal would be saved and the health of the nation improved." Fuel conservation is vital. Schools are closing; industries reducing their output; thousands are suffering for want of coal—and yet, many of us insist on making dry kilns of our homes by heating them to 75 degrees or more without a drop of moisture. Burn less coal—"burn" water instead. It is a positive fact that 68 degrees of heat with 50 degrees of humidity is far more comfortable, healthful and economical than 75 degrees of dry heat. Use the

BUDDINGTON HUMIDIFIER
"THE WICK DOES THE TRICK"

THE MOISTURE MAKING MACHINE

in your home and office. It prevents colds, sore throat, catarrh, etc. Saves your furniture and woodwork. Keeps pianos in tune and makes plants thrive. Intelligent people everywhere are adopting this modern method of heating. Business men and corporations are equipping their offices to increase comfort and efficiency.

Attaches to Top of Radiators

The most intense heat is at the top of the radiator—not behind or between the coils. That's why the Buddington goes on top. It forces evaporation through use of wicks. These wicks draw the water up by capillary attraction and hold it in suspension over the venticulated wings in the humidifier. The rising heat passes through the wicks taking the moisture with it into the atmosphere.

Made in Four Sizes

measuring 14 inches, 18 inches, 28 inches, and 36 inches in length and finished in gold or silver color. Each is designed to produce definite results. One 18-inch Humidifier will maintain a relative humidity of 50 degrees (considered ideal) in a room 14x16 feet with ten-foot ceiling, when heated at 68 degrees. Buddington Humidifiers are artistic in design and strongly made of galvanized iron covered with aluminum paint and bronze. No rusting.

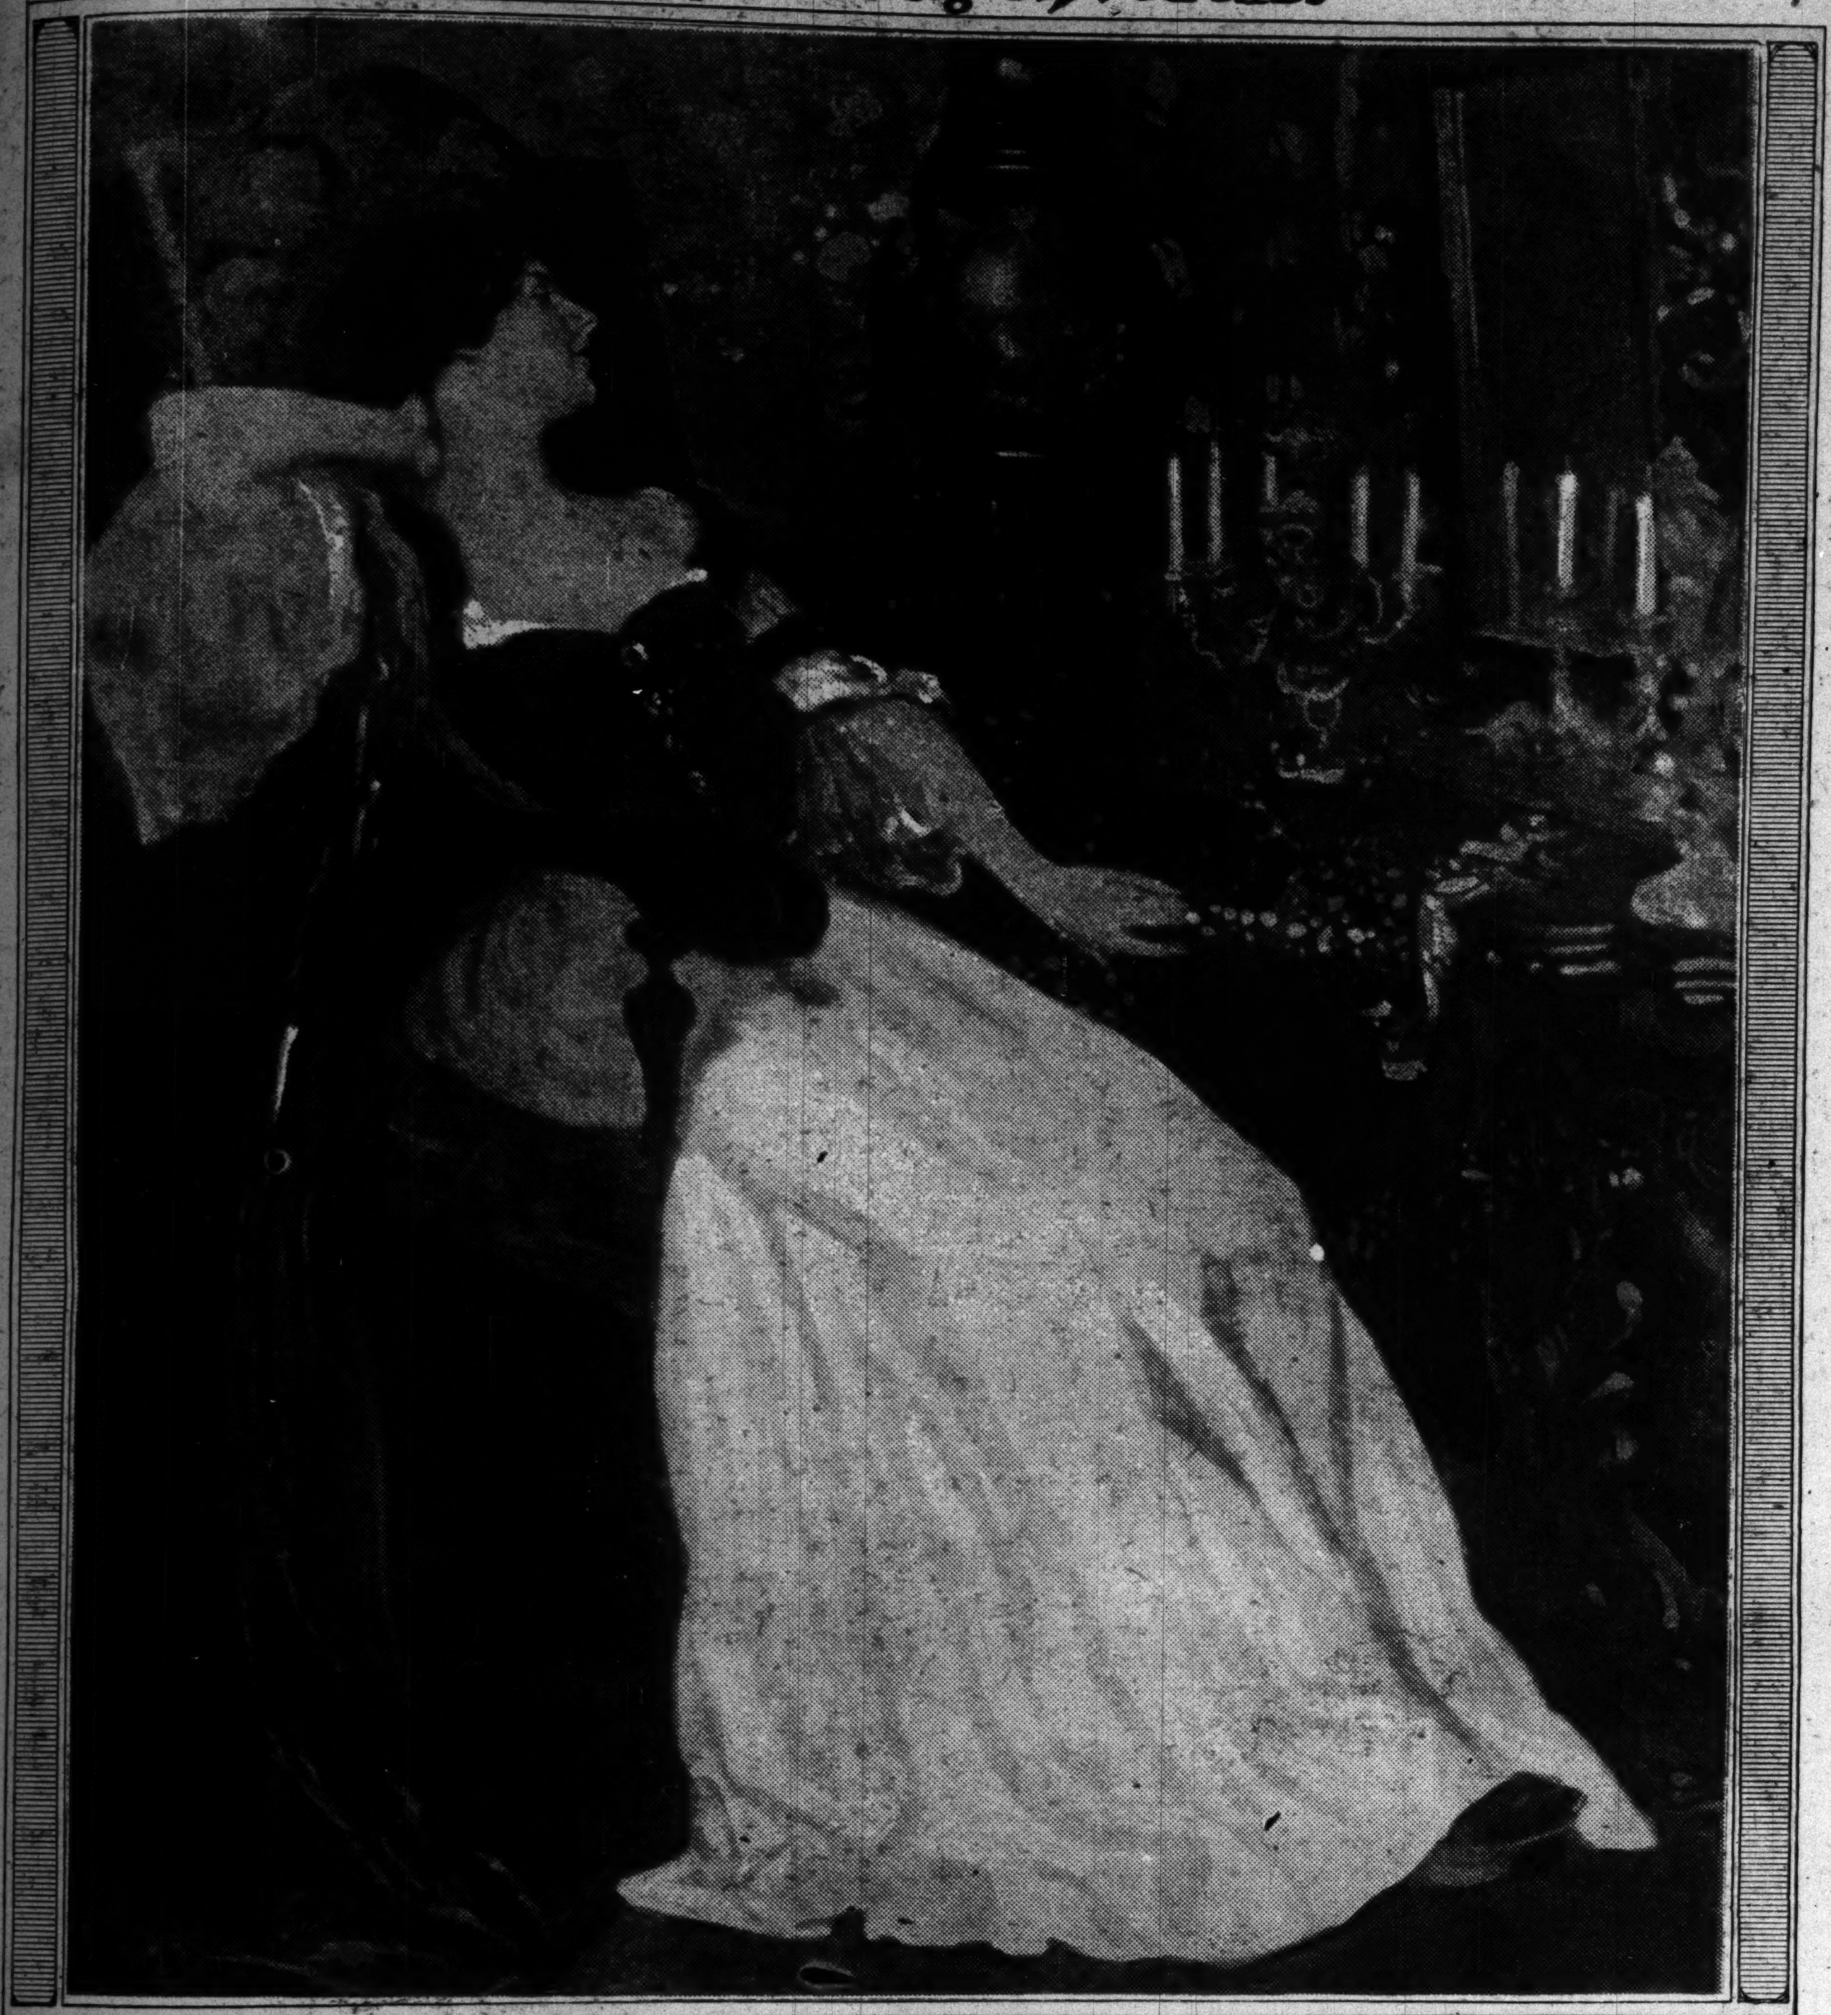
Before the Mirror

from a painting by Blaas



BY LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

"Before the Mirror," by Carl-Th. von Blaas. Born in Vienna in 1886.

BLAAS belongs to a family which has given to art three generations of painters. The grandfather, Carl von Blaas, was an historical painter of Austria and many of his works are contained in the Imperial Gallery of Vienna.

His two sons, Eugene and Jules, were genre painters exclusively, Eugene's taste inclining to brightly colored paintings of girls and women, while Jules' preferences led him to animal pictures, especially those of the chase.

Carl von Blaas, son of Jules, has given us for the most part pictures of a purely pictorial nature, emphasizing not so much the subject of his paintings as the decorative quality. He was educated in Paris and absorbed from that city much of its elegant worldliness and vivacity of spirit.

For instance, this woman of the boudoir is fashioned after the mode Parisian. Her piquant profile against the back of the chair she regards approvingly, languorously. She is charmingly graceful, her fluffy skirt of white and her snug dark bodice but half hiding the soft contour of her figure. Below a mirror are white unlit candles and the furnishings of the room are richly dark and luxurious.

She is beguiling, though she pays you no attention. She is bewitching, though she bestows upon you no seductive glances. Serene and poised, she is absorbed in herself and the things that concern herself. Some whilom love of whom she is no longer fond or some newer love of whom she is not yet too sure perchance is filling her thoughts. And meanwhile, that she may steady herself for some impending encounter, she takes full measure of her beauty and her power.

It is pleasurable to see this work of a graceful and dexterous talent, done in good taste, with a sensitive eye and a hand that is deft and sure. And if Blaas cared more about the look of a face than its meaning, if he observed more than he studied, he has given to the public of a number of different countries much that pleases and entertains.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.

The Faith of Paul Duchaine

This Is the Story of the Youth and the Maid Who Mocked at Love in the Days of Old Quebec.

DOWN the declivity that leads from the citadel toward Quebec's most famous hotel a toboggan sped swiftly; it plowed through the snow and stopped. A girl and a man emerged laughing and began to pull the sled up the ascent again. The girl was a typical Quebecquoise, with dark hair and eyes, red cheeks, and that beauty for which the citadel town is of repute. Other toboggans followed and the slope was black with the two lines of travelers.

“Eh, monsieur, youth never changes,” croaked the old man who stood watching the pastime. “For more than seventy years I have seen the same sight each winter and the same faces. It was thus when the Château St. Louis stood where this hotel stands; so in the days of Carleton, and of Frontenac as well, no doubt. My father used to tell me stories.

“Still, Quebec is not what it was in my grandfather's time,” he continued, presently. “You must picture it in the '30s, or earlier, in the splendid '20s, or even earlier yet, in the days of the first Emigrés. We were smaller then, it is true, but not less gay. And, after all, the soul of Quebec dwells inside her walls, and not in the new city beyond them. So we had everything, even in my grandfather's time, when the equipages choked Louis street every afternoon. I love to think of my grandfather's days, monsieur.

“My father used to tell me of the carnival. I remember when I was a little lad they spoke of Mlle. Marguérite Thiboult, who is now, I have no doubt, forgotten, though I could point out to you her house on Louis street. She was queen of the carnival that night when Paul Duchaine went gliding past her throne with cap undoffed. The skaters spun over the frozen river—cowled monks and hooped ladies, mock soldiers with mock nuns, and beaux in frills and ruffles of the period, while women in masks picked out their partners for the rout, and being unknown to them, made merry at their expense. Flambeaux on high stands flared all the way between the ramparts of Quebec and Levis, on the south shore, for there had been no snow, and the St. Lawrence was smooth as glass.

“‘He skates well. Who is he?’ she asked, somewhat intrigued, as a young man in a plain dress went by without saluting her, though he passed within a few feet of where she sat.

“‘I will find out and bring him into your presence, mademoiselle,’ he said, and glided out among the crowd. He soon found the unknown and touched him on the arm.

“‘Monsieur,’ he lisped, ‘will you have the goodness to give me your name—or, rather, to appear before her majesty and announce yourself?’

“The young man stared at his interrogator.

“‘I am Paul Duchaine,’ he answered, in a French provincial accent. ‘But I had thought,’ he continued, smiling, ‘that we had left majesties behind us when we left France.’

“‘I shall inform her majesty of your words,’ replied M. Dion, and brought the young man before the throne.

“There was a great roar of laughter from those around the throne, but Mlle. Marguérite, being wearied of her courtiers, had the caprice to smile kindly on the young man.

“‘Why have you not saluted me as you went by, monsieur?’ she asked. ‘Doubtless you have but lately landed and are ignorant of the polite ceremonies of our carnival, for I can hardly think you to be one of those wicked atheists who first denied our Lord and then murdered his majesty of martyred memory.’

“‘A republican!’ shouted M. Dion, making a mock thrust with his sword. ‘Treason! A Napoleonist! Say but the word, mademoiselle, and I shall lay his head at your feet as a love offering!’

“‘Yes, mademoiselle, I have a tongue,’ he answered, hotly. ‘As you have said, I landed in Quebec but lately and was ignorant of the polite ceremonies of your carnival. I have been here but one week, in fact, and I reside in the Rue Fleurie with my brother, Jean Duchaine, the furrier.’

“‘Ah, bon soir, M. le Fourreur!’ shouted M. Dion, making a mocking bow.

“Instantly the crowd took up the cry. ‘Bon soir, M. le Fourreur!’ they shouted, circling around the young man with mock salutations. ‘A toi, M. le Fourreur!’

“Paul Duchaine's face flushed and he breathed hard through his nostrils. But mademoiselle, seeing the turn things were taking, and being still capricious, rose out of her throne.

“‘M. Duchaine shall escort me home,’ she said. ‘Auguste, you will resign your privilege for this night?’

“‘Ah, oui, mademoiselle,’ muttered Auguste, with a grimace.

“It was truly a difficult situation for the beaux who followed unhappily in the train of mademoiselle. Marguérite Thiboult was one of those beauties who have made our city famous ever since Nelson lost his heart to one and nearly ruined his career for her. Twenty-two, tall, statuesque, with a wealth of dark hair, and gray eyes which could deal tenderness and flash hauteur with equal facility, of one of the rich old families of the aristocracy, it was no wonder that she held all the idle young men captive in her train. Many a one had fancied that some day this beauty would smile for him alone, only to be sent home sadly, with ruffled plumage. For mademoiselle was not kind to those whom she disdained, and they included all her mob of servitors.

“It was, then, a difficult situation for the gentlemen trailing up Louis street behind her, while she enacted this strange whim of walking back with the newcomer. It was especially hard for M. Auguste Dion, whose wealth and insinuation had given him status as mademoiselle's favorite. Still, he had met difficult situations before, only—not when his enemy was a common furrier from the lower town of shopkeepers.

“At the door of her house mademoiselle extended her hand. ‘Adieu, M. Duchaine. Or, rather, au revoir.’ She said. ‘Remember, friendships made lightly often endure long.’

“Paul Duchaine shook the hand of mademoiselle instead of kissing it, to the amusement of the outcast courtiers. They grinned at him in angry spite as he passed between their ranks and down the street, but there was something in his face which forbade even M. Auguste to speak to him.

“As for M. Duchaine, you may believe that he seemed to walk on air. Only six short weeks before he had left his father's roof at Arles to join his elder brother, Jean, whose fur trade was already proving prosperous; and here he was, the envied, the hated, of all Quebec!

“On the next night, while Jean Duchaine pored over his books of accounts, Paul, frilled and ruffled like the best, stole out of the shop, skates in hand, and hurried toward the river. It was the second day of the carnival and the last. Mlle. Thiboult, weary, and in no enviable mood, yet, woman-like, disdaining to yield her place to some lesser toast, sat languidly upon her throne, dealing out sharp words to those who cringed for her favors.

“Gliding across the ice toward her, Paul Duchaine halted before the throne and doffed his cap. ‘Bon soir, mademoiselle votre majesté!’ he exclaimed, rejoiced to see M. Auguste's teeth set angrily as he stood beside the throne.

“‘Ah, mademoiselle, do you not remember that you threw him the condescension of your glance last night?’ inquired Auguste. ‘Doubtless he has come back for more.’

“‘Ah, oui, the furrier,’ said mademoiselle. ‘Well, M. le Fourreur, I have no need for furs, being well supplied, so move aside and do not obstruct my view.’

“‘Move, M. le Fourreur!’ snarled Auguste Dion, and once more the crowd took up the cry. Some one seized a cake of ice and hurled it at him; they danced round him upon their tardy triumph. As for Mlle. Thiboult, as though this meant nothing to her, she sat pensively upon her throne.

“For a moment Paul could not understand. Then he knew, and, ignoring the mimicking crowd, he advanced two steps and planted himself before mademoiselle.

“‘I see you are a mockery, as others have seen and told,’ he said, in low, penetrating tones of intense anger. The blood flamed in his cheeks. ‘You are all a mockery,’ he cried. ‘Your throne of tinsel, your hollow crowd of followers, and you yourself, who play with the hearts of honest men, are a mockery in God's eyes, you wanton!’

“Paul Duchaine stepped out of the throng—which, paralyzed with dismay, and cowering in the presence of Paul's genuine wrath, shuffled their skates uneasily and cast furtive glances toward Mademoiselle. As for her, at Paul's first words she had started up in her chair with an imperious gesture, her own cheeks redder than his; but when he had ended she crouched limply down, with a blanched face, indrawing shuddering sobs.

“When she looked up again Paul was far away.

“‘Mademoiselle,’ said Auguste Dion, ‘if he were not a common furrier, whom no gentleman could stoop to touch, his blood should answer for this insult.’

“‘I think that he spoke truly,’ answered Mademoiselle, with a wry smile, drawing her cloak about her shoulders. ‘Take me home, Auguste.’

“It happened, monsieur, that honest Jean Duchaine needed a representative in Montreal to purchase furs; thus when, the next morning, Paul volunteered to go, his brother was highly pleased. He had not taken kindly to Paul's pleasure-loving instincts. He gave him brotherly advice, intermixed with shrewd commercial instructions. The tide of immigration was already streaming westward; prices ruled high; trade was booming everywhere, and the Indians were still half ignorant of the value of the pelts they carried to Montreal. Jean Duchaine had long wished to break the company's monopoly; now he saw his chance to become a rich man in a few years. He bundled Paul into a sleigh, and before noon the young man was speeding westward, with an abiding bitterness in his heart and the resolution to achieve.

“This was in 1813. The power of Napoleon was already crumbling. Defeated and disgraced, he had hurried back from Russia with the scattered remnants of his mighty army to find old foes springing up all about him. Nations in arms were confronting France upon her eastern frontiers. In the south Wellington was bursting through the Pyrenees. Two years afterward at Waterloo the power of the Corsican was broken forever. The change in France brought about a new social upheaval which was reflected in lower Canada as well, many of whose prosperous families still drew their incomes from the mother country. Fortunes were made and lost in speculation. Old Monsieur Thiboult, who had blindly and credulously backed Napoleon's star, aristocratic though his traditions were, lost everything except the house, enough of a pitiful income to provide against starvation, and—Marguérite. There were few old families but were hit hard, for most had bowed to what once seemed inevitable and backed Bonaparte. Now they went softly and sadly down the famous street; and saddest and softest of all were the steps of Charles Thiboult, until he died.

“Auguste Dion had lost his riches also and needed a rich bride. All the gaiety and mirth of old days was turned to sadness. They had danced Bonaparte's legions across every frontier of France and danced them home again; now there was no more dancing, for their old world had crumbled away.

“When Mademoiselle Marguérite had gone home that night hearing still in her ears the ringing, scornful tones of the only man who had ever denounced her, she lay upon her bed in an agony of shame. It had been so commonplace a thing, this playing with a man's heart—a common man's; and he had turned on her as though she were a vile woman, and he had called her so. For days she could not bear to leave her house. It seemed as though the entire town was tattling about the insult. She seemed to see sneering faces behind the venetians, decorously drawn, of the houses on Louis street. When at last she emerged from her seclusion she flung herself more wildly into pleasure. Even her friends grew scandalized. More than one life, they say, Monsieur, was taken in her name, either by suicide or hostile hands. And the routs continued, the balls, ridotti, all the mad revels of Quebec, that stood on the precipice's edge. And then, at last, the news of Waterloo stunned the revelers into silence.

“Monsieur Auguste alone, insinuating and heartless, had continued in the pursuit. Yet, when she summoned him and told him that the old days were ended, and offered him that reward which he had so often asked, Monsieur Auguste Dion picked up his hat, glanced in dismay about the room, stripped of its silver and rich ornaments, and, backing, presently found himself backing away down Louis street and facing a closed door.

“After that Mademoiselle Thiboult was rarely seen abroad. She stayed home with her father, now in his last illness.

“Meanwhile Monsieur Duchaine had prospered in Montreal, and now, after two years, he was returning to render an accounting to his brother Jean. Jean, by attending to business while Quebec danced, was growing rich, and he was even then negotiating for a house on Louis street, just inside the wall. His family has lived there for three generations now; the despised furrier, Monsieur, became the ancestor of some of our best families, as is often the way. Paul arrived late in the afternoon and, having won unstinted praise from Jean, left him at his books and went out toward the Upper Town. It was not until he saw the frozen river that he remembered that this was almost the anniversary of his departure.

“He was to go back next morning, and an irresistible impulse had drawn him to the scene of his love and his humiliation. He meant to mingle with the throng, if possible to set eyes upon Marguérite, and then to go. The image of the false woman whom he had loved had never left him. Yet, false though she was, and wanton, and incapable both of love and truth, he loved her; and he knew that he would bear that love within his breast until he died.

"There was no carnival that year, but here and there, grouped about the ice, a few had gathered, drawn thither by the memory of former days, to warm their hearts at the pale fire of the recollection of earlier joys. With his cloak drawn closely about him, to shut out the penetrating wind, Paul approached one of the clusters, and presently saw Auguste Dion among the rest.

"Paul, though he felt all his old loathing of the man revive, could not withdraw until he had heard Marguérite's name. It was not long before it was spoken.

"'Ma foi, what changes!' exclaimed one speaker. 'Only last year Mademoiselle Thiboult was queening it here, and look at her now! That was a bitter fall, Monsieur Dion. Who would have thought the girl had so many enemies, ready to spring up like armed men as soon as——'

"'They are not more numerous than the hearts she broke,' a second said.

"Auguste Dion laughed coarsely and hurled an unmentionable insult at her. 'Aye, and I know,' he cried, 'for I was her first lover and she my mistress——'

"'You lie!' cried Paul, and hurled himself through the group. He raised his hand and struck Monsieur Dion across the cheek. 'You lie!' said Paul, more quietly, again.

"Auguste Dion staggered back beneath the force of the blow; then he strode forward, his eyes blazing. But as he caught sight of his enemy's face his jaw dropped and he stared blankly at him.

"'Diable! The furrier!' he muttered.

"'You have lied about Mademoiselle Thiboult,' said Paul. 'You cannot affirm that lie and live. Do you understand, Monsieur, or must I strike you again?'

"The rest had come between them, and there was no love lost for Auguste. Coarse mouthed themselves, many of them, and not too scrupulous, all felt that Monsieur Dion had been guilty of a worse betrayal than they.

"'Well, Monsieur Dion, that was plainly enough spoken,' said the man who had defended Mademoiselle. 'Surely you understand?'

"'A furrier,' muttered Auguste, fidgeting with his hands.

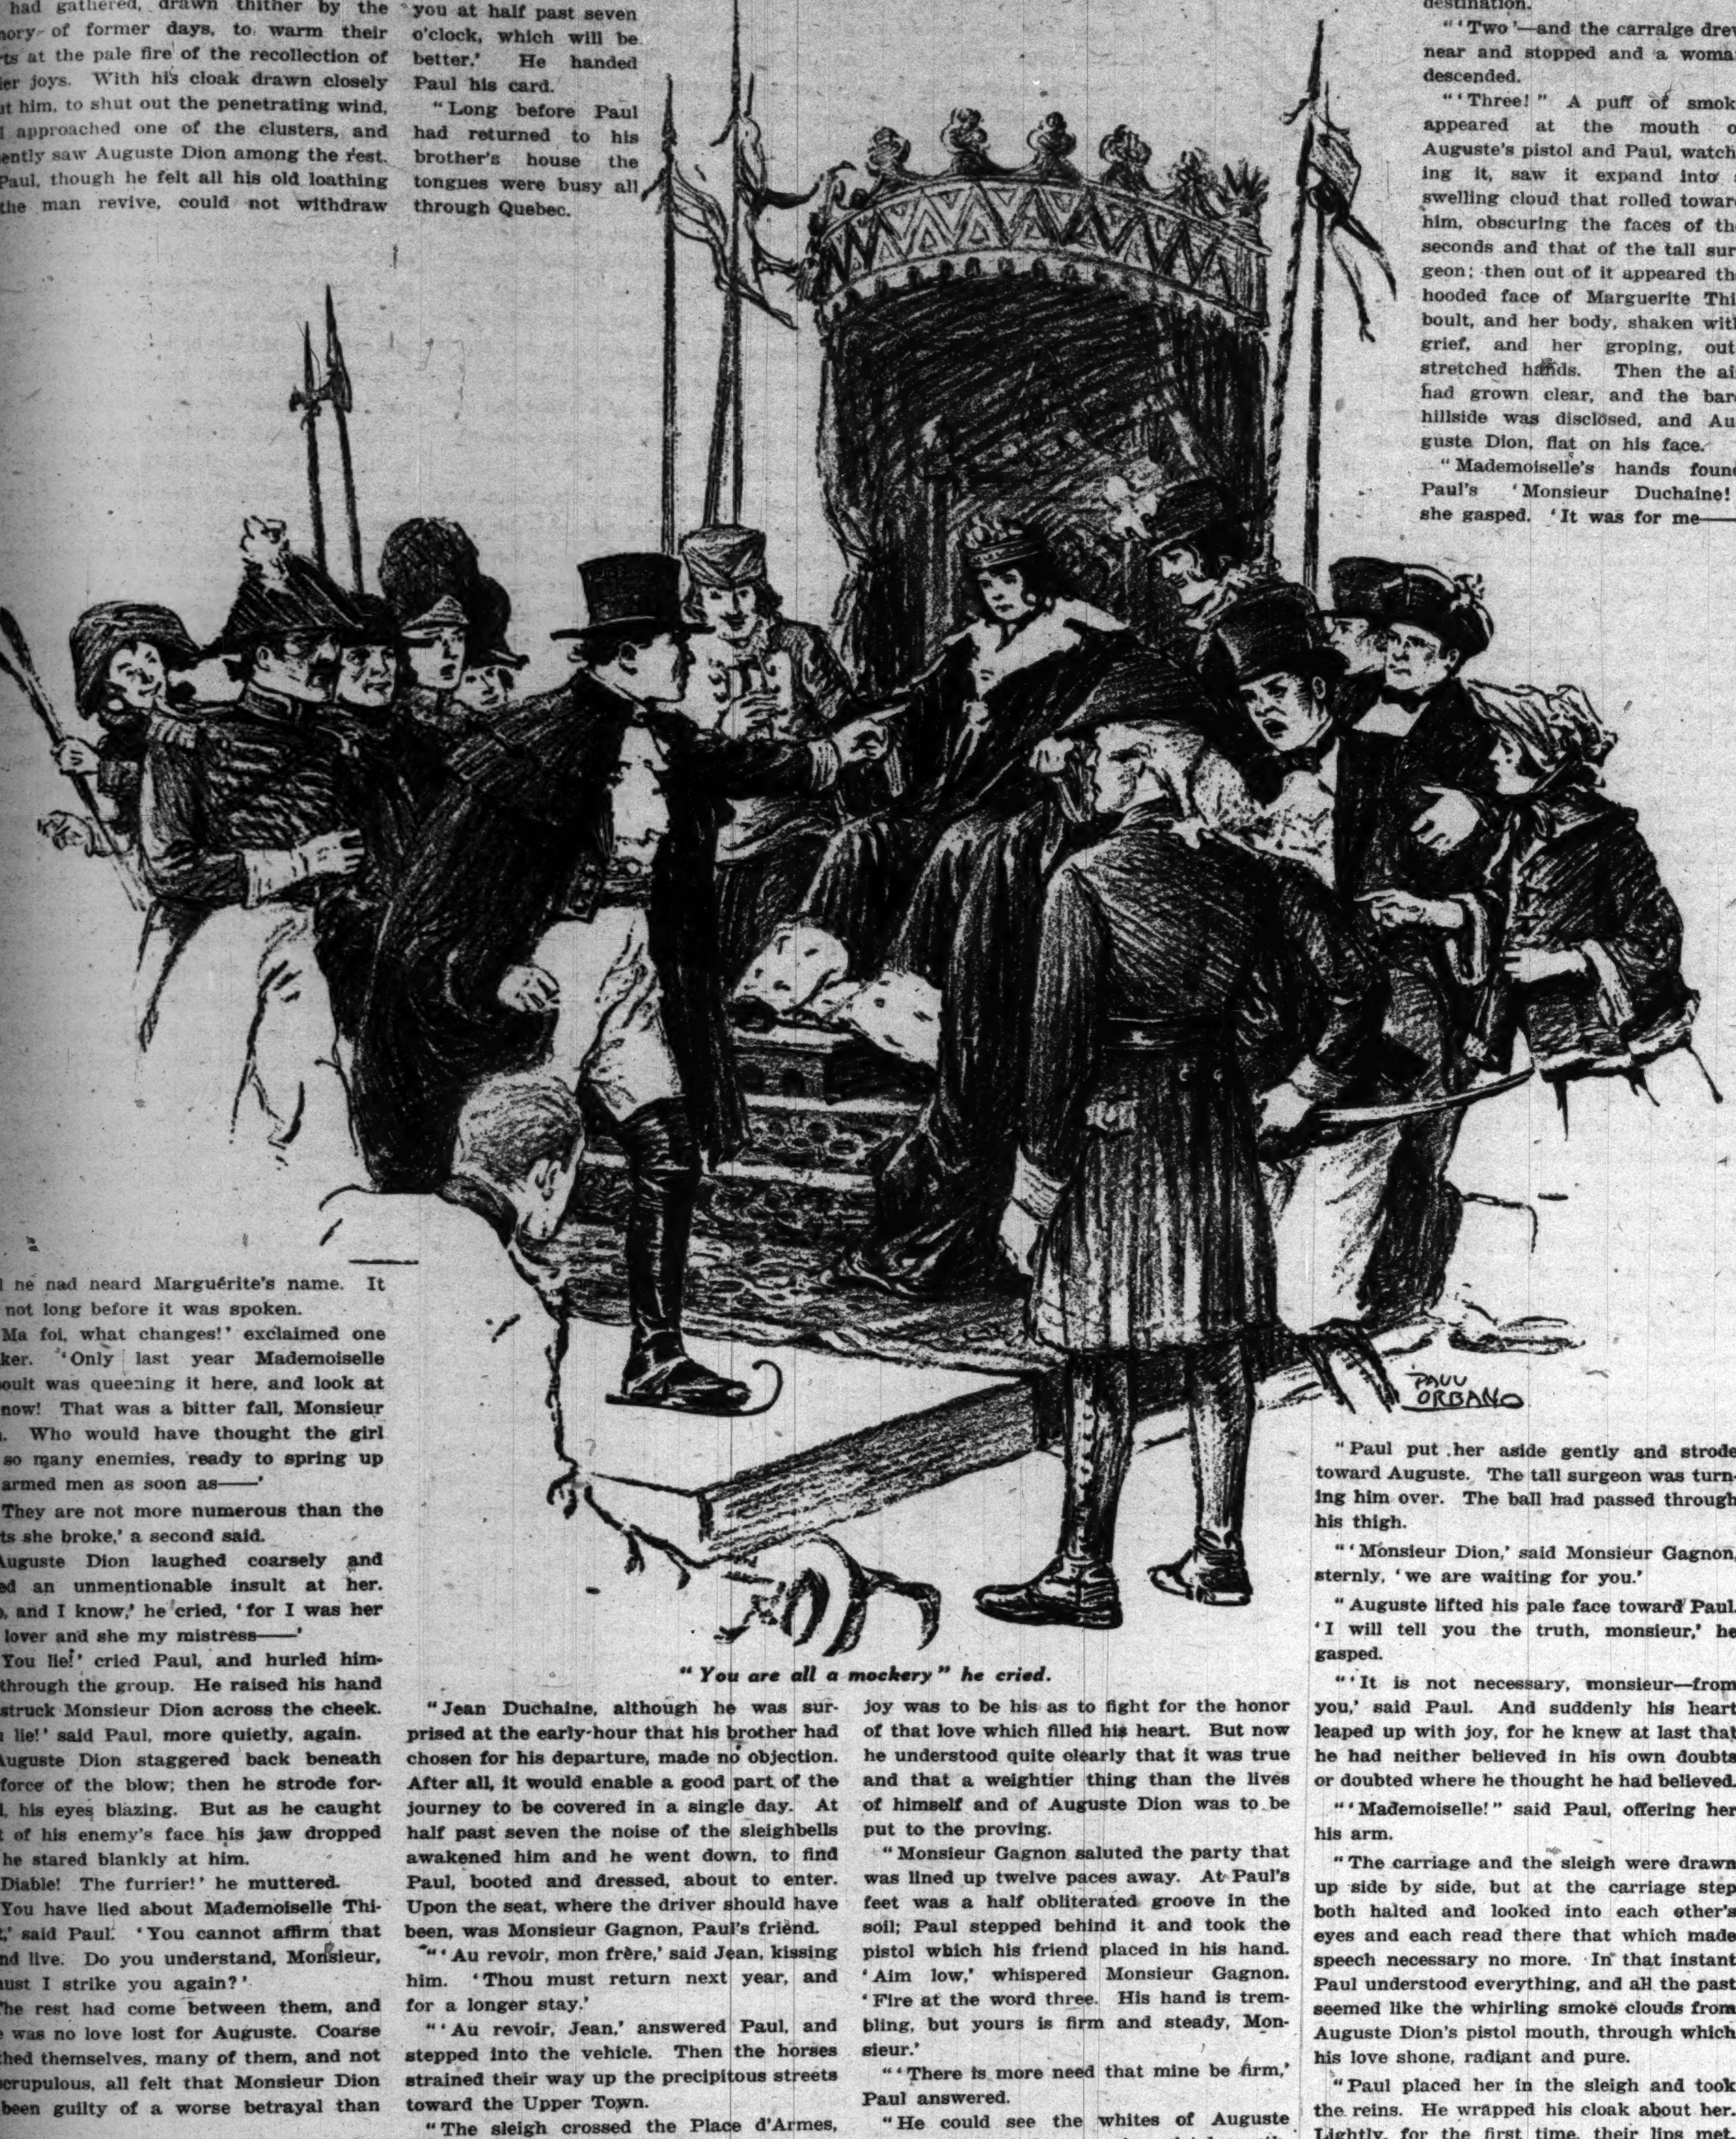
"'Still, Monsieur——' the other began to urge, and led him aside. A third man approached Paul.

"'I have the pleasure of addressing Monsieur Duchaine?' he asked. 'Grâce de Dieu, I remembered you; your name was a proverb in all our mouths for nearly a week after you left us. Well, Monsieur, the sun rises behind the citadel at 8. I can meet you there then, just by the western outworks. You have business in town?'

"'I was to return to Montreal tomorrow,' Paul answered.

"Then give orders that the sleigh be ready at dawn,' replied the other. 'I will call for you at half past seven o'clock, which will be better.' He handed Paul his card.

"Long before Paul had returned to his brother's house the tongues were busy all through Quebec.



"You are all a mockery" he cried.

"Jean Duchaine, although he was surprised at the early hour that his brother had chosen for his departure, made no objection. After all, it would enable a good part of the journey to be covered in a single day. At half past seven the noise of the sleighbells awakened him and he went down, to find Paul, booted and dressed, about to enter. Upon the seat, where the driver should have been, was Monsieur Gagnon, Paul's friend.

"'Au revoir, mon frère,' said Jean, kissing him. 'Thou must return next year, and for a longer stay.'

"'Au revoir, Jean,' answered Paul, and stepped into the vehicle. Then the horses strained their way up the precipitous streets toward the Upper Town.

"The sleigh crossed the Place d'Armes, skirted Louis street, crossed Mont Carmel, and traversed what is now Ste. Genevieve. And now the bare and shot furrowed slope of the citadel was seen. It towered above them toward the summit of the mighty fortress till Quebec dwindled in the distance below. Near the summit of the glacis the sleigh stopped and Monsieur Gagnon descended from his seat. 'They are already here, Monsieur Duchaine,' he said.

"Paul stepped down, and at that moment the edge of the sun thrust itself over the citadel, bathing the frosty air in an effulgence of yellow light. It painted the white walls of the habitations far below and drove the night mists whirling down the St. Lawrence, westward. It cleared Paul's brain, too. The sudden advent of the situation had numbed his faculties, and all night he had lain in a stupor, incredulous that such joy was to be his as to fight for the honor of that love which filled his heart. But now he understood quite clearly that it was true and that a weightier thing than the lives of himself and of Auguste Dion was to be put to the proving.

"Monsieur Gagnon saluted the party that was lined up twelve paces away. At Paul's feet was a half obliterated groove in the soil; Paul stepped behind it and took the pistol which his friend placed in his hand. 'Aim low,' whispered Monsieur Gagnon. 'Fire at the word three. His hand is trembling, but yours is firm and steady, Monsieur.'

"'There is more need that mine be firm,' Paul answered.

"He could see the whites of Auguste Dion's eyes and the wavering pistol mouth, but he could see also that a carriage was speeding along Louis street, far beneath him, and making for the gate. The horses, galloping, seemed to grow larger momentarily as they sped up the hillside.

"'Messieurs,' said a tall surgeon, 'you will understand——'

"The seconds had seen the vehicle and had taken alarm.

"'Messieurs, no time must be wasted,' said Monsieur Dion's friend. 'There are meddlesome persons in Quebec. Come! You are ready? Will you give the word, Monsieur Gagnon?'

"'One,' counted Monsieur Gagnon, and the carriage bounded furiously over the stones and boulders. It had left the city behind and was directing its course almost vertically upward toward the citadel. There was no longer doubt as to its destination.

"'Two'—and the carraige drew near and stopped and a woman descended.

"'Three!" A puff of smoke appeared at the mouth of Auguste's pistol and Paul, watching it, saw it expand into a swelling cloud that rolled toward him, obscuring the faces of the seconds and that of the tall surgeon; then out of it appeared the hooded face of Marguerite Thiboult, and her body, shaken with grief, and her groping, outstretched hands. Then the air had grown clear, and the bare hillside was disclosed, and Auguste Dion, flat on his face.

"Mademoiselle's hands found Paul's 'Monsieur Duchaine!' she gasped. 'It was for me——'

"Paul put her aside gently and strode toward Auguste. The tall surgeon was turning him over. The ball had passed through his thigh.

"'Monsieur Dion,' said Monsieur Gagnon, sternly, 'we are waiting for you.'

"Auguste lifted his pale face toward Paul. 'I will tell you the truth, monsieur,' he gasped.

"'It is not necessary, monsieur—from you,' said Paul. And suddenly his heart leaped up with joy, for he knew at last that he had neither believed in his own doubts or doubted where he thought he had believed.

"'Mademoiselle!" said Paul, offering her his arm.

"The carriage and the sleigh were drawn up side by side, but at the carriage step both halted and looked into each other's eyes and each read there that which made speech necessary no more. In that instant Paul understood everything, and all the past seemed like the whirling smoke clouds from Auguste Dion's pistol mouth, through which his love shone, radiant and pure.

"Paul placed her in the sleigh and took the reins. He wrapped his cloak about her. Lightly, for the first time, their lips met. The horses started.

"Behind, staring incredulously after them, stood the little group on the bare hillside. Before lay Montreal and the future and the life together. So Paul's faith had proved victorious over doubts, and nothing was said or needed to be said. I like to think of that especially, Monsieur."

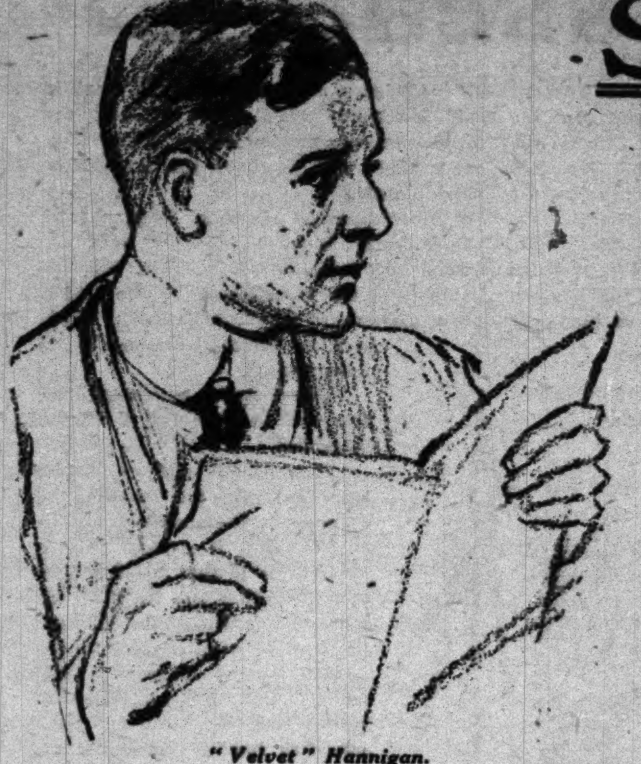
SWEET AUBURN

How Wifey's Winning Ways Wrecked a Promising Career.



"Velvet" Hannigan.

"VELVET" HANNIGAN—called so because he was smooth, no doubt—was a married man. With him it was not an old accepted condition, for he was a bridegroom, and, therefore, was affirmatively conscious of his blessed estate.

Mrs. Hannigan was a baby-faced cutie whom he had met on a railroad train.

He had met many women before that, women of "class" and women of his own class, and women of many varied types, dimensions, nationalities, creeds, crimes, and "points." Women had always interested but never before had disarmed Velvet. He had dipped into the game, trifled with the queens in the deck, then discarded them and called for a new cut and shuffle; for he was a poker player by vocation and profession, and the test of the play had always been to him to get up from the table a winner.

Hannigan went after ambitious stakes only. He was no penny-ante card cheater, no cigar store backroom piker. He specialized in that first asset of the charlatan, a "front," which edged him into the company of gentlemen. Gentlemen, as a class, have money—maybe that's what makes them gentlemen. Anyway, the most profitable victims in poker are gentlemen with money, because they have something to lose, and, being gentlemen, probably will lose their money. No gentleman is a very good poker player, that consummation being a combination of patience, caution, percentage figuring, and craftiness foreign to the fiber of the elect. Add against that, then, a few slick tricks of the thieving "money player" and the gullible gentlemen are ready for the massacre.

Hannigan was on his way to St. Louis when he met Mildred Pearce. She was going there, too, returning from a visit to the home of her aunt in Peoria. She was unchaperoned, as most American girls are, and when the metropolitan sharpshooter entered the Pullman, followed by a porter lugging a couple of tony bags, and he laid off his seal-collared overcoat and sat into one of the revolving chairs, she took a look and was heard to gasp.

He was handsome—after a fashion; after that fashion that most appeals to adolescent girls of the cuddle-me persuasion. He was tall and slender. His hair was brown and sheen. His smooth shaven face was clear and a wee trifle pale. His nose was bridged with precision and charm. His clothes fit him as only the clothes of a stage hero or a "swell" gambler can. He wore no jewelry, his linen was silk—plain white—and there was but one affectation visible, that one conspicuous but convincingly decisive—he wore tan spats. A man who wears spats looks either like an ass or a blood; there is no mean result. A man who cannot wear spats with distinction should get thirty days if he insists on having them, and a man who can artistically wear spats should be compelled by federal legislation always to have them in view for the general good of the beauty of the world. Hannigan, if that suggestion were followed, would probably be chosen by congress as Spats Wearer in Chief, for his immaculate cloth ankle camouflage set him off like a single, rimless diamond on the black corsage of a natural blonde.

When Mildred beheld those spats and then let her dancing eye rove upward, over every perfect sartorial and natural line, then to the attractive face and head, barbered with discretion and quietly screaming with those cryptic properties commonly ascribed to "men of the world," she was smothered with a great emotion. She went deep for the lost breath, and, by all her strength, reached it. That was when she gasped.

Velvet was not unconscious of her scrutiny, nor, in truth, of her verdict and her thrill. Without moving his head, as he had learned to do it at the poker tables of the nation, he eased her a look with his eyes at a far angle. This is what he saw:

A maiden of some 19, nattily clad in fashion girlish even for her few years, with an infantile countenance that ran to circular outlines; her nose was delightfully pug, her lips were deliciously pink, her teeth were flashingly white and incredibly regular, and she had two dimples, one in the left cheek and one in her little chin. But that wasn't all. Wonder of wonders—that face was framed, in a tumble of curls that hid ears except for a pink peep here and there, in hair of the deepest red. Such faces are not few; such hair is not rare; but the combination is, truly, one to go many leagues to see and sigh over.

Hannigan turned his head. He had seen more than he had looked for, and, for once, almost lost his composure entirely. As it was, he had "tipped his hand" to the extent that Mildred had perceived his tell-tale start, and had realized in that flash that she had made an impression of no beggarly proportions on the adorable stranger.

Nothing was more natural, therefore, than that Hannigan should pick up the magazine which had tobogganed from the girl's lap. He did, and she thanked him with both dimples and all those teeth and a little shake that rearranged every red ringlet and deranged Velvet's well oiled cogs, accustomed though they were to working methodically and without the "give" of any emotionalism. He smiled back, and Mildred, though no blithering, naive schoolgirl, blushed. Have you ever seen a blush like that encompassed in hair like that, punctuated with teeth like that, pierced by dimples like those? Hannigan was gone.

To hold this narrative concise and compact, let us progress no further into the looks, the sighs, the blushes, the head-spinnings of Hannigan and Mildred. Let us understand that each could be a tale in itself, but will not be. He took her to dinner presently, and she ate oysters and a small steak and celery salad and peach Melba, while he had lentil soup, fried chicken, and a demi-tasse; thus are we back to vital statistics and germane facts, and while on such items, we may add that when Mildred left the train that evening Hannigan had arranged to meet her for luncheon at St. Louis' good hotel next noon. He couldn't play poker that night, he was too quivery; and when Mildred told what a grand time she had enjoyed at her aunt's her mother couldn't understand since when or why her aunt had become such an amazing hostess and entertainer.

At luncheon Mildred was even more ravishing, fresh and childlike in a demure frock; and Velvet was smoother than silk, ordering lavishly without ostentation, sipping a cocktail with sangfroid, tossing off comments on cities he had done [not what you mean!] and men of importance whom he had met. Mildred was dizzy and Hannigan was bedizened when they parted, having first arranged to meet next afternoon for a little drive.

In Forest park, as they whirred over the smooth roadway, Hannigan proposed. She opened her big baby eyes, parted her rose petal lips, let a pink blush dawn and rise to fullness—then began to cry. It was not a bitter cry. It was a spasm of cradle hysterics. Hannigan slid his arm about her and held her gingerly close. She said nothing—not even no.

When she breathed again Hannigan bent down and told her, very low, that he loved her; that she was the first; that he could never live again without her. It was a very low thing to do, for he knew that he did not dare tell her how he earned his living. He had hinted that he was the traveling representative for a New York industry, which he was, but he knew he had let her be deceived.

The girl said she wanted time—she had to think this out alone. Years ago a girl might have said in the same circumstances that she wanted to consult her parents; but Mildred was a modern child, and she wanted to figure this out alone.

A few days later Hannigan and Mildred were married across the river, and came back to town in a taxi, man and bride.

There was a wedding supper downtown, and then the Hannigans took a train for Memphis.

Memphis is a pleasant town for a honeymoon. One may die there of lonesomeness. But two just made one crave just that kind of lonesomeness, therefore, Memphis is popular as a honeymoon town, mostly with farmers from Arkansas. Hannigan felt drawn to Memphis for several concurrent reasons: the one referred to, besides the fact that one never meets any one one knows there, and besides the fact that he had neglected his pokering during the courtship and had itching finger tips for a certain famous game that took place nightly in the Tennessee Chess and Checker club, of which he had long heard with tickling palate.

The Tennessee Chess and Checker club, where no one ever played chess or checkers, and where the wealthy coterie of planters, merchants, and political leaders of the mellow old state played table stakes stud, was a quiet, noble, aristocratic, exclusive institution, one of the undisturbed relics of the days befo' the wah. There was no limit to the hospitality or the stakes there.

Tennessee is a condition which must be lived to be understood. The gentility is no specious got-rich-suddenly or munitions-made Pittsburgh clique. Wealth is presumed to go with the real folks, and, somehow, they have it. Those who were ruined by the civil war do not turn up with the elect nowadays, or they have gotten back their fortunes in some lazy, effortless way. The ones who complain about the price of cotton and the passing of the Mississippi as a channel of rich commerce are not Tennesseeans of the First Families. Only chorus girls, as they sighingly say they'll have another, claim southern nobility and northern indigence. One told me once, as she recounted the cotton-sown acres that her grandfather had before the Yanks devastated his plantation, that she would not have had to display her figger for a few rotten bucks if the north had let "our people" alone.

"Yep," she heaved, "Abra'm Linco'n drove me to this life!"

But Abe seems to have left no lasting mark on the cream of the Tennessee upper class as it manifests itself in the Tennessee Chess and Checker club. The massive furnishings and deep, muffling carpets, the drapes and the utensils and the paraphernalia, are of fabulous values. The interior coos and murmurs of traditions and dignified, formal manners.

The spirit of the south of generations ago is holily preserved. The same shiny old darkey who waited on the fathers of the current habitues still answers the door; he is old and bent, and all he ever seems to say is, "Evenin', Mistah Sheperds'n, sah," or something else as respectful, unaggressive, and orderly. He has bowed for so many decades that his natural posture is a bow. He has never raised his voice above a whisper in his life within those clubhouse walls. He is, in his heart, a worshiper of any one who has inherited Tennessee Chess and Checker club blood. Beside this black disciple of humility, this bending repudiator of the Fourteenth Amendment, a clerk in Tiffany's in the act of showing a string of pearls to a peevish millionaire matron is a ruffian and a thug.

There is no telephone in the club—there never will be; the founders put none there, that is why. There has never been a "ladies' night"; in the dear days it was not thought well to bring the ladies into the buildings where men clubbed, that custom having grown only of late in the more cosmopolitan settlements. No woman had ever passed through the portal tended by old Henreh.

Into this club Hannigan planned to oil his way, for he had heard that fat pickings were there, and that one once in was accepted per se as above question. Club gentlemen are presumed to be above suspicion; guests become for the time immune from as much as the raising of an eyebrow. Should one play better than a gentleman might, the losers thank him for having visited with them and having done them the flattering consideration of taking their money.

All this sounded like cash in the bank to Velvet, who proposed to edge in under this robe of sanctuary, mulct the good hosts properly and plenty, and return east to kid Dixie with the other deep sea sharks at Broadway and Forty-fifth.

He put up at the Gayoso with Mrs. Hannigan. They spent three saccharine days there while he set his traps. Then he accomplished the primary and essential step by having a visitor's card issued him through the unasking, flowing generosity of a local steamboat owner whom he had contrived to "meet" in the hotel grillroom. That night he visited the club and looked on, sizing up the style and elasticity of the play as a butcher might visit a stall to look over the grade of cattle for next day's slaughter. The inventory was satisfactory. The money was of handsome denomination and the method was "loose."

On the fifth day of the bridal sojourn he kissed his lollypop bride and said he had to go to the Tennessee Chess and Checker club—had to meet some gentlemen there in furtherance of an important business deal. Mildred, of course, protested, clinging to him and pleading that now he was all her own and should have no business; anyway, he mustn't have any in the evenings.

He disengaged her fond hands as gently as that can be done—and, remember, manipulating hands was his specialty—and said that this was very, very, most terribly pressing, and that he'd be back just as soon as he could put the deal through; that she must be a patient little sugar drop, because he might be gone until maybe midnight.

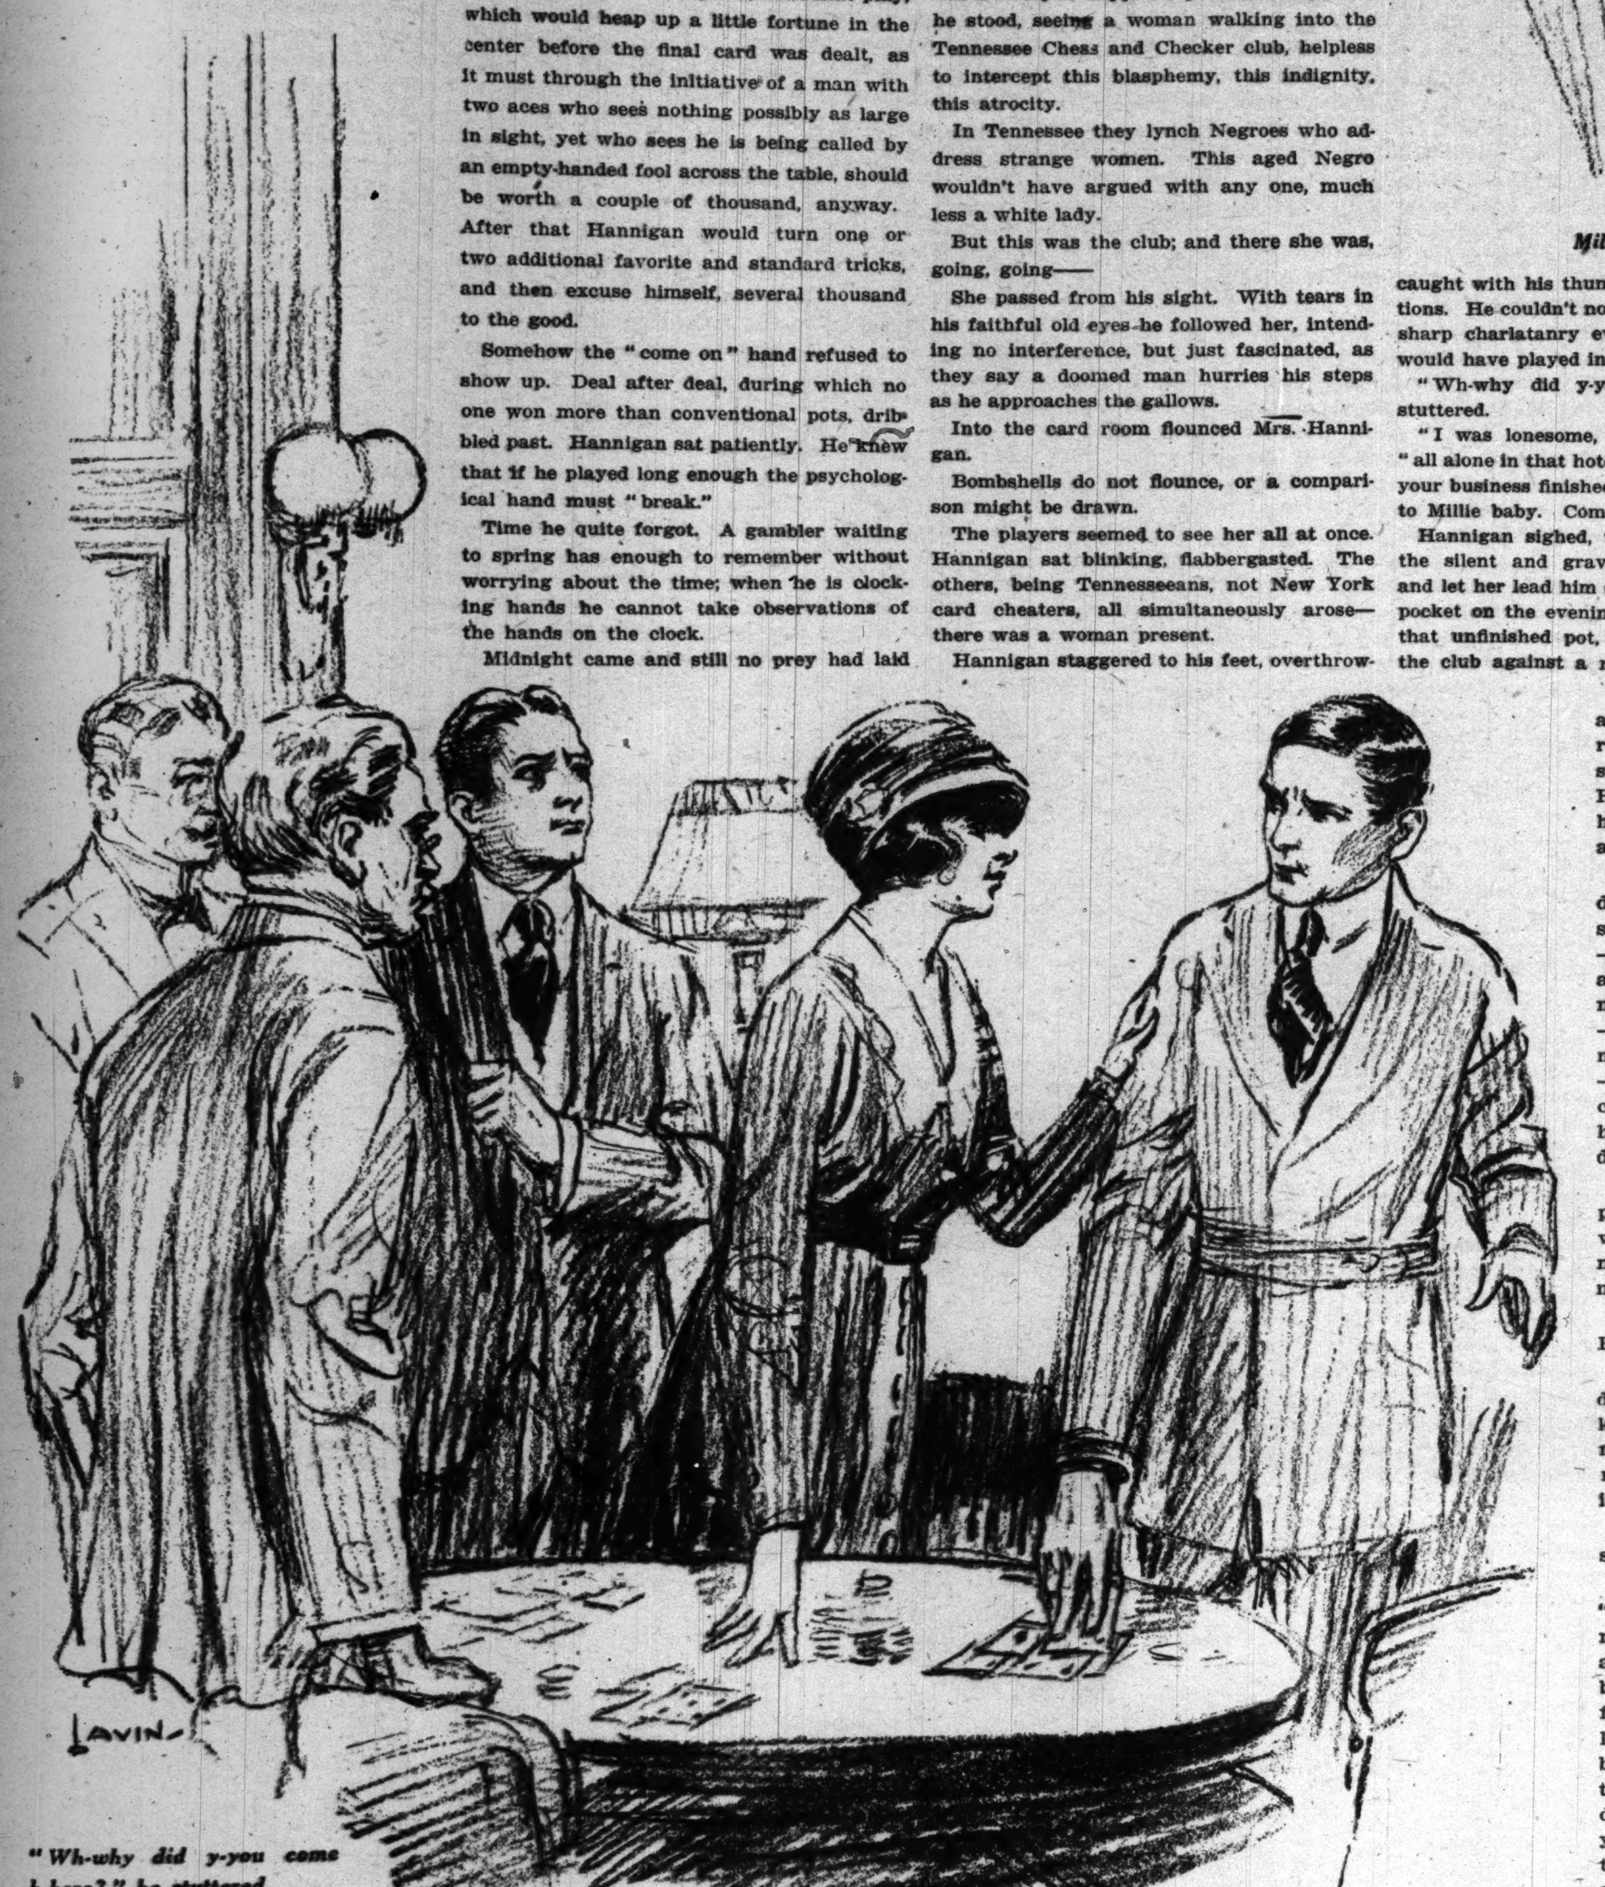
Mildred.

She stamped her little slippered foot and said he must not stay away from his Millie doll till any such dre'fly awful hours as midnight. So he promised that he wouldn't if she'd let him go right away. Reluctantly, and again impressing him with the heinousness of the honeymoon felony that he was committing, she kissed and kissed and kissed him and let him start away.

Henreh let Hannigan in, more obsequious, if that may be imagined, than even he was accustomed to being toward the members, for a guest was sacredly sacred there. He called him by name as he gave him greeting, for that aged minion never forgot a name or a face that had come into the T. C. and C. C.



"Wh-why did y-you come h-here?" he stuttered.

Velvet strayed into the card room and was invited to sit in. With some assumed awkwardness he assented. He did not say that he played but a lame and indifferent game; that is the first watermark of the crude sniper. But he took his place without any show of eagerness or satisfaction—just as though he were glad to do as the kind men asked him to.

The play, as is the fashion in Tennessee, was for cash. Hannigan laid before his waistcoat an unostentatious but sufficient pile of bank and government notes, and began stringing along, winning a few dollars, dropping a few, saying little, waiting for the hand to frame itself, with his assistance, just right for the old tip and toss—the killing; this was to come about when another hand showed two aces faced, when he planned to "pair" on his fifth card as he released a third of the same character from his "holdout" for the "hole card."

One good pot in that game, with that play, which would heap up a little fortune in the center before the final card was dealt, as it must through the initiative of a man with two aces who sees nothing possibly as large in sight, yet who sees he is being called by an empty-handed fool across the table, should be worth a couple of thousand, anyway. After that Hannigan would turn one or two additional favorite and standard tricks, and then excuse himself, several thousand to the good.

Somehow the "come on" hand refused to show up. Deal after deal, during which no one won more than conventional pots, dribbled past. Hannigan sat patiently. He knew that if he played long enough the psychological hand must "break."

Time he quite forgot. A gambler waiting to spring has enough to remember without worrying about the time; when he is clocking hands he cannot take observations of the hands on the clock.

Midnight came and still no prey had laid itself open. Hannigan could not hurry the tip and toss. He would not, either. Successful gamblers wait. They have their systems and they strike when those can be operated. The rest of the time is utilized in conservation, wherein they peter along, making no strained efforts to stretch the possibilities of their hands, taking no chances on losing more than small amounts.

But just at twenty minutes past 12 the second ace "fell" to a man across the board.

It was twenty minutes past 12 when a taxi drew up at the carriage stone of the Tennessee Chess and Checker club.

From it tripped an ingenue with wonderful red hair and two dimples. She told the driver to wait, and made across the walk, mounted the steps of the classic building and pushed with gloved forefinger on the white bell button.

The door swung open and Henreh, his head down, said "Good evenin'—" in the act of raising his eyes to get material for the rest of the salutation. His eyes stopped, paralyzed. He saw a skirt!

The old vassal started back and almost fell off his shaky understructures. There was a sweep of fripperies past him, and there he stood, seeing a woman walking into the Tennessee Chess and Checker club, helpless to intercept this blasphemy, this indignity, this atrocity.

In Tennessee they lynch Negroes who address strange women. This aged Negro wouldn't have argued with any one, much less a white lady.

But this was the club; and there she was, going, going——

She passed from his sight. With tears in his faithful old eyes he followed her, intending no interference, but just fascinated, as they say a doomed man hurries his steps as he approaches the gallows.

Into the card room flounced Mrs. Hannigan.

Bombshells do not flounce, or a comparison might be drawn.

The players seemed to see her all at once. Hannigan sat blinking, flabbergasted. The others, being Tennesseeans, not New York card cheaters, all simultaneously arose—there was a woman present.

Hannigan staggered to his feet, overthrowing his chair as he did. He started to talk, but his throat refused to obey him.

Mildred, unabashed, in truth largely unconscious of the offense she had perpetrated, smiled to the solemn gentlemen who stood respectfully about the round, green table. She walked to Hannigan, and, slipping her arm into his, said winningly:

"Sorry, gentlemen, if I interrupted your pleasures, but my sweety promised to be home at midnight."

Hannigan should have gone then and there, without even apologies, for there was nothing to be said that he knew how to say. But he was like a tiger torn from its young in his breast, and like a thieving schoolboy caught with his thumb in the jam in his actions. He couldn't now have put through his sharp charlatanry even if these gentlemen would have played in the presence of a lady.

"Wh-why did y-you come h-here?" he stuttered.

"I was lonesome, daddy man," she said, "all alone in that hotel. You said you'd have your business finished by midnight and come to Millie baby. Come on, honey papa."

Hannigan sighed, threw up his hands to the silent and grave southern gentlemen, and let her lead him out. He was $11 out of pocket on the evening's play, he had $80 in that unfinished pot, and he was ruined at the club against a return engagement.

They gave him his hat and coat and he let his red-topped toy bride steady him into the taxi. Half way back to the hotel he got his breath again.

"You know what you did?" he asked, quite severely. "You crabbed—I mean you wrecked a very big order for me, made a sucker—a fool—out of me among the men I do business with—and all because you couldn't wait half an hour. Now, this won't do."

"Yes, it will, angel papa," said she. "What was it you liked most on me when you first saw me?"

"Oh—oh, hell!" barked Hannigan.

"Exactly," said Mildred. "Only you didn't know it. What you liked most about me was my red hair. Now, wasn't it, 'lasses drop?"

"Yes—I s'pose so." snapped Hannigan.

"Well," said Mildred, "my hair isn't red for nothing. See? Hereafter, when you have business deals you work fast, because I need a lot of attention. Nobody but a gambler has to play cards when he doesn't want to. And you're not going to want to when I'm lonesome, are you, popsy wops?"

"I am a gambler," said Velvet, steelily, "That's what I do for a living. Now you've got my number."

"Oh, I don't care," said Mildred. "Hereafter you can gamble in the morning, and then come home to lunch, and then, if you want to, you can gamble in the afternoon again, and then come home to dinner. But you mustn't gamble after dinner, because then you belong to your li'l ootsy Millie, and she wants you with her and——

But the taxi was at the door of the hotel.

I met Hannigan two years afterward, and he told me that he had quit playing cards and was working as an automobile salesman—days.

HOLDING HANDS

Mister Masters Was No Bolder Than a Mouse But He Found Courage at the Right Moment.

AT first nobody knew him; then the Hotchkisses knew him, and then it seemed as if everybody had always known him. He had run the gantlet of gossip and come through without a scratch. He was first noticed sitting in the warm corner made my Willcox's annex and the covered passage that leads to the main building. Pairs or trios of people, bareheaded, their tennis clothes (it was a tennis year) mostly covered from view by clumsy coonskin coats, passing Wilcox's in dilapidated runabouts drawn by uncurried horses, a nigger boy sitting in the back of each, his thin legs dangling, had glimpses of him through the driveway gap in the tall Amor privet hedge that is between Willcox's and the road. These pairs or trios having seen would break in upon whatever else they may have been saying to make such remarks as: "He can't be, or he wouldn't be at Willcox's"; or, contradictorily: "He must be, or he'd do something besides sit in the sun"; or, "Don't they always have to drink lots of milk?"; or, 'Anyway, they're quite positive that it's not catching"; or, "Poor boy, what nice hair he's got."

With the oldtimers the newcomer, whose case was otherwise so doubtful, had one thing in common; a coonskin coat. It was handsome of its kind, unusually long, voluminous and black. The upturned collar came above his ears and in the opening his face showed thin and white, and his eyes, always intent upon the book in his lap, had a look of being closed. Two things distinguished him from other men: his great length of limb, and the color and close cropped, almost molded effect of his hair. It was the color of old Domingo mahogany, and showed off the contour of his fine round head with excellent effect.

Mister Masters never remembered to have passed so lonely and dreary a February. The sunny south was a medicine that had been prescribed and that had to be swallowed. Aiken on the label had looked inviting enough, but he found the contents of the bottle distasteful in the extreme. "The south is sunny," he wrote to his mother, "but O, my great jumping grandmother, how seldom! And it's cold, mummy, like being beaten with whips. And it rains—well, if it rained cats and dogs a fellow wouldn't mind. Maybe they'd speak to him, but it rains solid cold water, and it hits the windows the way waves hit the portholes at sea; and the only thing that stops the rain is a wind that comes all the way from Alaska for the purpose. In protected corners the sun has a certain warmth. But the other morning the waiter put my milk on the wrong side of my chair, in the shade, namely, and when I went to drink it it was frozen solid. You were right about the people here all being kind; they are all the same kind. I know them all now—by sight; but not by name, except, of course, some who are stopping at Willcox's. We have had three ice storms—'Kennst du das Land wo die Citronen blühen?' I am getting to kennst it very well. But Willcox, who keeps a record of such things, says that this is the coldest winter Aiken has known since last winter!

"But in spite of all this there is a truth that must be spoken. I feel a thousand times better and stronger than when I came. And yesterday, exercising in the privacy of my room, I discovered that there are once more calves upon my legs. This is the truth, too. I have no one to talk to but your letters. So don't stint me. Stint me with money if you can (here I defy you), but for the love of heaven keep me posted. If you will promise to write every day I will tell you the name of the prettiest girl in Aiken. She goes by eight times every day, and she looks my way out of the corner of her eye. And I pretend to be reading and try very hard to look handsome and interesting. . . . Mother! . . . just now I rested my hand on the arm of my chair and the wood felt hot to the touch! It's high noon and the sun's been on it since 8 o'clock, but still it seems very wonderful Willcox says that the winter is practically over; but I begged him not to hurry. . . ."

Such was the usual trend of his letters. But that one dated March 7 began with the following astonishing statement:

"I love Aiken . . . ." and went on to explain why.

But Mister Masters was not allowed to love Aiken until he had come through the whole gantlet of gossip. It had first been suggested that he was a consumptive and a menace ("though of course one feels terribly sorry for them, my dear"). This had been disproved. Then it was spread about that he belonged to a wealthy family of Masters from the upper west side ("very well in their way, no doubt, and the backbone of the country, my dear, but one doesn't seem to get on with them, and I shouldn't think they'd come to Aiken of all places"). But a gentleman who knew the west side Masters, root and branch, shook his head to this; and went so far as to say, "Not much, he isn't;" and went further and shuddered. Then it got about that Mister Masters was poor (and that made people suspicious of him). Then it got about that he was rich (and that made them even more so). Then that he wrote for a living (and that was nearly as bad as to say that he cheated at cards—or at least it was the kind of thing that they didn't do). And then, finally, the real truth about him, or something like it, got out; and the hatchet of suspicion was buried, and there was peace in Aiken. In that Aiken of whose peace the judge, referring to a pockmarked mulatto girl, had thundered that it should not be disturbed for any woman—"no—not even were she Helen of Troy."

This was the truth that got out about Mister Masters. He was a nephew of the late Bishop Masters. His mother, on whom he was dependent, was very rich; she had once been prominent in society. He was 30, and was good at games. He did not work at anything.

So he was something that Aiken could understand and appreciate; a young man, who was well born, who didn't have to work—and who didn't want to.

But old Mrs. Hotchkiss did not know of these things when, one bright day in passing Willcox's (she was on one good foot, one rheumatic foot, and a long black cane with a gold handle) she noticed the young man, pale and rather sad looking, in his fur coat and steamer rug, his eyes on his book, and stopped abruptly and spoke to him through the gap in the hedge.

"I hope you'll forgive an old woman for scraping an acquaintance," she piped, in her brisk, cheerful voice, "but I want to know if you're getting better, and I thought the best way was to stop and ask."

Mister Masters' steamer rug fell from about his long legs and his face became rosy, for he was very shy.

"Indeed, I am," he said, "ever so much. And thank you for asking."

"I'm tired," said the old lady, "of seeing you always sitting by yourself, dead tired of it. I shall come for you this afternoon at 4 in my carriage, and take you for a drive."

"It was abrupt," Mister Masters wrote to his mother, "but it was kind. When I had done blushing and scraping with my feet and pulling my forelock, we had the nicest little talk. And she remembered you in the old days at Lenox, and said why hadn't I told her before. And then she asked if I liked Aiken, and, seeing how the land lay, I lied and said I loved it. And she said that that was her nice, sensible young fellow, or words to that effect. And then she asked me why, and I said because it has such a fine climate; and then she laughed in my face, and said that I was without reverence for her age—not a man—a scalawag.

"And do you know, Mrs. Hotchkiss is like one of those magic keys in fairy stories? All doors open to her. Between you and me I have been thinking Aiken's floating population snobbish, purse-proud, and generally absurd. And instead, the place seems to exist so that kindness and hospitality may not fail on earth. Of course I'm not up to genuine sprees, such as dining out and sitting up till half past ten or eleven. But I can go to luncheons and watch other people play tennis, and poke about gardens with old ladies, and guess when particular flowers will be out, and learn the names of birds and of hostile bushes that prick and of friendly bushes that don't.

"All the cold weather has gone to glory; and it's really spring because the roosters crow all night. Mrs. Hotchkiss says it's because they are roosters and immoral. But I think they're crowing because they've survived the winter. I am. . . ."

Aiken took a great fancy to Mister Masters. First because Aiken was giving him a good time; and second because he was really good company when you got him well cornered, and his habitual fright had worn off. He was the shyest, most frightened six footer in the memory of Aiken. If you spoke to him suddenly he blushed, and if you prepared him by first clearing your throat he blushed just the same. And he had a crooked, embarrassed smile that was a delight to see.

But gradually he became almost at ease with nearly everybody; and in the shyest, gentlest way enjoyed himself hugely. But the prettiest girl in Aiken had very hard work with him.

As a stag fights when brought to bay, so Mister Masters when driven into a corner could talk as well and as freely as the next man; but on his own initiative there was, as we Americans say, "nothing doing." Whether or not the prettiest girl in Aiken ever rolled off a log is unknown; but such an act would have been no more difficult for her than to corner Mister Masters. The man courted cornering, especially by her. But given the desired situation, neither could make anything of it. Mister Masters' tongue became forthwith as helpless as a man tied hand and foot and gagged. He had nothing with which to pay for the delight of being cornered but his rosiest, steadiest blush, and his crookedest and most embarrassed smile. But he retained a certain activity of mind and within himself was positively voluble with what he would say if he only could.

I don't mean that the pair sat or stood or walked in absolute silence. Indeed, little Miss Blythe could never be silent for a long period nor permit it in others, but I mean that with the lines and the machinery of a North Atlantic liner, their craft of propinquity made about as much progress as a scow. Nevertheless, though neither was really aware of this, each kept saying things that cannot be put into words, to the other; otherwise the very first cornering of Mister Masters by little Miss Blythe must have been the last. But even as it was way back at the beginning of things, and always will be, Beauty spoke to Handsome and Handsome up and spoke back.

"No," said little Miss Blythe, upon being sharply cross-questioned by Mrs. Hotchkiss, "he practically never does say anything."

Mrs. Hotchkiss dug a little round hole in the sand with her long black cane and made an insulting face at little Miss Blythe.

"Some men," said she, "can't say boo to a goose."

If other countries produce girls like little Miss Blythe, I have never met a specimen; and I feel very sure that foreign young ladies do not become personages at the age of 17. When she met Mister Masters she had been a personage for six years, and it was time for her to yield her high place to another; to marry, to bear children, and to prove that all the little matters for which she was celebrated were merely passing phases and glitterings of a character which fundamentally was composed of simple and noble traits.

Little Miss Blythe had many brothers and sisters; no money, as we reckon money; and only such prospects as she herself might choose from innumerable offers. She was little; her figure looked best in athletic clothes (low neck didn't go well with her, because her face was tanned so brown) and she was strong and quick as a pony. All the

It was thought by some, as an instance, that Miss Blythe could beat the famous May Sutton once out of three times at tennis. But Miss Sutton, with the natured and indomitable aggression of genius, set this supposition at rest. e Miss Blythe could not beat Miss Sutton out of three or three hundred times. And at 23 it was high time for her to rry and settle down. First because she ldn't go on playing games and showing ses forever, and second because she wanted to. But with whom she wanted to marry settle down she could not for the life of her have said. Sometimes she thought that it would be with Mr. Blagdon. He was rich, and he was a widower; but wherever she went he managed to go, and he had some of the finest horses in the world, and he wouldn't take no for an answer. Sometimes she said to the moon:

"I'll give myself a year, and if at the end of that time I don't like anybody better than Bob, why . . . ." Or, in a different mood, "I'm tired of everything I do; if he happens to ask me tomorrow I'll say yes." Or, "I've ridden his horses, and broken his golf clubs, and borrowed his guns (and he won't lend them to anybody else), and I suppose I've got to pay him back." Or, "I really do like him a lot," or, "I really don't like him at all."

Then there came into this young woman's life Mister Masters. And he blushed his blush, and smiled his crooked smile, and looked at her when she wasn't looking at him (and she knew that he was looking) and was unable to say as much as "Boo" to her; and in the hidden springs of her nature that which she had always longed for happened, and became, and was. And one night she said to the moon: "I know it isn't proper for me to be so attentive to him, and I know everybody is talking about it, but—" and she rested her beautiful brown chin on her shapely, strong, brown hands, and a tear like a diamond stood in each of her unbelievably blue eyes, and she looked at the moon and said: "But it's Harry Masters or —bust!"

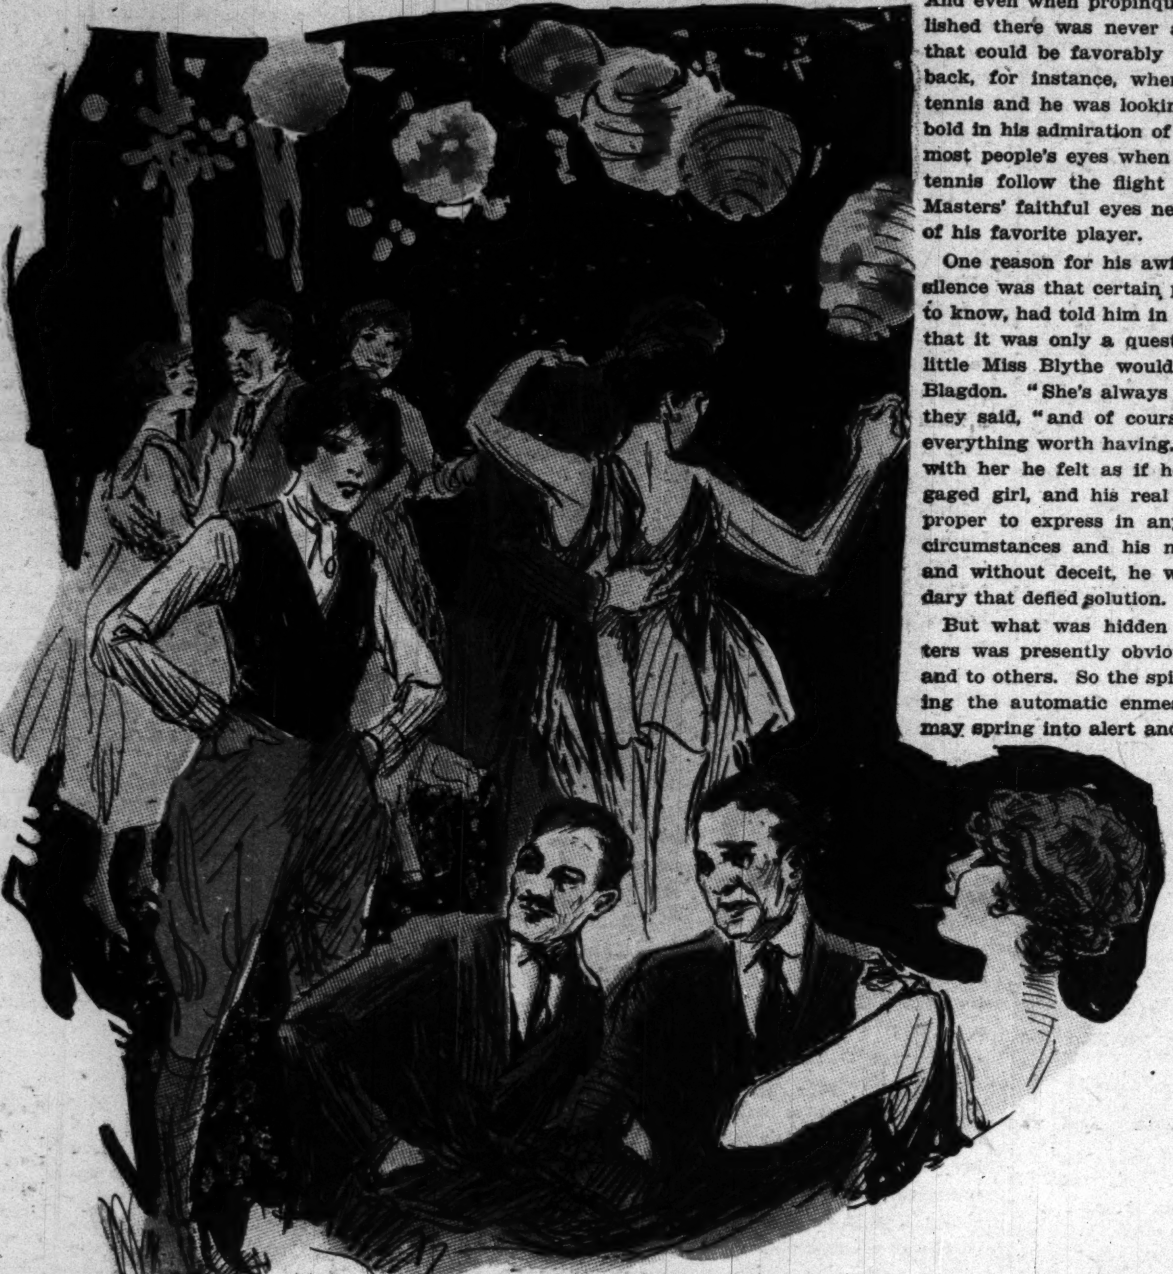
Mr. Bob Blagdon, the rich widower, had been content to play a waiting game, for he knew very well that beneath her good nature little Miss Blythe had a proud temper and was to be won rather by the man who should make himself indispensable to her than by him who should be forever pestering her with speaking and pleading his cause. She is an honest girl, he told himself, and without thinking of consequences she is always putting herself under obligations to me. Let her ride down lover's lane with young Blank or young Dash, she will not be able to forget that she is on my favorite mare. In his soul he felt a certain proprietorship in little Miss Blythe, but to this his ruddy, dark mustached face and slow moving eyes were a screen.



"The guests were not homogeneously dressed."

Mr. Blagdon had always gone after what he wanted in a kind of slow, indifferent way that begot confidence in himself and in the beholder; and (in the case of Miss Blythe) a kind of panic in the object sought. She liked him because she was used to him, and because he could and would talk sense upon subjects which interested her. But she was afraid of him because she knew that he expected her to marry him some day, and because she knew that other people, including her own family, expected this of her. Sometimes she felt ready to take unto herself all the horses and country places and automobiles and yachts, and in a life lived regardless of expense to bury and forget her better self, but more often, like a fly caught in a spider's web, she wished by one desperate effort (even should it cost her a wing, to carry out the figure) to free herself once and forever from the entanglement.

But, after all, the spider in the case was not such a terrible fellow. Just because a man wants a girl that doesn't want him, and means to have her, he hasn't necessarily earned a hard name. Such a man as often as not becomes one-half of a very happy marriage. And Mr. Bob Blagdon was considered an exceptionally good fellow. In his heart, though I have never heard him say so openly, I think he actually looked down on people who gambled and drank to excess, and who were uneducated and had acquired (whatever they may have been born with) perfectly empty heads. I think that he had a sound and sensible virtue; one ear for one side of an argument, and one for the other.

There is no reason to doubt that he was a good husband to his first wife, and wished to replace her with little Miss Blythe, not to supplant her. To his three young children he was more of a grandfather than a father; though strong willed and even stubborn, he was unable half the time to say no to them. And I have seen him going on all fours with the youngest child perched on his back kicking him in the ribs and urging him to canter. So if he intended by the strength of his will and of his riches to compel little Miss Blythe to marry (and to be happy with him; he thought he could manage that, too), it is only one blot on a decent and upright character. And it is unjust to have called him spider.

But when Mister Masters entered (so timidly to the eye, but really, so masterfully) into little Miss Blythe's life, she could no longer tolerate the idea of marrying Mr. Blagdon. All in a twinkle she knew that horses and yachts and great riches could never make up to her for the loss of a long, bashful youth with a crooked smile. You can't be really happy if you are shivering with cold; you can't be really happy if you are dripping with heat. And she knew that without Mister Masters she must always be one thing on the other—too cold or too hot, never quite comfortable.

Her own mind was made up from the first; even to going through any number of awful scenes with Blagdon. But as time passed and her attentions (I shall have to call it that) to Mister Masters made no visible progress, there were times when she was obliged to think that she would never marry anybody at all. But in her heart she knew that Masters was attracted by her, and to this strand of knowledge she clung so as not to be drowned in a sea of despair.

Her position was one of extreme difficulty and delicacy. Sometimes Mister Masters came near her of his own accord, and remained in bashful silence; but more often she was obliged to have recourse to "accidents" in order to bring about propinquity. And even when propinquity had been established there was never any progress made that could be favorably noted. Behind her back, for instance, when she was playing tennis and he was looking on he was quite bold in his admiration of her. And whereas most people's eyes when they are watching tennis follow the flight of the ball Mister Masters' faithful eyes never left the person of his favorite player.

One reason for his awful bashfulness and silence was that certain people, who seemed to know, had told him in the very beginning that it was only a question of time before little Miss Blythe would become Mrs. Bob Blagdon. "She's always been fond of him," they said, "and of course he can give her everything worth having." So when he was with her he felt as if he was with an engaged girl, and his real feelings not being proper to express in any way under such circumstances and his nature being single and without deceit, he was put in a quandary that defied solution.

But what was hidden from Mister Masters was presently obvious to Mr. Blagdon and to others. So the spider, sleepily watching the automatic enmeshment of the fly, may spring into alert and formidable action at seeing a powerful beetle blunder into the web and threaten by his stupid, aimless struggles to set the fly at liberty and to destroy the whole fabric spun with care and toil.

To a man in love there is no redder danger signal than a sight of the object of his affections standing or sitting contentedly with another man, and neither of them saying as much as boo to the other. He may, with more equanimity, regard and countenance a genuine flirtation, full of laughter and eye making. The first time Mr. Blagdon saw them together he thought; the second time he felt; the third time he came forward graciously smiling. The web might be in danger from the beetle; the fly at the point of kicking up her heels and flying gayly away; but it may be in the power of the spider to spin enough fresh threads on the spur of the moment to rebind the fly and even to make prisoner the doughty beetle.

"Don't you ride, Mister Masters?" said Mr. Blagdon.

"Of course," said the shy one, blushing. "But I'm not to do anything violent before June."

"Sorry," said Mr. Blagdon, "because I've a string of ponies that are eating their heads off. I'd be delighted to mount you."

But Mister Masters smiled with unusual crookedness and stammered his thanks and his regrets. And so that thread came to nothing.

The spider attempted three more threads; but little Miss Blythe looked serenely up.

"I never saw such a fellow as you, Bob," said she, "for putting other people under obligations. When I think of the weight of my personal ones I shudder." She smiled innocently and looked up into his face. "When people can't pay their debts they have to go through bankruptcy, don't they? And then their debts all have to be forgiven."

(Concluded on following page.)

Mr. Blagdon felt as if an icy cold hand had been suddenly laid upon the most sensitive part of his back; but his expression underwent no change. His slow eyes continued to look into the beautiful, brightly colored face that was turned up to him.

"Very honorable bankrupts," said he carelessly, "always pay what they can on the dollar"

Presently he strolled away, easy and nonchalant; but inwardly he carried a load of dread, and he saw clearly that he must learn where he stood with little Miss Blythe, or not know the feeling of easiness from one day to the next. Better, he thought, to be the recipient of a painful and undeserved ultimatum than to breakfast, lunch, and dine with uncertainty.

The next day, there being some dozens of people almost in earshot, Mr. Blagdon had an opportunity to speak to little Miss Blythe. Under the circumstances the last thing she expected was a declaration; they were in full view of everybody; anybody might stroll up and interrupt. So what Mr. Blagdon had to say came to her with something of the effect of sudden thunder from a clear sky.

"Phyllis," said he, "you have been looking about you since you were 17. Will I do?"

"Oh, Bob!" she protested.

"I have tried to do," said he, not without a fine ring of manliness. "Have I made good?"

She smiled bravely, and looked as nonchalant as possible; but her heart was beating heavily.

"I've liked being good friends—so much," she said. "Don't spoil it."

"I tell her," said he, "that in all the world there is only the one girl—only the one. And she says, 'Don't spoil it.'"

"Bob——"

"I will make you happy," he said. . . . "Has it never entered your dear head that some time you must give me an answer?"

She nodded her dear head, for she was very honest.

"I suppose so," she said.

"Well?" said he.

"In my mind," she said, "I have never been able to give you the same answer twice. . . ."

"A decision is expected from us," said he. "People are growing tired of our long backing and filling."

"People Do they matter?"

"They matter a great deal. And you know it."

"Yes. I suppose they do. Let me off for now, Bob. People are looking at us. . . ."

"I want an answer."

But she would not be coerced.

"You shall have one, but not now. I'm not sure what it will be."

"If you can't be sure now, can you ever be sure?"

"Yes. Give me two weeks. I will think about nothing else."

"Thank you," he said. "Two weeks. . . . That will be full moon. . . . I will ask all Aiken to a picnic in the woods, weather permitting . . . and—and if your answer is to be my happiness, why, you shall come up to me and say, 'Bob, drive me home, will you?'"

"And if it's the other answer, Bob?"

"If it's the other, Phyllis—why—you—you can walk home."

She laughed joyously, and he laughed, just as if nothing but what was light and amusing was in question between them.

. . . .

Along the Whisky road nearly the whole floating population of Aiken moved on horseback or on wheels. Every fourth or fifth runabout carried a lantern; but the presence in the long, wide gapped procession of other vehicles or equestrians was denoted only by the sounds of voices. Half a dozen family squabbles, half a dozen flirtations (which would result in family squabbles), and half a dozen genuine romances were moving through the sweet smelling dark to Mr. Bob Blagdon's picnic in Red Oak hollow. Only three of the guests knew where Red Oak hollow was, and two of these were sure that they could only find it by daylight; but the third, a noted hunter and pigeon shot, rode at the head of the procession, and pretended (he was 45, with the heart of a child) that he was Buffalo Bill leading a lost wagon train to water. And though nobody could see him for the darkness, he played his part with minute attention to detail, listening, pulling up short, scowling to right and left, wetting a finger and holding it up to see from which direction the air was moving. He was so intent upon bringing his convoy safely through a hostile country that the sounds of laughter or of people in one runabout calling gayly to people in another were a genuine annoyance to him.

Mr. Bob Blagdon had preceded his guests by half an hour, and was already at the scene of the picnic. Fate, or perhaps the weather bureau at Washington, had favored him with just the conditions he would have wished for. The night was hot without heaviness; in the forenoon of that day there had been a shower, just wet enough to keep the surfaces of roads from rising in dust. It was now clear and bestarred, and perhaps a shade less dark than when he had started. Furthermore, it was so still that candles burned without flickering. He surveyed his preparations with satisfaction. And because he was fastidious in entertainment this meant a great deal.

A table thirty feet long and low to the ground, so that people sitting on rugs or cushions could eat from it with comfort, stood beneath the giant red oak that gave a name to the hollow. The white damask with which it was laid and the silver and cut glass gleamed in the light of dozens of candles. The flowers were Marechal Niel roses in a long bank of molten gold.

Except for the lanterns at the serving tables, dimly to be seen through a dense hedgelike growth of Kalmia latifolia, there were no other lights in the hollow; so that the dinner table had the effect of standing in a cave; for where the gleam of the candles ended the surrounding darkness appeared solid like a wall.

It might have been a secret meeting of smugglers or pirates, the Georgian silver on the table representing years of daring theft; it seemed as if blood must have been spilled for the wonderful glass and linen and porcelain. Even those guests most hardened in luxury and extravagance looked twice at Mr. Bob Blagdon's picnic preparations before they could find words with which to compliment him upon them; and the less experienced were beside themselves with enthusiasm and delight. But Mr. Bob Blagdon was wondering what little Miss Blythe would think and say, and he thought it unkind of her, under the circumstances, to be the last to arrive. Unkind, because her doing so was either a good omen or an evil one, and he could not make up his mind which.

The guests were not homogeneously dressed. Some of the men were in dinner clothes; some were in full evening dress; some wore dinner coats above riding breeches and boots; some had come bareheaded, some with hats which they did not propose to remove. Half the women were in low neck and short sleeves; one with short curly hair was breeched and booted like a man; others wore what I suppose may be called theater gowns; and a few who were pretty enough to stand it wore clothes suited to the hazards of a picnic in the woods.

Mr. Blagdon's servants wore his racing colors, blue and silver, knee breeches, black silk stockings, pumps with silver buckles, and powdered hair. They were men picked for their height, wooden faces and well turned calves. They moved and behaved as if utterly untouched and uninterested in their unusual and romantic surroundings; they were like jinns summoned for the occasion by the rubbing of a magic lamp.

At the last moment, when to have been any later would have been either rude or accidental, little Miss Blythe's voice was heard calling from the darkness and asking which of two roads she should take. Half a dozen men rushed off to guide her, and presently she came blinking into the circle of light, followed by Mister Masters, who smiled his crookedest smile and stumbled on a root so that he was cruelly embarrassed.

Little Miss Blythe blinked at the lights, and looked very beautiful. She was all in white and wore no hat. She had a red rose at her throat. She was grave for her—and silent.

The truth was that she had during the last ten minutes made up her mind to ask Mr. Bob Blagdon to drive her home when the picnic should be over. She had asked Mister Masters to drive out with her, and how much that had delighted him nobody knew (alas) except Mister Masters himself. She had during the last few weeks given him every opportunity which her somewhat unconventional soul could sanction. In a hundred ways she had showed him that she liked him immensely; and well—if he liked her in the same way, he would have managed to show it, in spite of his shyness. The drive out had been a failure. They had gotten no further in conversation than the beauty and the sweet smells of the night. And finally, but God alone knows with what reluctance, she had given him up as a bad job.

The long table with its dozens of candles looked like a huge altar, and she was Iphigenia come to the sacrifice. She had never heard of Iphigenia, but that doesn't matter. At Mister Masters, now seated near the other end of the table, she lifted shy eyes; but he was looking at his plate and crumbling a piece of bread. It was like saying good-by. She was silent for a moment; then, smiling with a kind of reckless gayety, she lifted her glass of champagne and turned to the host.

"To you!" she said.

Delight swelled in the breast of Mr. Bob Blagdon. He raised his hand, and from a neighboring thicket there rose abruptly the music of banjos and guitars and the loud, sweet singing of Negroes.

Aiken will always remember that dinner in the woods for its beauty and for its gayety. Two or three men, funny by gift and habit, were at their very best; and fortune adapted the wits of others to the occasion. So that the most unexpected persons became humorous for once in their lives, and said things worth remembering. People gather together for one of three reasons: to make laws, to break them, or to laugh. The first sort of gathering is nearly always funny, and if the last isn't, why then, to be sure, it is a failure. Mr. Bob Blagdon's picnic was an uproarious success. Now and then somebody's whole soul seemed to go into a laugh, in which others could not help joining, until uncontrollable snorts resounded in the hollow and eyes became blinded with tears.

And then suddenly, toward dessert, laughter died away and nothing was to be heard but such exclamations as: "For heaven's sake, look at the moon!" "Did you ever see anything like it?"

Mr. Blagdon had paid money to the owner of Red Oak Hollow for permission to remove certain trees and thickets that would otherwise have obstructed his guests' view of the moonrise. At the end of the vista thus obtained the upper rim of the moon now appeared, as in a frame. And, watching in silence, Mr. Blagdon's guests saw the amazing luminary emerge, as it were, from the earth like a bright and blameless soul from the grave, and sail clear, presently, and upward into untroubled space; a glory serene, smiling, and unanswerable.

No one remembered to have seen the moon so large or so bright. Atomized silver poured like tides of light into the surrounding woods; and at the same time heavenly odors of flowers began to move hither and thither, to change places, to return, and pass, like disembodied spirits engaged in some tranquil and celestial dance.

And it became cooler, so that women called for light wraps, and men tied sweaters round their necks by the arms. Then at a long distance from the dinner table a bonfire began to flicker, and then grow bright and red. And it was discovered that rugs and cushions had been placed (not too near the fire) for people to sit on while they drank their coffee and liquors, and that there were logs to lean against, and boxes of cigars and cigarets where they could most easily be reached.

It was only a question now of how long the guests would care to stay. As a gathering the picnic was over. Some did not use the rugs and cushions that had been provided for them, but strolled away into the woods. A number of slightly intoxicated gentlemen felt it their duty to gather about their host and entertain him. Two married couples brought candles from the dinner table and began a best two out of three at bridge. Sometimes two men and one woman would sit together with their backs against a log, but always after a few minutes one of the men would go away "to get something" and would not return.

It was not wholly by accident that Mr. Masters found himself alone with little Miss Blythe. Emboldened by the gayety of the dinner, and then by the wonder of the moon, he had had the courage to hurry to her side and though there his courage had failed utterly, his action had been such as to deter others from joining her. So, for there was nothing else to do, they found a thick rug and sat upon it, and leaned their backs against a log.

Little Miss Blythe had not yet asked Mr. Blagdon to drive her home. Though she had made up her mind to do so, it would only be at the last possible moment of the twelfth hour. It was now that eleventh hour in which heroines are rescued by bold lovers. But Mr. Masters was no bolder than a mouse. And the moon sailed higher and higher in the heavens.

"Isn't it wonderful?" said little Miss Blythe.

"Wonderful!"

"Just smell it!"

"U-m-m!"

Her sad, rather frightened eyes wandered over to the noisy group of which Mr. Bob Blagdon was the grave and silent center. He knew that little Miss Blythe would keep her promise. He believed in his heart that her decision would be favorable to him; but he was watching her where she sat with Masters and knew that his belief in what she would decide was not strong enough to make him altogether happy.

"And he was old enough to be her father!" repeated the gentleman in the Scotch deer stalker who had been gossiping. Mr. Blagdon smiled, but the words hurt—"old enough to be her father." "My God," he thought, "I am old enough—just!" But then he comforted himself with "Why not? It's how old a man feels, not how old he is."

Then his eyes caught little Miss Blythe's, but she turned hers instantly away.

"This will be the end of the season," she said.

Mister Masters assented. He wanted to tell her how beautiful she looked.

"Do you see old Mr. Black over there?" she said. "He's pretending not to watch us, but he's watching us like a lynx. . . . Did you ever start a piece of news?"

"Never," said Mister Masters.

"It would be rather fun," said little Miss Blythe. "For instance, if we held hands for a moment Mr. Black would see it, and five minutes later everybody would know about it."

Mr. Masters screwed his courage up to the sticking point and took her hand in his. Both looked toward Mr. Black as if inviting him to notice them. Mr. Black was seen almost instantly to whisper to the nearest gentleman.

"There," said little Miss Blythe, and was for withdrawing her hand. But Masters' fingers tightened upon it, and she could feel the pulses beating in their tips. She knew that people were looking, but she felt brazen, unabashed, and happy. Mr. Masters' grip tightened; it said: "My master has a dozen hearts, and they are all beating—for you." To return that pressure was not an act of little Miss Blythe's will. She could not help herself. Her hand said to Masters: "With the heart—with the soul." Then she was frightened and ashamed, and had a rush of color to the face.

"Let go," she whispered.

But Masters leaned toward her, and though he was trembling with fear and awe and wonder, he found a certain courage and his voice was wonderfully gentle and tender, and he smiled and he whispered "Boo!"

. . . .

Only then did he set her hand free. For one reason, there was no need now of so slight a bondage; for another, Mr. Bob Blagdon was approaching them, a little pale but smiling. He held out his hand to little Miss Blythe, and she took it.

"Phyllis," he said, "I know your face so well that there is no need for me to ask, and for you—to deny." He smiled upon her gently, though it cost him an effort. "I wanted her for myself," he turned to Masters with charming frankness, "but even an old man's selfish desires are not proof against the eloquence of youth, and I find a certain happiness in saying from the bottom of my heart—bless you, my children." . . .

The two young people stood before him with bowed heads.

"I am going to send you the silver and glass from the table," he said, "for a wedding present, to remind you of my picnic." . . . He looked upward at the moon. "If I could," he said, "I would give you that."

Then the three stood in silence and looked upward at the moon.

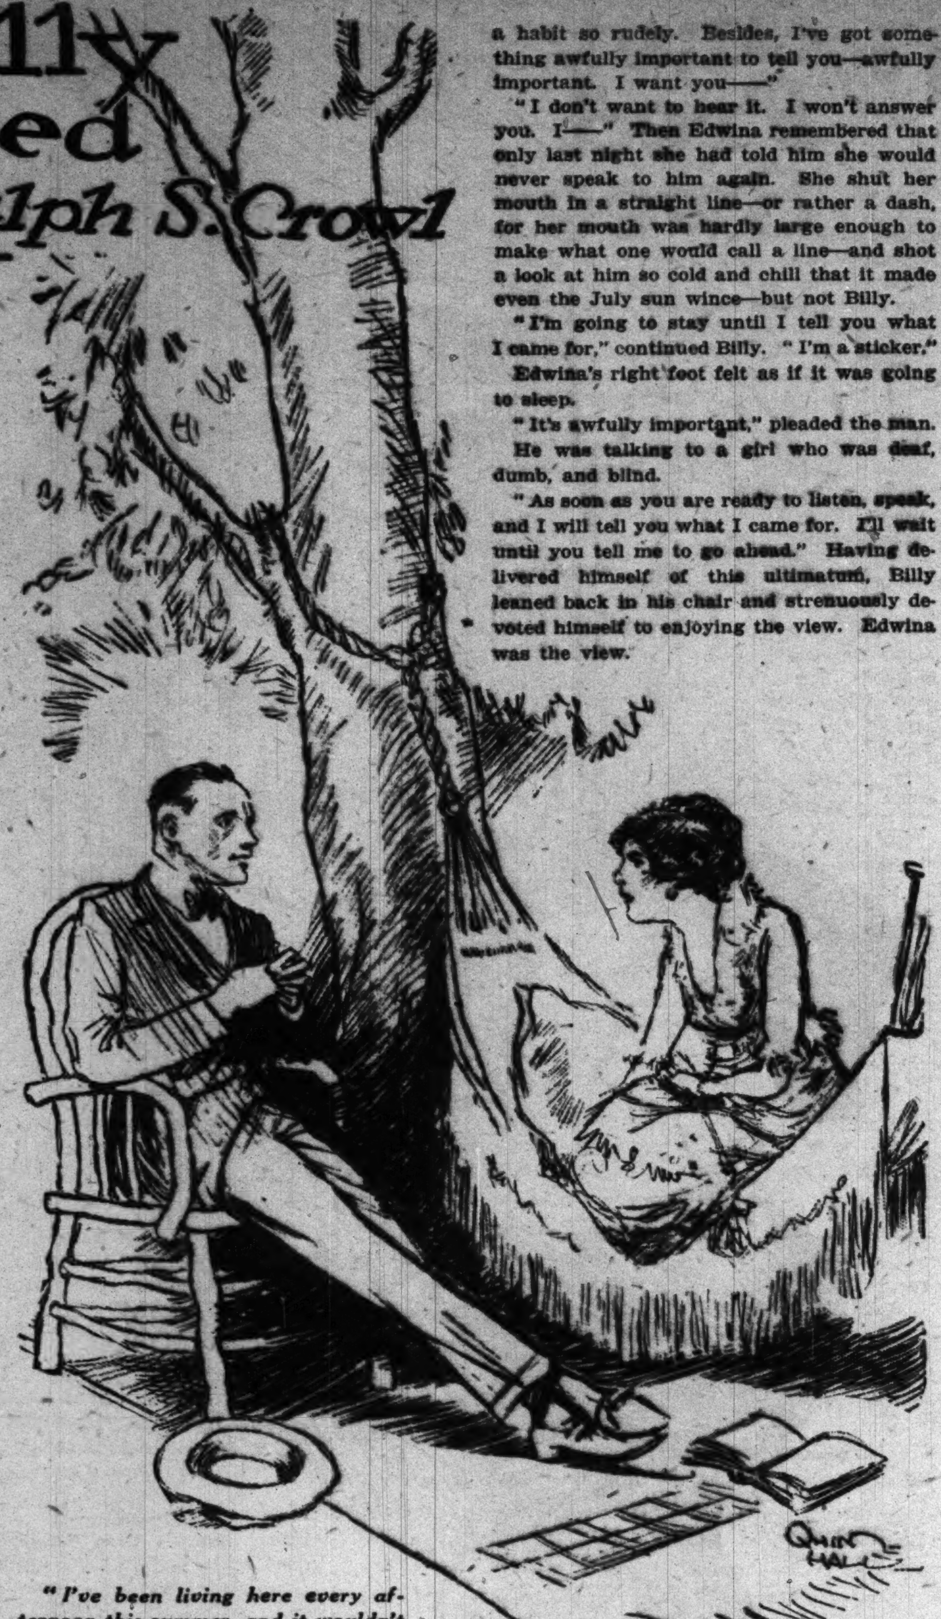
But Billy Persisted

by Ralph S. Crowl



"I've been living here every afternoon this summer, and it wouldn't seem right to leave so abruptly."

Going to Show What May Happen Even After a Girl Crushes a Boy Out of Her Heart.

THE rest of the family had taken the car and left for the city before Edwina Hale was up that morning, and except for the village painter, who was painting the floor of the front veranda, she was all alone in the summer cottage. A girl never feels so much alone as when she is the only person in a summer cottage. Outside, the lake glistened beneath the sun of a hot July morning; inside, the little French clock in the midst of powder boxes and cologne bottles on the dressing table ticked in a friendly way and Edwina hummed softly to herself. She rather enjoyed the novelty of being absolutely alone.

Clothed in a cool pink kimono and little pink sandals, she spent the morning rubbing tiny patches of cold cream into her face, combing her thousand and one curls—they were real curls that lay in saucy masses on her head, instead of on her dressing table—and in mending tiny holes she had danced into the heels of her silk stockings the night before. When she thought of the dance she sighed and smiled, for it made her think of Billy. Then, having been tricked into thinking of Billy, she frowned and stamped her foot—forgetting that she had on sandals and that sandals would not stamp—for she was never going to speak to Billy again. She had told him so to his face, and she meant to crush him out of her heart.

Suddenly the telephone rang and she rose and passed inside. She took down the receiver and held it over her ear fully a moment before she decided to answer, for she knew who was calling—and she had told him to his face that she would never speak to him again. Finally she spoke.

"Hello!" Her voice was sweet and rich, and men raved over it.

"Hello. Is this you, Edwina?" said the voice in the receiver. "I just wanted to see if you were in; I'll be right over."

"I told you last night you couldn't come."

"Well, that was last night," said the voice.

"Then I repeat it."

There was a pause, and she could hear the man at the other end of the wire nervously shifting his feet.

"But I want to see you," said the voice, being unable to think of anything more urgent or appropriate.

"I won't let you see me."

"Why?"

"Because."

"O shucks!" She was afraid the voice in the receiver was going to say something worse.

"What do you want to see me about?"

"I want to ask you to mar—I'll be right over," answered the voice.

"But I can't see you."

"I'll come anyway."

"You do and I'll have the painter put you off the premises."

The slap of the brush on the front porch stopped abruptly and the painter began to pay more strict attention.

"I've got to see you this afternoon," persisted the voice. "I'm coming, even if you set Tige on me. It's important. I want you to mar——"

"But I can't see you. Ellsworth Payne is coming at 5 o'clock to take me motoring. Besides, I don't intend to let you ever come again, so you don't need to call up tomorrow, either." She hung up the receiver with a bang. Out on the front porch the slap, slap of the painter's brush started again.

When Edwina once got mad her family was mad at herself for being sorry that she had not let Billy come, and she stamped her sandal viciously. She winced, and, madder than ever, kicked both of the deceiving sandals across the room.

"I like Ellsworth Payne fully as well as I do Billy Snelling," she told herself.

To emphasize her statement she walked out on the back porch and slammed the door. But this time she regretted her hasty action, for the door had a night lock and remained slammed. Besides, the hot sun was now flooding the porch.

How would she get into the house? She did not care to call the painter to go through the house and open the door for her, nor did she care to remain on the hot porch; instead, she slipped across the lawn a few steps to where the hammock hung between two maples. Probably the family would be back before she need go into prepare for her motor ride with Ellsworth Payne; anyway, she would not call the painter right away.

It was comfortable in the hammock, and as Edwina gazed out across the lake she began to dream again. She watched the tiny figure of a man sculling a becalmed sail boat toward the shore. She dreamed of Billy. She went to sleep.

Edwina was a pretty picture of the sleeping beauty—that is, if she had lain in a large four posted bed with halberdiers on guard, instead of curled up in a pink kimono in a hammock with her curls delightfully rumpled about her forehead and her shapely arm thrown over her head, as though to frame the beautiful face. She slept an hour or more and did not waken until she heard some one coming up the gravel walk from the beach. She started up. Stranded on the shore was Billy's canoe, and walking toward her was Billy himself.

"Well, here I am," he cried as soon as he saw her and smiled. Billy always smiled.

Edwina sat bolt upright in the hammock with amazing alacrity, drew her silk stockinged feet in like a flash of lightning, and hid them away under a wonderful maze of lingerie. Wave after wave of pink swept over her face.

"Gosh, but you're pretty," said honest Billy, and he stuck his hands in his pockets and gazed at her rapturously.

"I want you to go away," almost screamed Edwina, and she cuddled her feet even closer under her.

Billy didn't go.

"I told you not to come," continued the girl as she shook her hands in provocation. "Go away!"

"But I just came," replied the man as he drew up a lawn chair and sat down. "I've been living here every afternoon this summer, and it wouldn't seem right to leave so abruptly; it isn't wise to try and break a habit so rudely. Besides, I've got something awfully important to tell you—awfully important. I want you——"

"I don't want to hear it. I won't answer you. I——" Then Edwina remembered that only last night she had told him she would never speak to him again. She shut her mouth in a straight line—or rather a dash, for her mouth was hardly large enough to make what one would call a line—and shot a look at him so cold and chill that it made even the July sun wince—but not Billy.

"I'm going to stay until I tell you what I came for," continued Billy. "I'm a sticker."

Edwina's right foot felt as if it was going to sleep.

"It's awfully important," pleaded the man.

He was talking to a girl who was deaf, dumb, and blind.

"As soon as you are ready to listen, speak, and I will tell you what I came for. I'll wait until you tell me to go ahead." Having delivered himself of this ultimatum, Billy leaned back in his chair and strenuously devoted himself to enjoying the view. Edwina was the view.

There was a long pause.

"I love you," said Billy from the bottom of his heart.

Still deaf, dumb, and blind—and right foot asleep.

"I came over to tell you that I'm——"

"If you cared a snap for me, you wouldn't stay here when I don't want you to." She had kept still a long while for a woman.

"I've sat in this chair so long this summer that I claim squatter's rights over it," remarked the man. "I want to tell you that——"

"If I could, I would go in the house and leave you."

"Why are you afraid to go in the house? Is it full of tramps, or have you been sitting there so long, curled up like a statue of Budda, that you can't move?" remarked he.

"No! The back door is locked, and the floor of the front veranda has just been painted."

"Sir Raleigh will lay his coat on the paint, if you wish."

"Sir Raleigh should go home."

"Or, then, again, you might walk across the paint. Let's see; does paint have the same traitorous tendency as quicksand?"

"I can't," she wailed; "I haven't any shoes on." For a moment she forgot her anger and looked at Billy appealingly. If Billy had come to her rescue in her distress, he would have won his way back into her favor in a moment.

Billy's eyes swung slowly down like a pair of searchlights, and he stared at the edge of the kimono. Then he looked back at the distressed face, and, manlike, roared in laughter.

"Ho, ho, ho," laughed Billy.

That was the straw that broke the camel's back.

"Ho, ho, ho!"

"I'll never speak to you again!"—for the fifth time.

"Ho, ho, ho!"

"Never!" Her eyes were blazing, and their fire stopped Billy's laughter.

"Gee, but your eyes are pretty when they snap like that," he exclaimed admiringly, quite disregarding the fact that he was the cause of the snapping. "I love you."

"I will crawl in a window," exclaimed Edwina, and her right foot seconded the motion and peeped out from under the lingerie for a moment, but scurried to cover again when Billy saw it and started to laugh.

"Now, you have got to sit there and listen while I tell you what I came to say," said Billy.

"I won't."

"All right. I have to——"

"I didn't mean to leave them in the house. I think you're a brute." She almost meant it.

"Just my luck," laughed Billy. "It's the only thing that would make you stay and listen to me. I want you to——"

The purr of an automobile coming up the front drive interrupted him. They both listened as it stopped at the veranda.

"O, it's Ellsworth Payne," said Edwina in a fever of anxiety.

One could never have guessed from Billy's face that he had ever laughed in his life.

"Run and tell him I won't be ready for a few minutes," she commanded with a note of victory in her voice.

Now, Snelling would have held his hand in fire for Edwina, but he would not pass her over to another man, even at a progressive bridge party. All he did now was to stir uneasily.

"Hurry up, Bil—Mr. Snelling."

Billy stirred and scowled terribly, then said something like damn.

"Go tell him to wait, then walk through the house and unlock the back door; and I can slip in without being seen." She enjoyed the torture that her words brought out on the man's face. It was her turn now.

Billy got up and started for the front yard. Half way there he stopped and looked back with such a look of dumb appeal on his face that, had she not been looking carefully the other way, even Edwina would have relented. Just before he reached the corner of the house he paused again; and, thinking it over, he went no farther. Cautiously peeking around the corner of the house, he watched his rival for a moment, and then returned to the hammock.

"What do you mean?" gasped Edwina.

Inside the door bell rang.

"What are you going to do?" asked Edwina, and this time there was real anger in her voice.

"Why, I think I'll let him ring," answered Billy; and he grinned.

And he rang; and the more he rang the more Billy grinned. And the more Billy grinned the angrier grew Edwina.

Then, after a finale of spasmodic tattoos, the bell was silent. They heard the car's motor start; then the sound slowly died away as the car passed out along the drive to the road.

Billy laughed and looked at Edwina in triumph. Then he stopped laughing as though some one had gagged him; for Edwina—she stood only 4 feet 4 in her stocking feet—rose, and, with head in the air and a majestic stride, started for the front yard. As she walked Billy followed, with one arm outstretched in entreaty. He could not say a word until she had reached the steps of the veranda. "Look out for the paint," was the only thing that then came to his lips.

But Edwina marched up the steps and over the sticky paint as grandly as ever lady crossed a ballroom floor. She slammed the door behind her—pretty picture again—and snapped the lock.

Billy stood, puzzled, for a moment, a mixture of alarm, pain, and interrogation in his eyes. Then he rushed across the porch and began hammering on the door. "Let me in," he cried; "I have something I want to tell you."

All was quiet inside.

"I got the appointment at Washington, and have to leave at 8 o'clock tonight," called Billy. "I won't be back for a year, and I want you to marry me and go with me. We'll have to hurry."

He began kicking the door. Then he shook the door knob in a final appeal, and listened.

"I love you," he cried in a voice that could have been heard across the lake.

Then again he stopped and listened. What was that? Had he heard the lock turn? He pushed open the door, rushed in, and bumped into Edwina—or maybe she got in his way. Anyway, he found her in his arms.

"I leave at 8 o'clock," he cried. "Will you go with me? Will you mar——"

She freed one arm and clasped her hand over his mouth. "Billy, if you propose to me in my stocking feet, I'll never speak to you again."

AS MEN

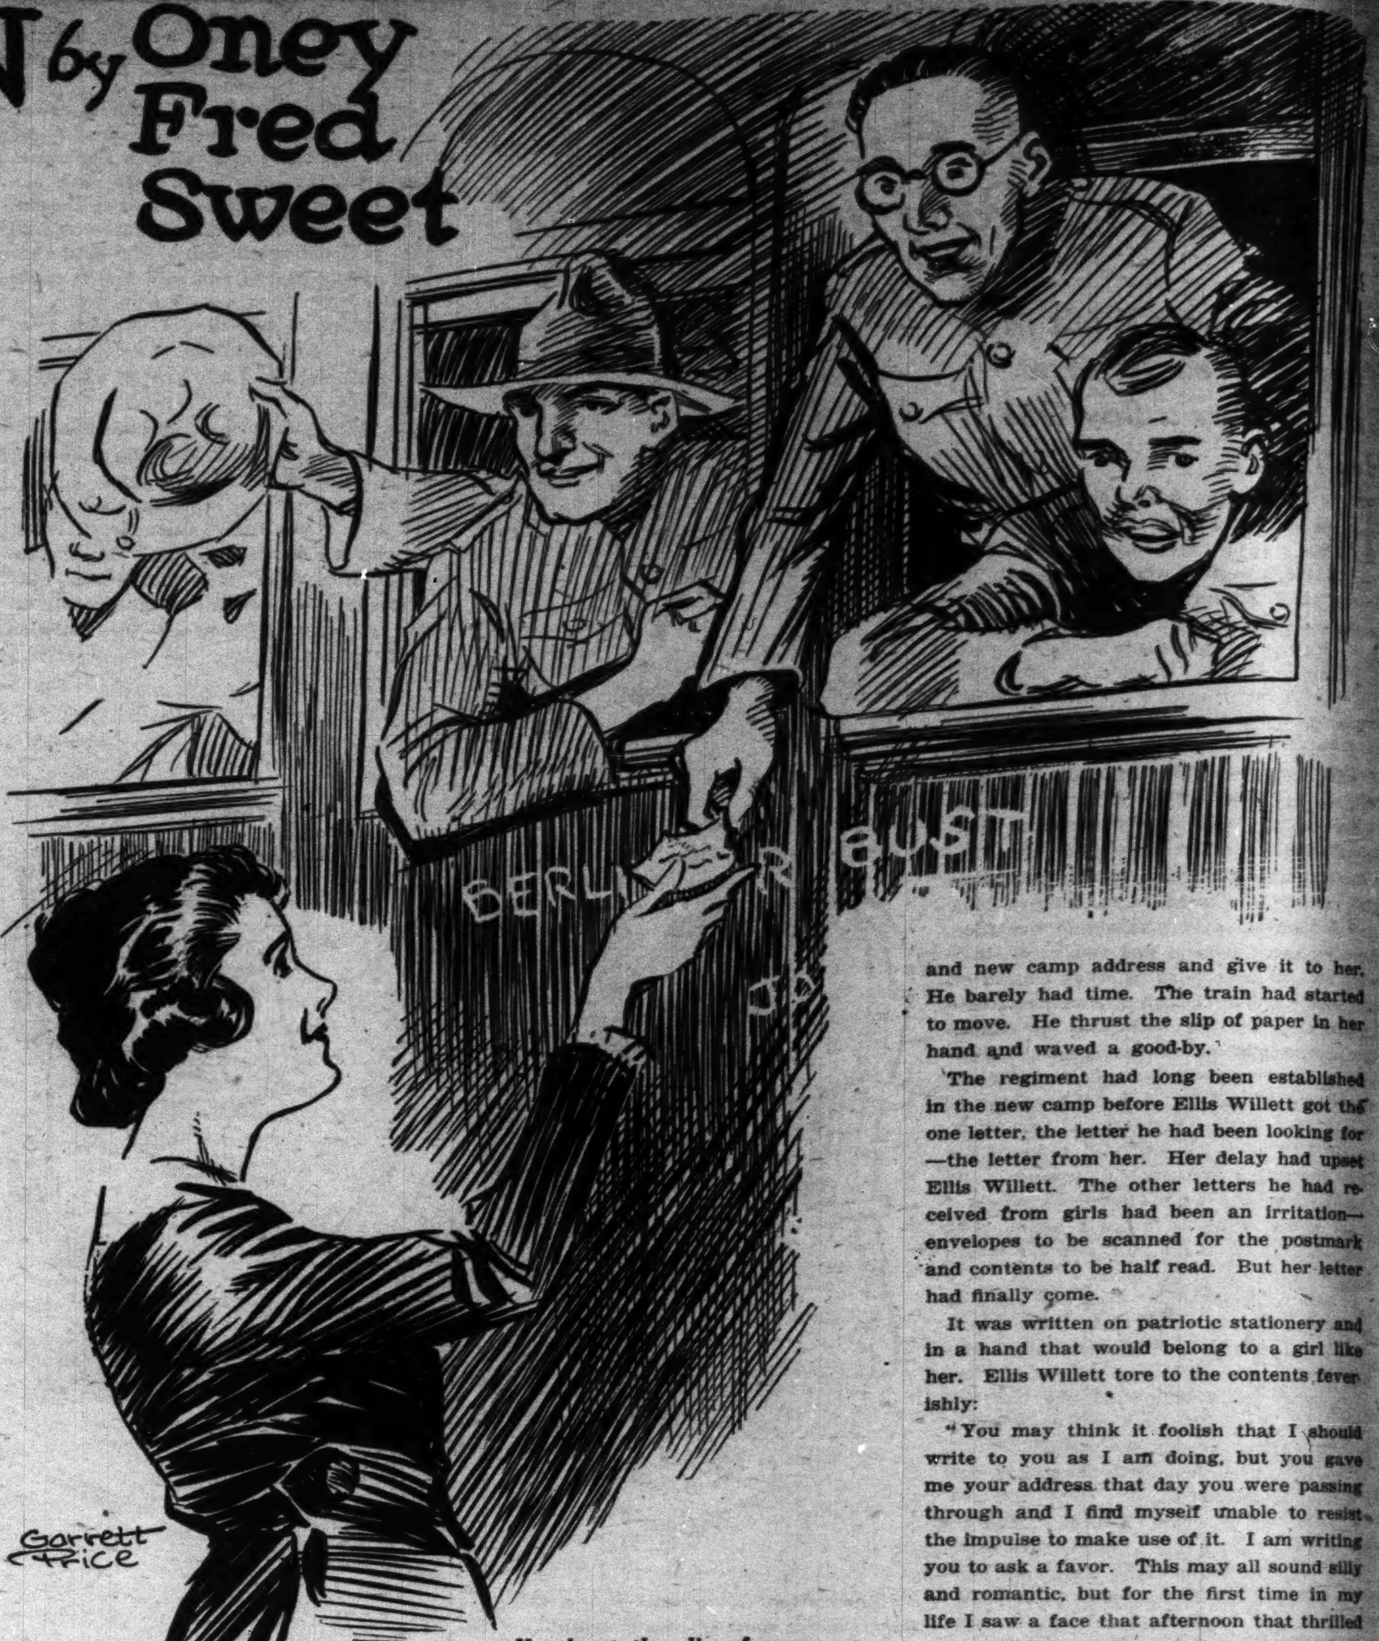
Willett Learned That the Only Thing a Man Brought Into the Service Was Himself



He thrust the slip of paper in her hand.

SPECTACLES, black rimmed, had not prevented Ellis Willett from getting into the army. He had worn glasses for six years, in fact ever since his fifteenth birthday. The flaw in his eyesight had been slight, but his parents had always seen to it that his opportunities in life should not be hampered.

The reflection on Ellis' glasses was such the morning he met Clyde Williamson, a brand new recruit in the new squad, that he seemed to be looking through and beyond him. All the squad members were strangers to each other. But partially fitted out with uniforms, bewildered in getting adjusted to the new manner of living, raw concerning the simplest tactics, they sized each other up and made effort to launch comradery. But from the start Ellis regarded Clyde with coolness.

So many of the national guardsmen, once they were fully uniformed, gave little hint of where they had stood in the life just left behind. It was only for the first few days you could be sure Ellis had known a home that had pampered him and that Williamson had come from no home at all.

Williamson's eyes were not spectacled; there was nothing to conceal the hunted, questioning, uncertain look they wore. No chubbiness had had a chance to develop about Williamson's cheeks. There was no curve of self-satisfaction and self-assurance upon his lips. Even in khaki he betrayed the fact, toward the first, that he had come in contact with a lot of life and that he had found it hard.

Ellis Willett resented having Williamson's cot placed next to his own. He waited for a chance to speak to the corporal about it. The two happened to be alone in the tent.

"The cots are according to squad formation in line," answered the corporal, reluctant to start a program of catering to whims. "I haven't any kick on Williamson. He hasn't tried to borrow anything of you, has he? He tries to do what he's told; that's all I ask."

"But you can tell he's practically been a bum," Ellis argued impatiently. "I don't know whether you knew it or not, but I used to drive my own car."

"If you're wise you'll get over feeling yourself so much better than he is," advised the corporal in a tone full of meaning. "You're both privates. You've been more fortunate in the past, perhaps than he has, but now you're both in the same boat. Williamson's been up against it, not through any fault of his own so far as we know, but he's going to make a good soldier. That's what counts now, Willett."

And yet Willett couldn't get over his attitude toward Williamson. It grated on him to have Williamson placed next to him in line, on the left, but the top sergeant had formed them according to size and on no other basis. The fellow jarred on him with his talk and his manners at mess. Williamson didn't seem to notice that he jarred. He seemed unable to take a hint from subtle remarks made. Willett's stares at him through his spectacles seemed to have no effect whatever.

It was the day that one of Willett's old chums of the life that he had left was visiting the camp. Williamson was out in the street in front of the tent playing handball at the time. He was hatless, his hair now cut according to regulations, brushed back in a crude attempt to imitate the current style.

"Fellows like that will creep into an organization," Willett explained apologetically to his chum. "Little education and no breeding. But you don't want to judge the whole company by him. Most of the men have left good jobs and have come from good homes. But this Williamson's been from pillar to post if you can depend on the few remarks he has dropped at times."

Williamson, well out of hearing, was observed at this juncture making a strenuous effort to reach first base. He reached it, but it was because interest in the game had suddenly waned. The mail man had arrived and there was a rush to the head of the street. Every one hurried to crowd around the top sergeant's tent—every one except Williamson. He knew it was no use. He decided to practice with the bat and ball by himself until the game should be resumed.

Ellis Willett returned to his squad tent with three letters and a box from home. He had expected them. Their regular arrival was a thing to be taken for granted.

"Didn't you get your mail, Williamson?" he called with a patronizing smile. The joke was for his visiting chum's benefit.

Williamson continued to bat the ball lightly and catch it. He made some sort of an answer to the fling of wit, but his voice was drowned by a yell that was sweeping over the camp. The long expected order had come suddenly, after all! The regiment was to leave at once to take charge of one of the national army cantonments!

Rope stakes were pulled, tents were wrapped, trenches filled. Cots were folded, streets policed, blanket rolls strapped. There was singing while the incinerator fires flamed high from refuse. An army is always wild to be on the move.

Toward evening of the following day the train bearing the second battalion pulled into a little town that was more than bent on demonstrating its patriotism. Ellis Willett, sitting opposite Clyde Williamson in the car, welcomed the opportunity for leaning his head out the window and engaging in repartee with the crowd at the station platform.

Word was passed along that the battalion would get off for fifteen minutes of quick stepping and Butt's manual exercises. "Fine," agreed Ellis Willett, adjusting his campaign hat by the aid of the car seat mirror, "Fine!"

It was a small town and Ellis Willett had but poor opinion of small towns, but when, the exercises over, it was learned there would be a half hour's delay in getting started again, Ellis decided he would stroll about Main street. And he would break away before Williamson had any chance to make a suggestion about going along with him.

The bugle blew. The minutes had flown. Ellis Willett was buckling on his belt when he saw her. She was standing on the plank sidewalk near which the guns had been stacked. In all his life Ellis had never seen just such a girl. Evidently, it was possible for beauty to blossom in small towns as well as elsewhere, but the girl was something besides beautiful; she was of a type he had always idealized. Waiting for "attention," Ellis tried to attract her attention. He succeeded. She returned his smile. Why hadn't he noticed her sooner?

That returned smile was the undoing of Ellis Willett. He had always had plenty of girls, but the sight of this girl had awakened something different. He was absent minded as he marched with the company to the train. His heart thumped fast against the window ledge as he leaned out of the car. She was coming along the platform. She was hunting along among the faces in the car windows. He would do the common thing, for once. He would scribble his name and new camp address and give it to her. He barely had time. The train had started to move. He thrust the slip of paper in her hand and waved a good-by.

The regiment had long been established in the new camp before Ellis Willett got the one letter, the letter he had been looking for—the letter from her. Her delay had upset Ellis Willett. The other letters he had received from girls had been an irritation—envelopes to be scanned for the postmark and contents to be half read. But her letter had finally come.

It was written on patriotic stationery and in a hand that would belong to a girl like her. Ellis Willett tore to the contents feverishly:

"You may think it foolish that I should write to you as I am doing, but you gave me your address that day you were passing through and I find myself unable to resist the impulse to make use of it. I am writing you to ask a favor. This may all sound silly and romantic, but for the first time in my life I saw a face that afternoon that thrilled me. And it was because he was standing next to you in line that I am turning to you. I must admit I was half hoping to see him again when I came along the station platform and saw you leaning out the window. I thought he was probably near you then as he had marched next to you in line, at the left. I know this is unusual, but these are unusual times, and I would like to correspond with him while he is in the service if he would care also. It——"

Ellis Willett's eyes left the letter and he looked out over the parade grounds. What could she have seen in Williamson? What had she seen in him?

Then this thought struck home. He and Williamson had both appeared before her simply on their merits as men. The uniforms were precisely alike and they told nothing of previous opportunities or previous handicaps. The only thing a man brought into the service was his bare self.

He found Williamson sitting on his bunk. "You got some mail this time," he remarked huskily. "It was addressed to me, but it's all yours."

Out of the corner of his eye Ellis watched Williamson scan the pages. He noticed that the expression on Williamson's face changed but little until he had finished. Then he saw his features fill with light as he appeared to be going over and over some portion of the contents.

"That's good stuff," Williamson remarked finally, holding up a sheet of the paper and pointing, not to the writing, but to the tiny printed lines beneath the flag up in one corner of the pages—"it's great."

Willett leaned over to look. He had missed the lines beneath the flag up in the corner of the patriotic stationery in his own hurried effort to get to the contents. But now the printed lines beneath the emblem stood out. They were in quotes:

"We must make the world safe for democracy."

WHO IS NUMBER ONE?

by Anna Katharine Green

SYNOPSIS

Aimée Villon, a beautiful young heiress, has come to live as the ward of Graham Hale, an inventor of submarines. Hugo Wald, Miss Villon's tutor, asks Hale to keep Miss Villon's securities in Hale's vault, an enormous and complicated depository, supposed to be impregnable. For eighteen years Hale has received on the same day each year a cryptic warning from "The Twisted Thread," an organization which has perpetrated a number of crimes which had utterly baffled the police. The day Miss Villon is installed in the house another warning comes. Tommy Hale, Graham Hale's son, in making his way to the vault in the dark, sees his father struggling with two masked men. He gives fight, but he and his father are worsted. There follows a number of exciting episodes in a chase after the criminals. The Hales and Aimée have traced the T. T. T. to a house, but when Aimée and Tommy are in it an explosion occurs, badly injuring Aimée and stunning Tommy. While Aimée is recovering she is attended by Wald. Wald is mysteriously murdered in Hale's home. Hale is lured to a meeting of the gang, but is rescued. The drawings and data on the submarine disappear again.

ELEVENTH EPISODE.

THE RACE.

TOMMY HALE awoke on the morning after his inexplicable loss of the papers his father had given into his care without, as he opened his eyes, any recollection of what had happened. All his thoughts were of Aimée Villon and her surrender to his wooing. And then, darkening every thought, came the memory of his loss. He had failed the first time that real confidence had been reposed in him—because of his carelessness, his neglect of his duty in his wooing of Aimée, the papers which were so important in his father's eyes were gone. What was worse, they had been stolen by The Twisted Thread, the sinister organization which was seeking to hound Graham Hale, Tommy's father, into madness.

His father's reception of the news did, to a certain extent, cheer Tommy up. He dressed quickly, and went out to the garden to renew his search. There he found Aimee, and, to his delight, she let him greet her with a kiss. But he grew serious again as he told her what had happened."

"But—that's impossible, Tommy!" she cried. "You were with me all the time—one of us must have seen any one who could have taken them!"

"There's just one thing I've thought of. Suppose some one had been hidden in the rose bush? He might have shoved his hand out, if he knew I had the papers, and taken them from my pocket. You see, I—well, I wasn't thinking of anything but you last night, dear."

"Don't!" she said, sharply. "If you knew how I blame myself for letting you forget your duty, Tommy!"

"You mustn't do that," he said. "It's up to me and to no one else. And I've told dad all about it. Let's look again, shall we?"

"I think they must be somewhere in your room," she said, a little later. "I simply can't believe that they've really been taken!"

"I'll look again, of course," he said. "But I've searched the room pretty carefully."

"I'll help you to look," she said. "Two can do better than one!"

They went to Tommy's room. But there was no sign of the precious papers until Aimée exclaimed, suddenly:

"There's something here—under my foot!" she cried. She bent down, turned back a rug—and showed the packet, exactly as Tommy had last seen it, lying where the rug had hidden it. He pounced upon it with a cry of joy.

"It's all right!" he cried. "Aimée, you're my good angel!"

"You'd have found it yourself, of course," she said, disclaiming his praise, but flushing with pleasure just the same. "It was just luck that I happened to be the one to find it for you. But I'm glad I did, Tommy."

They went in together to break the good news to Mr. Hale and found that he had a visitor, early though it still was—Thornton Rayne, his oldest friend.

"I'm glad to see your father looking so much better," said Rayne to Tommy. "I'll admit I put in a bad night. But he's improving fast, I should say."

"I think so, too," said Tommy. "Did you heart of our scare about these papers?"

"That's not the only thing that's happened, either," said Graham Hale. "Aimee, there, saved me from a serious shock, if O'Connor's right about the danger of a sudden noise."

"How was that?" asked Rayne.

And so he heard of the mysterious man who had called Graham Hale's private number and fired a pistol point blank into the transmitter—with the idea that the sudden roar in his ear would produce serious if not fatal results.

"Good God!" said Rayne. "What a diabolical scheme!"

"It's one of the most alarming things that The Twisted Thread has attempted," said Tommy. "It shows that we are being spied upon by some one in the house. You see, no outsider could have known of my father's condition, of Dr. O'Connor's warning concerning noise, and the private telephone number. Still we're going to get that chap!"

"How?"

"He was shadowed—that is how we know about the pistol shot. And I ordered the detective who reported to stay on his trail. I expect a report at any moment. You see, it was a murderous attempt! If Aimée hadn't had the quick idea of tearing down the wires when she heard the bell ring up here! Well, anything might have happened!"

"So that was how the scheme was foiled! She's a young lady of brains, evidently!"

Aimée flushed and looked nervous under his steady gaze.

"I'm going to get these papers out of the way," said Tommy. "I've ordered our private car to be attached to the afternoon train for Reddington, and I'll take them over there. If we can divide these people up we'll have more chance to beat them."

"I think I'll go with you, Tommy," said Aimée. "It's not such a very long trip, is it? And there are some friends of my father's in Reddington who have been anxious for me to look them up."

"Splendid!" said Tommy. "I hate traveling alone."

Thornton Rayne did not linger. He explained that he had only dropped in for reassurance concerning Mr. Hale's condition. Aimée went off to prepare for her journey, and Tommy was busy the rest of the morning and early afternoon in making certain notes for his father to be sent to Mr. Hale's office, since Dr. O'Connor had sternly forbidden him even to think of getting back into harness for several weeks.

Graham Hale's private car represented the last word in the luxury of railway travel. It was attached to the rear of the through train that left late in the afternoon, and would be cut off at Reddington—at the end of a journey of something like four hours. It was completely equipped; its occupants were wholly independent of dining cars and, indeed, of any part of the regular equipment of the train.

"This is solid comfort!" said Tommy, as they rolled out of the terminal. "Isn't it delightful to think that we're able to sit here, without giving a thought to The Twisted Thread or any of its mischief? They can't get at us here!"

"Not without a good deal of trouble," said Aimée, with a laugh. "Heavens, but this car is comfortable, Tommy!"

"It's a pretty good car," said Tommy. "Dad's not a very good sleeper, and he had this car designed to reduce motion and noise to the absolute minimum. I don't believe it's possible to be more comfortable on a train than you are in this car."

They went out to the observation platform for a little while, but soon returned to the lounging room. It was rather cold outside, and the scenery, said Tommy, who knew the road well, was not good enough to make it worth while to brave the chill in the air.

So half an hour passed pleasantly. Sam Jackson was called in, and beamed all over his good natured black face as Aimée, who evidently pleased him mightily, pondered, in all seriousness, the question of what she wanted to eat for dinner.

"Yas'm!" he said at last. "Yo' sho' kin have all dem things yo' done ordered! I'm a gwine right up in front to the diner now and pick up a few things I'se out of!"

So Tommy and Aimée were left alone in the car for a few minutes. Or so they believed. But no sooner had Sam gone than the curtains stirred. Tommy, leaning forward, entirely at his ease and unsuspicious, was struck down as he rose from his chair to get a book he had been speaking of. Aimée, seeing three masked figures emerge from the car entrance as Tommy went down, shrieked and fainted. She retained consciousness just long enough to see one of the men search Tommy's pockets and seize upon the all important papers. And so she knew that Tommy's boast of security from The Twisted Thread had been a vain and empty one.

Aimée came to her senses in a few minutes, Tommy lay still, bleeding from a scalp wound. She cried out at the sight of the blood, and threw her arms about him. He stirred and moaned. Swiftly she found water and bathed his forehead; then staunched the flow of blood. She saw that the wound was not a serious one. Then, frantically, she pressed the bell that should have summoned Sam Jackson. But—there was no answer. And a queer slowing down of the train disturbed her. Suddenly she guessed the truth, and ran to the platform. She saw the train drawing away—and on its rear platform one of the thugs who had robbed Tommy waving the papers at her derisively.

She saw something more, too—the sudden appearance of the train conductor on the platform, and the swift struggle that ensued as he reached for his signal cord. And then she hid her eyes in sudden horror, for the conductor, fighting as well as he could, single handed, was overpowered and ruthlessly hurled from the train. She saw his body hurtling down the steep embankment, and as the private car, moving slowly but still at a fair rate, rolled past the spot, she saw the figure of the conductor lying, ominously huddled up, in the ditch.

For a moment she was on the verge of fainting again. But then she realized that something must be done. She went to the platform and tried to set the brakes. Gradually the car responded to her effort and at last, by a cross, it stopped completely. Luck was with her here. A motor car was approaching, and to its passengers she told her story.

"The infernal villains!" cried the man who had been driving. "Miss Villon—my hat's off to you! I happen to be a vice president of this road—my name's Carter. Graham Hale's a friend of mine, and I've known Tommy since he wore knee pants. Bill, get aboard there and look after young Hale. Miss Villon, if you're game to take a long chance, we may be able to do something about this business yet!"

"I'll take any chance to get those papers back!" cried Aimée.

"Then watch!" said Carter.

He went to work with incredible speed, stripping the tires from his car. When he had done he called his friend, and together they got the car on the railway tracks—the bare rims gripping them, as did regular car or engine wheels.

"Now—we'll make better time than any train—and do it safely!" cried Carter. "In with you, Miss Villon; we'll catch that train if it's humanly possible to do it!"

Never had Aimée dreamed of such a flight as now began. On the road no automobile could have made such speed as Carter coaxed from his machine. It fairly flew along—did so, at certain moments, literally, when all four wheels left the tracks, only to find them again a moment later.

The limited had a long start and they were pursuing it on a stretch of road wherein no stops were scheduled. But Carter knew the train schedule, and he was utterly confident as they sped along.

"There's a tow rope behind you," Miss Villon," he said. "Better get it ready in case we need it."

She obeyed, but it was beyond her to guess what purpose he expected it to serve.

"We'll catch the train," said Carter. "But what'll we do with it when we have caught it? That's where the rope comes in—or will come in, I think. You see, if we can establish some sort of connection with the train, tie up to it, we'll be all right, no matter how fast we're both going. My idea is to get pretty close—then lassoo the train! That's not as wild as it sounds, either—I mean just to throw a loop of rope over one of the stanchions on the rear platform. Then I'll shut off my engine and the train will be pulling us along—see? We can get as close as we like by shortening the rope—and I can climb over the hood and get aboard."

"Yes, I see," said Aimée. "That's a splendid idea, Mr. Carter."

But one thing Aimée did not see was Aimée Villon letting any man like Mr. Carter do anything which she considered it her duty to do herself. However, she reserved thought and talk of that—the first thing to be done was to overhaul the train that was still flying ahead of them.

They were catching up—there was no doubt of that. As they rounded curves now they could see the train still far ahead but growing nearer each time they caught a glimpse of it.

Carter swore under his breath.

"Even if they got old Hawkins, the conductor," he said, "there ought to be some one on that train with gumption enough to handle that gang! I can't understand that!"

Aimée was too thrilled by the chase to answer him. The dizzy speed did not frighten her; she had been half afraid at first that it would. The slightest irregularity of the track—a stone, an obstruction of any sort—and nothing could save them from instant death. But the train was clearing the track before them—the chances favored them, she felt sure. And not for an instant did she think of quitting—of appealing to Carter, who was risking as much as she in an affair that was not his own, to slow down.

At last the train was in plain sight before them on a straightway stretch of track—and ever it loomed up closer in the moonlight that made everything as clear as it could have been by day. Foot by foot, yard by yard, the motor car gained on its huge quarry. Aimée looped up the rope, and stood up, despite the giddy swaying of the car, as she prepared to hurl it. She knew that she must make her cast the first time—

"Keep your hands up or I'll shoot," she said.

At last she let fly, and she and Carter both exclaimed in triumph as it dropped true and straight about the stanchion. At once Carter shut off his engine, and the car was drawn along by the train. Now came the delicate and difficult task of drawing in the rope so that the car would come close to the rear platform of the train. Carter, both hands free now since his engine was stopped and he had no need to steer, helped in that. Then he prepared to climb over the dashboard.

But Aimée was far too quick for him. Before he guessed what she meant to do he saw her over the hood reaching up to the car platform.

"Come back!" he cried. "That's my job!"

"No—I know the men—and this is my quarrel, not yours!" she called. "Really, it's better for me to go! I have a gun and I know just what I mean to do. Wait there and be ready to help me when I come back—you'll be much more useful, so——"

He had no chance but to let her have her way. And so Aimée slipped down from the platform into the car. She crouched in the corridor, peering into the car. The berths had all been made up. So she looked down the aisle of the sleeping car, with its waving curtains, and saw an extraordinary sight. The door of the drawing room was open. In it were the three men who had robbed Tommy. And, even as she saw one of them holding up the papers, which he had taken frim his coat, three other men rushed in from the other end of the car, covered the men in the drawing room with their guns, and took the papers from the first robbers!

Aimée acted even more quickly than she thought, she always believed, afterward. She did not understand what was going on, but she saw her chance. She flew silently down the aisle. As the man who now had the papers turned he faced Aimée's revolver. In his surprise he dropped his own. She snatched the papers from his nerveless hand.

"Keep your hands up or I'll shoot!" she said. And she began to back down the aisle.

The utter surprise caused by her astonishing appearance helped her. Moreover, there was a deadly menace in the gun she carried—a big 44. She backed away until she reached the corridor. Then there was a rush, and she fired a shot at random as she reached the back platform. A cry of pain told her it had gone home. Carter was ready and waiting; he caught her as she dropped over the platform, cut the rope, and supported her as the train sped rapidly away. For a little while, before he could apply the brakes, the car continued to coast along, but the train was moving so swiftly that there was no chance for the thugs to leap off and come to attack them. And the few shots they fired flew wild.

"Wonderful!" said Carter, when Aimée had explained what she had done. "Now we'll get the car turned around and go back for young Hale. Thanks to you we'll have good news for him."

But Tommy had already been taken home; Carter's friend, anxious to get him into a physician's hands, had seen to that. On his lapel they had found again the sign of The Twisted Thread. But Tommy was past being frightened now by that grim symbol. His one concern was for Aimée—even the loss of the papers seemed to him to be insignificant and unimportant beside his mystification and his anxiety about her and her disappearance.

THE TEENIE WEENIES

RESCUE A BONE.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

"CRACKEY, but it's cold!" said the Cowboy as he pulled off his mittens and held his hands over the fire in the Teenie Weenie sitting room grate.

"Well, give me a little room," said the Old Soldier, "and I'll throw on a log."

Taking up a pin, which served the little people as a poker, the old man turned over the burning sticks and then threw on a large log cut from the end of an old clothes pin.

"Say, I saw the funniest thing," remarked the Cowboy as he pulled up a chair before the blazing log. "There's a pup over there in the yard back on the next street and he's trying to dig up the frozen ground. I stood and watched him for a long time and he kept diggin' and diggin' all the while."

"Let's go over and see what he's doin'?" suggested the curious Dunce.

The Dunce's suggestion was met with great approval by some of the Teenie Weenies, for, like most small people, they were curious, and bundling up good and warm they set out to see the pup. The little folks tramped off through the snow and presently they saw the pup's tail over the top of a small hill. Climbing the hill they stopped beneath a bush and watched the dog digging frantically at the frozen ground.

"By the marrow of the great soup bone!" exclaimed the pup as he stopped to rest, "this is what I call tough!"

"My friend," shouted the General, stepping toward the pup, "you seem to be in trouble."

"Trouble?" growled the dog. "I'm the unluckiest pup in pupdom. You see, it's this way," and the big fellow sat down while the Teenie Weenies gathered about him. "I found a nice bone the other day with a lot of meat on it, and I want to tell you that it's not often you find them like that these days. Well, it happened to be a meatless day when I found it, so bein' a patriotic pusson, I went out and buried it right here in the ground."

"And the ground froze up and you couldn't get it out?" cried the Dunce.

"You said it; you said it, friend. That's exactly the pre-pre-predic-predic-"

"Predicament," said the Lady of Fashion.

"Thank you, mam," cried the pup. "You see, those long words are pretty hard for me to chew off."

"I think we can help you, my friend," said the General. "We'll build a fire on the ground, over the spot where the bone is buried, and thaw it out so you can dig up your bone without a bit of trouble."

The Teenie Weenies gathered up many sticks and in a short time they had a big fire burning on the frozen ground. After the fire had burned for some time the General ordered the coals cleared away and when the ground had cooled a little the pup dug up his bone.

"It's mighty nice of you people to help me," said the pup, "and the next nice bone I get I'm going to bring it over to your house."

"We thank you for your kind offer," said the General, "but er-er, you see, we never eat meat."

"Don't eat meat!" exclaimed the dog. "Well, I never heard anything like that before," and picking up his bone he hurried away shaking his head in a most sympathetic way.

PART 6

Midwinter Modes from Paris

...Edited by Corinne Lowe...

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

PARIS—[Special Correspondence.]—There's only one way I find the French couturieres a relief from the American establishments. They don't attempt to throw over their business the sticky glamour of art. When you go into the salon of a dressmaker over here, you don't feel as if you were entering a chapel or a public library and must instantly lower your vulgar tones. The divine hush is absent—there is no "atmosphere." The moment that you come in you know at once that you are in a place of business and a piece of sharp business at that. Instead of speaking in modulated elegance to suit their middle aged customers, the vendeuses—they're the saleswomen, you know—scream at each other like angry sparrows. Just now they're screaming as fast as their tongues can clack. Why? Because they are very, very busy.

In spite of the war I don't believe, indeed, that the salons of the couturieres were ever more full of customers. To be sure, the vendeuses tell you that they buy only simple things. Yet, how those same simple things do cost! Wool goes higher in price each week and for that reason, I suppose, it constantly increases in popularity—especially for one piece gowns. Wool jersey, which is just ruinously dear, is especially in demand.

Yes, the materials are simple—very! But they are all of the heavy rich variety—heavy satins and brocades, duvetyn and velours. At Premet's the other day I saw a simple evening gown made of gorgeous blue brocade satin with the big rose design of the satin pinched out in tiny silver beads. As all that simple effect has to be done by hand, you can imagine the price.

1. Handsome big Mr. Seal and little fluffy gray Miss Russian Rabbit decided to give a party and this coat is the result. The squirrel is cut and sewed in squares; the seal is made into a sort of yoke attached to the foundation and running down in the back to a square shaped piece to which the other fur is gathered ever so slightly. With this goes a Persian swirl of black satin and gold cloth.

2. Here is one of those short sleeved frocks of which Paris is so fond. Of faded rose color, trimmed with marten bands and embroidered in green and gold, this Doeuillet model is accompanied by a hat of ostrich fringe and brown velvet from Suzanne Talbot.

3. Perhaps you have panelysis. Even so, this charming afternoon frock of Doeuillet persuades you that the familiar form is original. Black satin panels both back and front are edged with seal and divided by a full section of black lace over black chiffon. The tiny girdle of rose and green and gold embroidery widens at the back and this same note of color is repeated in another band of embroidery rising from under the arms and curving upward over the front panel. The wee collar is of gold. The hat from Lanvin adds to a crown of wrinkled turquoise blue velvet a wide black velvet brim veiled in black net.

4. It's a Premet, girls! You know it from the narrowness of the skirt and from that neck arrangement which may be either hitched up on its big jet button or fall down to this slacker lapel lined with white satin. The frock itself is black satin. The sash of silk jersey in baby blue tint has a stiff bow pointing towards the back and a fringe of heavy blue silk cords. The overskirt is trimmed with monkey fur. A hat of black panne embroidered with silver braid and fringed with ostrich is the climax.

By the way, I'd like to ask a question—where did America find the bustle she's exploiting? Certainly not in Paris. Jenny did have a few strange puffs on the hip or over the tummy, but no regular bustles like you have 'em!

After straying about from the barrel effect of Lanvin and the billowing folds of Worth and Beer and others, the silhouette seems to have settled down pretty generally to the old straight lines. Even so, skirts still have a few little moody ways. At Premet's they still stick to narrow ones hardly a yard or a yard and a half wide round the bottom. Just run across the Place to Doueillet, however, and you find them free and full as of old.

As to girdles, Premet gives you the idea that to be smart a belt must be almost invisible. So much does he carry this doctrine to excess that often his belts are nothing but mere-smear ribbons tied round the waist. When I saw the first one of these models with the homeopathic belts, I thought that it must have been to the show rooms unfinished. When, however, I found these half inch ribbons holding in frocks of heavy serge, velvet, and satin I came to the conclusion that here was "a feature."

Up the street, however, Worth makes la ceinture not a mere suburb of the frock but a central, right in the city station. Often indeed his girdles start at the neck and swathe the figure almost to the feet. So it goes. Each great artiste has his own interpretation of the prevailing mode and the result is infinite variety. To illustrate this fitfulness of Paris fashions, Premet and Doeuillet show a number of short sleeves on afternoon frocks, most of the others wrap the knuckles with the sleeves, and Lanvin puts almost as much material in a sleeve as Premet in a skirt!

The fact of it is that if I were to meet a friend of mine with one of Premet's saunter one piece dresses on I'd say, "Dear child, come in out of the cold and get dressed." They give so much the air of one's having stepped quickly out of bed and snatched a kimono which one holds nonchalantly and a little crookedly about one's figure. There is simply no shape to them.

Premet has a new neck effect that seems to please him immensely and which is illustrated in the gown at the right. When it is buttoned up it gives the effect of a square necked, quite severe blouse with one, two, or three—as the case may be—large buttons on the right side as a decoration. But where one wants to be—well, sort of careless perhaps—one unfastens the buttons and behold! The piece across the front falls down—naturally—in a three cornered lapel lined with a contrasting color. Apparently, indeed, Premet's ideals are those of old Herrick when he sang "A sweet disorder in the dress" and so forth. Here the sweet disorder is anticipated by a plain tight fold of chiffon drawn tightly across the chest, so that when the lapel falls down this chiffon banding is what you see.

If the skirts are narrow, the coats—especially the long top coats—still are fairly voluminous. Here, Premet, true apostle of the clothespin figure that he is, scores heavily. In the grand contest, "Who can think up the narrowest coats," he walks off with the prize. At the same time his fur coats all have fullness let in at the sides or at the back—not one hangs straight.

Strange sophistries of the feminine mind, everlasting equilibrium of the fashion waters! Paris is not wearing bright colors or evening clothes. What she is wearing are furs that cost triple the money. I keep wondering whether America is following in her wake.

An intruder among the fur garments is a new coat of "Peau" got out by the Callot Soeurs. This leather is natural color and is stamped and burned in a graceful all over design, after which it is trimmed with narrow black braid. Really original and warm and soft! Incidentally, its odor is not that of Araby the blest.

Hats remain almost completely "sans garniture." They depend upon shape for style and in this dependence we find some extraordinary millinery convulsions. The high crown still lingers, but it is not so large as formerly, and the fact of the matter is that the flat hat is growing in favor.

In the matter of accessories Paris has gone mad over the bead bag. You can buy these trifles at any price from 5 francs up to as high as the pocketbook can jump—all shapes, all sizes, some solid beading, some only with a design in either beads or colored wools on a silk background. They are most charming and every one of them, from the most shyly priced on upward, is made by hand. Grandmother's cachemire shawl has also been called out and not only does it lend its quaint charm to pocketbooks and bags—it is even made up into lovely little folding fans with most beautiful of old shell and amber sticks.

"Buy Yourself a Powder Puff and Use It," advises $8,000 a year business woman

WHEN asked to what one thing she may best ascribe her success a business woman who for the last five years has earned over $8,000 a year replies: "My Powder Puff." And she is serious about it! For two years this woman's business operations were conducted in La Salle street, Chicago, so that the specks and streaks of Chicago soot had to be reckoned with.

In the current issue of the American magazine this successful business woman tells her story. She is Mrs. Bertha A. Rich, and when you are told that she perfected a plan for increasing savings accounts in banks that has been put into operation by many large banks as well as made of herself a topnotcher in the advertising business, you will more readily believe what she has to say on the importance of the powder puff.

"Looking back upon the year of my gradual development I have searched diligently for the underlying reasons for that success. Foremost among them I list clothes, symbolized by the powder puff," says Mrs. Rich. "The psychological effect of clothes, personal appearance, on a business woman's career is usually underestimated. My personal experience has proven to me that it can scarcely be overestimated. Men do not trust their business to a person who does not look as though she were successful in managing her own affairs.

Of her earlier days in the business when her income was far from her present one Mrs. Rich says:

"I dressed always in blue in those days, not too dark a blue—a nice, cheerful, happy looking blue. My suit was tailored, severely plain, because the severe styles suit me, and relieved with touch of white or some contrasting color. My hat was a dark blue sailor with a lighter blue facing to bring out the blue in my eyes, and my shirtwaist was as fresh and crisp as nightly washings and ironings could make it. My shoes and gloves were always neat and well fitting and I always wore a becoming veil, which kept my hair well in order and allowed the pink of my cheeks to show through.

"I am not a pretty woman, but I know so well how to make the best of my good points and the least of my bad ones that I often hear myself referred to as a beautiful woman. The real truth is that I am so well groomed and so neat and trim from head to foot that it pleases the eye to look at me, and a woman who pleases the eye may well be termed beautiful.

"I made it an invariable rule, from my first day as a solicitor, to open my hand bag before entering an office, fish up my bit of chamois and go carefully over my face, removing all stray specks of dust and soot which might have accumulated since my last call. Stray locks were tucked up, the cheeks were pinched a bit, and I was ready to beard the lion in his den. I always carried my head high and never allowed my eyes to waver. I believed in my business. I was proud of it. I felt myself to be the equal, mentally, morally and physically of the man on whom I was calling, and when I mutely expressed my belief in good grooming, good dressing and well chosen language—everything else being equal—he could not get away from me."

Asked by the manager of the concern one day to see just what the trouble was with a girl who had splendid ideas in a business direction but none as to her personal appearance, Mrs. Rich took her in tow and the treatment of this girl explains fully her ideas regarding the dress and deportment of a business woman.

"We will start in with the morning," she said. "If you have been accustomed to rising at 7, begin at once to rise at 6:30. You will need the extra half hour. You have slept with your windows open, of course, so you slip into a loose kimono and spend ten minutes before the open window, taking breathing exercises—which I will show you, together with a couple of others to induce brisk circulation. Then take your bath, a little colder each morning until you can take it as it comes from the faucet.

"Have all your clothes from the skin out as well fitting and of as good quality as you can afford. Economize on ribbons and lace, if you must, but never upon quality of material and fit. There is a great inward satisfaction in a well fitting undergarment which writes itself in lines of content and wellbeing upon the face. Put on each garment carefully, fastening it securely. Have everything fresh and clean. If you cannot afford to have your clothes laundered, wash them yourself at night, but make it an infallible rule never to wear a soiled garment: the knowledge that one is not clean throughout clouds the mind.

"Throw away those shoes you are wearing. Gray suede shoes were not intended to withstand the dust and dirt of Chicago streets. Get a neat pair of black walking shoes and keep them well cleaned. Get some dark gloves with white stitching. Wear a fresh white shirtwaist with no ruffles to get soiled or crumpled looking. Wash it every night if need be.

"You are wearing out that second best suit of yours with the mistaken idea that you must save your best suit for Sunday or evenings. Reverse that. The time for a business woman to wear her best clothes is when she goes to her business—six days in the week. But see that that best is a suitable best. Study your style and choose what is most becoming to you—inconspicuously becoming. Don't try to look like a fashion plate. Try to look like a wholesome, healthy, clean bodied, clean minded business woman and express it in your clothes.

"Get yourself a dashing little hat over which you can wear a veil. Wash your hair every week and keep it well brushed and shining under that veil. Buy some good cold cream, and never go to bed a night in your life without cleaning your face thoroughly with it. A clear, fresh complexion and a bright eye will hold the attention of any man long enough for you to switch it to advertising.

"Now, last, but by no means least, buy yourself a powder puff or a piece of soft chamois and use it always before you enter an office. It is just as important as saying your prayers. I do not mean that you are to cover yourself with powder until you look as though you had been dipped in a flour barrel; all that is necessary is to have enough powder in the chamois to take off the shine induced by perspiration and honest toil and replace it with its natural velvety softness, which is much more pleasing to look at."

Answers to Inquiries.

MRS. W. L.: MANY THANKS. There is no question that any one really wanting to reduce enough to be willing to adhere to the diet and the exercise in this treatment I recommend will succeed in shedding pounds and years at the same time. Send me a stamped, addressed envelope and if you will follow the instructions therein I know you will be writing to me before long and telling me you have lost as many pounds as your friend did by the same treatment.

FRED: TOO MANY CIGARETS are bound to cause your weight to go down. Twenty pounds underweight is too much for a growing boy. I would advise you to substitute milk shakes for cigarets, unless you are willing to take the chance of a more serious result from oversmoking.

DICKIE: OF COURSE SKATING gets your face chapped. Write in to me and I'll give you something for it. A stamped, addressed envelope will bring you my instructions at once.

H. T. H.: A GOOD COLD CREAM IS one of the prime essentials of any toilet table, and if I had to choose one of all the toilet preparations that are in use, forswearing all others, I would cling to my cold cream jar. For even powder would be of little comfort without the smoothness and cleanliness that the use of cold cream gives. It is only recently that people have begun fully to realize its many uses. The following formula is a good one: Two ounces of oil of sweet almonds, one-half ounce of spermaceti, one-half ounce of white wax, one-half ounce of rose water, twenty grains of powdered borax, and four drops of oil of rose. Melt the spermaceti and white wax together, at a moderate heat, add the oil of sweet almonds, stirring in thoroughly. Dissolve borax in the rose water and add to the mixture. Add oil of rose. Beat thoroughly.

LOUISE: No, young lady, rouge is all out of place on the cheeks or lips of a 16 year old! Wait until you get a little older—quite a little older—before you start in on any cosmetics. The world is full of fresh air and outdoor life for you. Help yourself! A rouged young miss of 16 is to my mind the most pathetic sight in the world. Now, will you use it?

GIRLS! BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR WITH "DANDERINE"

Get a Small Bottle! Freshen Your Scalp! Stop Falling Hair! Remove Dandruff! Grow Lots of Wavy, Glossy, Beautiful Hair—You Can!

"DANDERINE" GROWS HAIR

Besides doubling the beauty of your hair at once, you will shortly find new hair, fine and downy at first, but really new hair growing all over the scalp. Costs little.

Dorothy not only liked her tea and coffee to have the appearance of being "real and truly" but she also liked to taste the flavor of each. One afternoon her mother took her to a friend's home, where tea was served at 5 o'clock. The hostess gave Dorothy what she usually gave her own children—hot water, sugar, and milk. Dorothy tasted hers politely and ate her little cakes.

"Why, Dorothy, you aren't drinking your tea! Isn't it sweet enough?" asked the hostess.

"Yes, it's sweet enough," replied the child.

"Then why aren't you taking it?"

"It's too dull," she replied. J. R.

My little granddaughter went into the apartment next door, where the man was playing and singing. She said, "Uncle Robert, do you know what that sounds like?"

"No: what does it sound like, Betty?"

Jean found her father's vest one day, and, after examining it carefully, tried to put it on her baby brother. Buddy objected strenuously, whereupon Jean addressed the following remark to him in her most convincing manner: "But, Buddy, dear, all people what are called mans wear vests!" G. M. R.

My little 6 year old was watching the record make its rapid revolutions on the phonograph, and finally said: "Gee, wouldn't the Teenie Weenies have a great ride on that?" C. W. McK.

Anne had learned that unnecessary crying on her part was usually met with a spanking. So, after hearing the new baby cry for what was surely an unnecessary length of time, she ventured the suggestion, "Mamma, don't you fink dat baby's big enough to spank?" L. H. H.

William came into my office with important business upon his manly little shoulders.

"I want to buy a baby Liberty bond. My big brother has a bond and I want one, too."

"What have you got to buy one with, little man?"

Out came the chubby fist clutching a tight little wad of twenty-five pennies. He received a thrift stamp on a thrift stamp card. W. B. M.

Henry explained his delay in returning from the store by saying, "A big boy tried to run over me, but I braced right up to him." I asked if he struck the boy, and he replied, "I didn't have to; my bluff was good enough." Mrs. L. S.

Be Better Looking—Take Olive Tablets

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 17 years of study with his patients.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color.

To have a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days you must get at the cause.

They start the bile and overcome constipation. That's why millions of boxes are sold annually at 10c and 25c per box. All druggists. Take one or two nightly and note the pleasing results. —Adv.

How to Order Your Clotilde Patterns.

In ordering a waist the size should be determined by the bust measure. Give the bust measure. In ordering a skirt the size of the hip is more important than the size of the waist, but give both the hip and the waist measure. Ten cents for each waist, coat, or skirt.

In ordering misses' patterns the age should be stated—12, 14, 16, or 18 years. Ten cents for each waist, coat, skirt, or dress.

In ordering children's regular patterns order them by the age of the child. Ten cents each.

Clotilde's patterns are made in New York exclusively for "The Chicago Sunday Tribune" and may be obtained through no other service. A Chicago distribution office has been opened, and following this announcement orders will be filled on the day of receipt. An extra 2 cent stamp will allow for letter postage and will thereby hasten delivery. Patrons are requested to send stamps instead of dimes, as money is frequently lost in the mails.

REAL LOVE STORIES

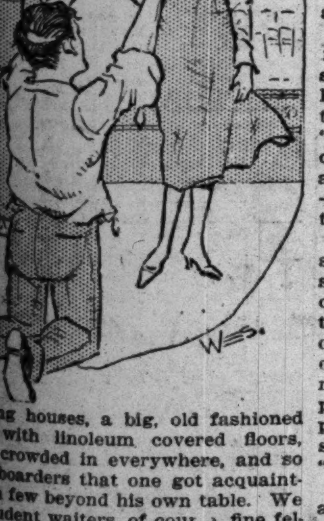
HER LIFE PRESERVER.

BEULAH and I were roommates at college. We were totally different types, she a little girl with fluffy dark hair and big blue eyes, while I—but I don't count. This isn't my love story.

We boarded during our freshman year at one of the typical college town boarding houses, a big, old fashioned place with linoleum covered floors, tables crowded in everywhere, and so many boarders that one got acquainted with few beyond his own table. We had student waiters, of course, fine fellows, but apt to be a bit clumsy during the first part of the year, before they quite caught the trick of balancing their big loaded trays.



One evening at dinner one of the waiters spilled a bowl of gravy all over the floor. While he was gone to get a mop Beulah came in. She did not see the gravy and no one thought quickly enough to warn her. She stepped right into it, slipped, skidded, and then, making a wild effort to keep her balance, threw her arms about a the young fellow at the next table to save.

Poor girl, she was so embarrassed that she didn't know what to do. She could eat scarcely a bite of dinner. The incident, however, didn't seem to affect the "life preserver's" appetite in the least.

Our class was the last to take part in the genuine old fashioned freshman rush. That year the "casualties" were so great that the faculty took the matter in hand and adopted such stringent rules regarding the rush that they took out all the "pep" I have always been thankful that we saw the last performance, for it certainly was an experience not easily forgotten.

After the rush proper around the flagpole on the campus the crowd surged back to the town's main street. Here groups of sophomores, wise with the previous year's experience of "united we stand, divided we fall," captured lone freshmen wandering about and made them do their stunts—sing, dance, make speeches, and go through a hundred other tortures.

Beulah, two other girls, and I were standing in front of one of the book stores when a number of sophomores came roaring down the street directly toward us. We hurried for the shelter of the crowd, but Beulah didn't move quite fast enough. The sophs surrounded her and made their captive propose. The poor fellow, muddy and perspiring, flopped down on his knees, stretched out his arms, and gasped. "O, won't you have me?"

"Yes, indeed," said Beulah without a moment's hesitation, while we girls looked on in amazement.

"Aw come on, he needs a bath," yelled one of the sophomores.

But Beulah held her ground. "You offered him to me," she insisted, "and I took him. He's mine."

The humor of the situation must have appealed even to the sophomores, for a moment later Beulah and her freshman were walking down the street together. As they turned the corner it dawned upon my befogged brain that I had seen him before. He was the "life preserver."

Five years later I was bridesmaid at Beulah's wedding. Again I watched her take the freshman, this time "till death do us part. F. B."

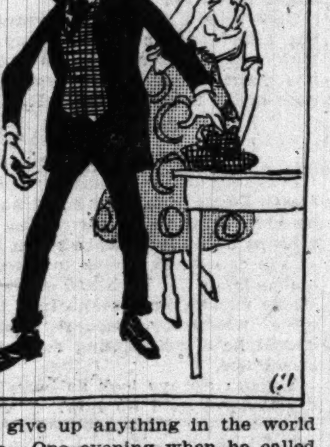
Too Much to Ask.

"A woman's a woman, but a good cigar is a smoke," so I learned after being too sure of my fiancé. He smoked a great deal and I thought he would give up anything in the world for me. One evening when he called I told him he'd have to choose between smoking and me. He chose the latter, for he took his hat and rushed out and I never saw him again. E. B.



After the Ball.

I had been going with a girl for some time and expected to make her my wife soon, but then one night coming home from a dance I let this slip: "Gee, I could dance with your chum for a lifetime." She said, "Well, I won't stop you," and then she ran in the house. She won't see me any more. E. J.

Keen on Patriotism.

My beau was patriotic. He was loud in his praises of every war move that was being made, and he often stated that but for defective eyesight he would be taking a whack at the enemy himself.

One night I invited him to supper, and, knowing him to be so keen on patriotism, I served him a war supper. The portions were meager and the food extremely plain.

He ate his meal quietly, stayed but a short time after, and has not been back since.

Verily, the way to lose a man's heart is to mistreat his "tummy." M. R.

She Looked Guilty.

I was homeward bound from a shopping tour, and as I was about to hand the "L" agent a 50 cent piece (the extent of my purse) it fell and rolled. A young man ahead of me grabbed it and hurried to the platform, while I cried in despair. "He picked up my money."

A man rushed after him for explanation, whereupon the wretch said, "You don't believe that dame, do you? She's a regular crook—makes a business of picking up coin that way."

Although innocent, I flushed and could not speak. Having every indication of guilt, the crowd which had gathered thought me a "bad actor." Without trying to clear myself I marched away, walking eight blocks to a friend's office, where I obtained carfare. S. M.

The Man in the Picture.

Mine was when a girl friend and myself were standing in front of our theater and were looking at the pictures of the two young men who were playing in vaudeville that week. I rather liked the looks of one of them and in fun said to my friend, "I want that one." "All right, here I am," said a voice behind me. I turned around and looked into the face of the man in the picture. M. E. M.

Given a Ride.

While visiting on a farm during the harvesting season, when a bride of four months, I expressed a desire to ride on a load of hay again as I did when a child. To my amazement, as I was standing watching the farmers drive by with their loads of hay, a tall young farmer picked me up in his arms and tossed me up on the top of an enormous load. The other farmers on the load thought it a huge joke. M.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Materialistic.

> Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

IF you were born this week you are materialistic, because you come under the influence of the sign Capricornus, which is considered a dry, earthy sign of the zodiac. Cold, calculating and exclusive by nature are the protégés of this sign. Of a cautious, far seeing nature are they. Impulse never gains mastery over reason, and among these are never found people of indecisive natures. They come into life with their minds made up. When a crisis comes in their lives they never suffer nor struggle about what should be done. They know.

Their spirit of self-reliance is amazing, and it is only made greater by the thorn pricks which would divert and defeat less courageous souls. With the goal of their ambition ahead of them, they turn obstacles into stepping stones. For this reason one finds men born under this sign seeking the distinction of supremacy in the political world. An insatiable thirst for knowledge is the birthright of these people, and as a consequence many become scholars and speakers. No frenzied haste ever marks their entry into anything. They go about things with calm, quiet deliberation, but in the end they arrive victorious.

The coldness and unresponsiveness which marks the children of Capricornus may be offset if they secure love and companionship while life is young and in the making. If twilight shadows overtake them they are alone and desolate and their way is weary. So cold, dignified, and undemonstrative are Capricornians that they actually suffer under love and caresses.

The women fortunately possess more warmth of feeling and tenderness than the men of this sign, but even they calculate and reason as to the comfortable conditions of life, power and social standing. They have an imperiousness of nature which makes them unpopular socially and they have a way of making others feel ill at ease and without harmony.

March and November are the months which are best for important undertakings of people born under Capricorn, and Saturday is supposed to be the luckiest day of the week.

Calamity does not disturb these people. They make remarkable soldiers because of their stoicism. They could see others suffer and suffer themselves without appearing to be a particle moved.

The birth flower of this sign is the snowdrop; the birthstones, garnet and moonstone; the colors, maroon, silver, and black.

Sympathetic signs are Taurus, April 21, May 21, and Virgo, Aug. 24, Sept. 23. A marriage with Aquarius, Jan. 21-Feb. 19, or Cancer, June 23-July 22, will be almost certain to bring domestic happiness.

It May Prove Tiresome.

"Dear Miss Blake: Is it proper for a young girl to be always talking about her male friends to her girl friends?

"OLGA."

Occasionally talking about your male friends is quite natural but don't get in the habit of talking "boys" all the time.

Quite Simple.

"Dear Miss Blake: How could a boy of 18 stir up an acquaintance with a girl classmate? STUPID."

That ought to be easy, Stupid. Have the teacher or some fellow classmate introduce you.

Good Gracious!

"Dear Miss Blake: What does 'S. W. A. K.' mean? Also 'F. Y. L. O.' and 'B. B. L.'? ALINE."

"S. W. A. K." means "Sealed with a kiss." "F. Y. L. O." means "For your love only." "B. B. L." means "Bought by love."

Urging Irks Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: About a week ago a friend of mine urged me into an introduction to a number of girls. They have made it apparent that they wish me to take them out. As I care nothing for them, how can I inform them of this without offending my friend? S. S."

I don't think you will offend your friend if you tell her frankly that you have so many girl friends now to whom you are obligated you do not care to be urged into any more introductions. No fair-minded girl could take exception to that explanation.

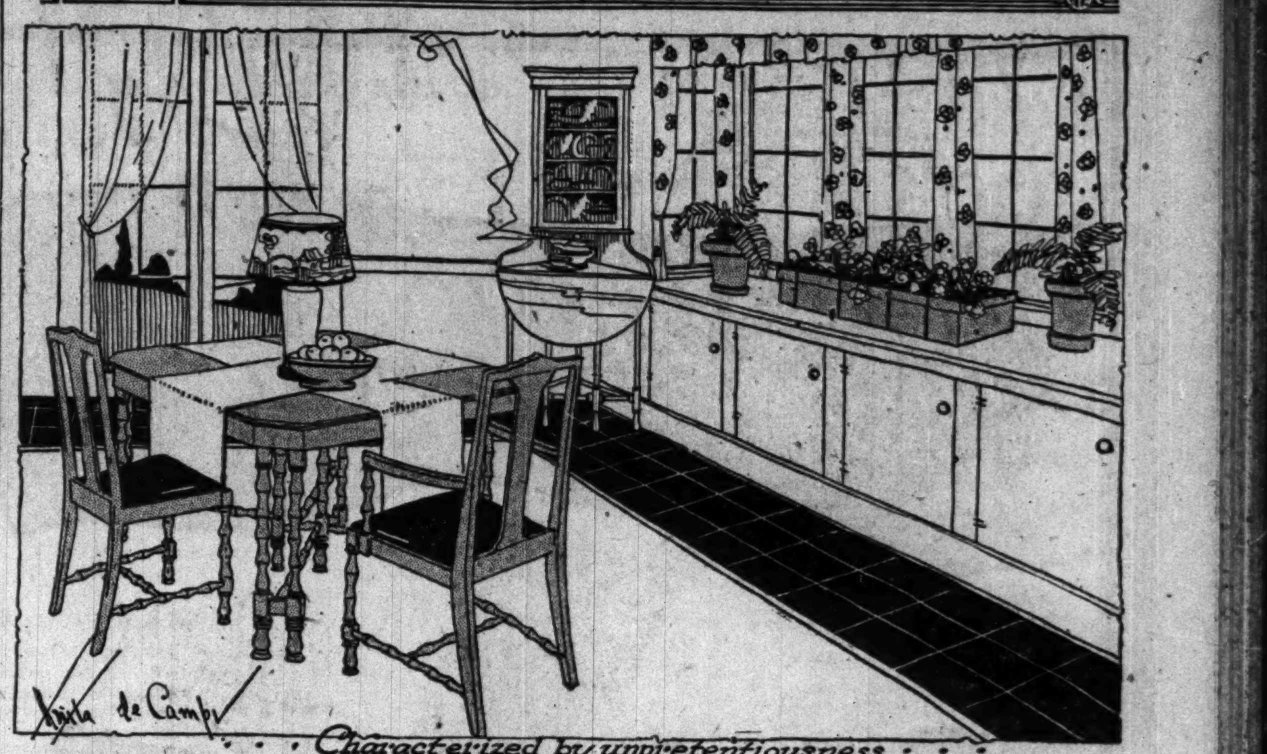
Rules of Writing.

"Dear Miss Blake: Please advise me what to do. I have gone with a young man from another town several times and would like to correspond with him. Would it be considered proper for me to write to him, and would it be necessary for me to wait for a reply before writing again? LORETTO."

Unless the man has given you a hint that he would like to hear from you, it would be bad taste to write him. In fact, I would not want you to write until you had heard from him first, and under no condition should you think of writing again without the first letter having been answered.

The HOME HARMONIOUS

by Anita de Campi



Characterized by unpretentiousness

> Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

My Dear Miss Campi: We have been living in furnished apartments for some time and now want to buy our furniture, even though it may be very modest. We cannot tell how long we shall stay in the city, so do not want to buy expensive furniture, as if my husband's business calls him to another part of the country, we may have to sell it, as we have done before. But we like an artistic home and would appreciate your help in suggesting inexpensive, but effective furniture for an ordinary five room city apartment.

We will have to buy the furniture without any special regard to the walls, color of woodwork, etc., of the apartment, as that is likely to be a variable quantity. The following are some of the questions upon which I would like help:

Can you suggest any special odd touches or color combinations to give life and color and a "different" air to the rooms?

Dining table and chairs—what shape and finish?

What kind and color of rug would be good for the living room?

Which would be in better style—the overstuffed velour davenport (perhaps a mulberry shade) or the davenport with velour and cane back effect (which seems to me not as comfortable as the other)?

What do you consider a good finish for the living room furniture, a brown mahogany, red mahogany, walnut, or something else—suited to a moderate purse?

What suggestions would you make in regard to a library table or a desk if preferable?

What curtains or hangings would be effective (always with an eye to the pocketbook in these days)?

I would like a young woman's room done in soft, pale gray to be brightened with rose color. How could one treat an old bedroom dresser to make a good gray finish?

THIS letter is one of such general interest that a detailed reply to it may be expedient in bringing out points of enlightenment to a great number of readers whose problems are identical, and yet whose inquiries are not so concise.

An appalling number of people in the present unrest of the country find themselves in the predicament of our correspondent. The desire for attractive home furnishings is not quelled by the fear of being called away. Home making is too instinctive a feminine trait to be overcome by circumstances. But caution is instinctive, too, and we are learning to curb our inclinations by a spirit of thrift—we look for lovely things, but they must be simple and economical as well—and we find before looking far that these qualities are not incompatible.

Really good things are frequently inexpensive things. Let all be characterized by unpretentiousness and the feeling of unison will be satisfying. Keep this dominant characteristic in mind when shopping, and put each and every article you buy under its crucial test. Special sales may temptingly offer a square of satin brocade at the same price as chintz, but if the brocade piece is introduced in certain modest surroundings, what does it do? Does it glorify the rest of the room? I think not. I think it only cheapens the rest. It seems to me as foolish as a satin pocket on a well worn gingham pinafore.

One does not ask any longer what color is this or that room going to be. It is taken for granted that the room itself will be neutral in tone, and that color will be provided in the furnishings, draperies, and accessories. The accepted idea is a generally indefinite color scheme, for large areas, with small surfaces of mixed color and smaller, more intensive touches of pure color.

Every one who has studied the subject realizes that backgrounds must be soft toned, that small objects acquire importance if made properly vivid. We all know the emphasis a scheme gains by an accidental color flash, a turquoise bowl, a painted parchment shade, a bit of lacquer lined with bright Chinese red! But all these sharp notes would lose effect if the whole room, instead of being taupe or oyster green, or old ivory, were filled with other brighter reds and blues, etc.

When you have completely mastered the rule that neutrals are for areas and that colors are for emphasis, you have acquired a fundamental truth in good decoration that will make for almost unerring judicious selection, despite the fact that tastes vary and that there are no absolutes in decoration. Select a triad of colors and let this triad include but one pure primary.

For instance, here is a triad—old blue (which is well neutralized), fawn color (also a neutralized color), and scarlet (a pure primary). Use old blue for the wall, fawn for the furniture, and scarlet for a piece of pottery, a lamp cover, a cushion, or part of a costume in a painting. In this room the carpet would be a blend of old blue and fawn, and the woodwork preferably ivory.

Now, because you have a splash of red in this room, it does not follow that you may not have blue and yellow, but that the blue and yellow, wherever used, must be toned down. Only one of the primaries should appear in its full intensity. If you decide on a bit of clear yellow for your primary expression, let all the reds and blues be dulled and blended, or if you choose red, modify the yellow and blues—the same for blue.

Futurists use all three primaries, full and intense, but in great profusion, and they count on a neutralizing fusion taking place in the sight itself. What we wish and study is not extreme fad, however, but pleasant, restful, home environment.

It is my best advice in furnishing a small apartment to keep to furniture that may be interchangeable in all the rooms. This plan renders rearrangement quite agreeable. One grows so mortally tired of the same thing forever in the same place! It is a mistake to have too many sorts of wood, yet it need not be all alike, either, to make it interchangeable.

If the living room is in brown wood the dining room may be in brown wood, too, mixed with odd pieces of oyster green enamel, with a hair line of walnut brown near the edges. Glass curtains could be of thin ecru scrim, with inside curtains of oyster green, figured in olive and plum color. In such a room the carpet is of dull wistaria, and the oyster green corner cupboard, lined with dull mauve, is laden with lustrous yellow dishes.

These are the colors used in the illustration here. The flower pots and fernery, lending a piquantly flat note, are in light Wedgwood blue—that tint of blue so delicately grayed that it "goes with anything." The casement curtains are reversible, being faced with striped Wedgwood blue and sand colored sunfast. The slip seats of the chairs are covered with dull blue leather.

For living room furniture that must be posed against the varied backgrounds met with by the nomadic flat dweller, brown is the best framework color—browned birch or brown finished unvarnished oak for first choice, because of their simplicity and textural suitability to combine with inexpensive cotton fabrics. Walnut is charming, and so is brown mahogany, but they call for richer appurtenances. Red mahogany is difficult because not being as neutral as the brown it restricts color choice, as well as fabric colors. Real walnut and mahogany are expensive.

The most practical library table is the one having a shallow drawer, little deeper than a tray, almost as large as the whole table top. This drawer, on being pulled out, discloses a lid which serves as a writing surface. It is hinged, and stationery is kept in the drawer beneath the lid. One may write at such a table without disturbing the set table fittings, lamps, etc.

Linenized cretonnes in figured draperies are about the best low priced fabrics, and cotton rep in solid color is good where figures are not desired. Marquisette and scrim are best against the glass.

A pleasing, modest, and yet up to date interior can be had by using brown wood frames in living room furniture and having the dining room and bedrooms in light taupe or greenish gray. Paint old pieces, after first rubbing with sandpaper. A first coat of good white lead is beneficial; after that, several coats of flat tinted paint. Alternate the brush strokes. If they run up and down in the first coat, let them go right and left in the second, to make the surface smooth.

For general hard wear at average price I think an Axminster is a good choice for a living room rug, and the pattern, to be lastingly pleasing, should be a small two tone diapered or allover effect. Chenille is better, but costlier.

If it is just a matter of present day style, the cane backed davenport has its claim. It is well to remember, however, that nothing is more comfortable than a springy, full sized overstuffed davenport, done either in velours or mellow verdure tapestry, and that it seems, since its introduction, never to have gone out of fashion. The likelihood is that it never will go out of fashion unless the whole world takes on a Cromwellian rigor and comfort itself is taboo.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

MRS. J. L. Q.: Have flat rose colored lambrequins and cretonne side curtains showing rose and dull green on a tan ground.

MRS. W. L. D.: Deep cream or old ivory would be a safe color for the shades. It would be easier to repaint your woodwork than to scrape and stain. Enamel it old ivory. Make casement curtains of casement cloth. Yes, side lights are better than center lights, especially in small rooms. I am sending you a sample of fine paper which you might match in color if not in quality.

MRS. W. M. H.: Use sand color for the sidewalls in your living room. A good day bed can now be had at a reasonable price. Perhaps this would suit your purpose. Gate leg tables are picturesque as well as practical. I have a weakness for them. Blue and buff striped draperies would look well in your dining room. On the casement windows use the same striped sunfast on rings and rods. Weight them instead of sewing them at the bottom. The den paper is well chosen. Let your bedroom wall be light but neutral. Shell pink with old ivory mixed into it would be better than clear shell pink. Would you like light blue grass color in the other room—tinge it with old ivory, too. Gray paper can be had with a brownish tinge, and this would go with brown woodwork. An unobtrusive border would not be objectionable. The binder width is best.

MRS. W. D. M.: The discordant note in your room is the oak sewing machine. Take a wooden piece the size of the machine top, cover it with cretonne, and tack a full length cretonne valance to it. Leave this cover on your machine when it is not in use. A pearl colored side wall would be attractive with the sample of drapery goods you inclosed.

* *

MRS. G. E. M'K.: Old rose sunfast would be lovely with paper like sample you inclosed. A box plaited valance would be nice. Rings with prongs going up and down from them are sewn to the backs of the box plaits. The plaiting is tacked about two inches down from the top edge. The rings have the curtain rods passed through them. They do not show from the room side. The object of the prongs is to keep the heading upright.

Women! Save Your Complexions!

A Specialist Tells You How to Lighten Your Complexion, Banish Enlarged Pores, Blackheads and Pimples and Avoid Crows' Feet and Wrinkles.

If you want your complexion fresh, clear and youthful, be careful how you wash your face. Beauty specialists agree that the secret of a perfect complexion is a thoroughly clean skin. The glow of health cannot shine through a clogged skin; it must be kept free from impurities. But toilet soap contains caustic potash or caustic soda to dry and age the skin, encouraging wrinkles and crows' feet.

The same thing in soap that shrinks woolens also shrivels the skin. In place of soap many use cold cream. This is just as bad. Any face cream called "cold cream" is sure to contain mineral oil, and everybody knows mineral oil grows hair. Instead of cleansing properly, cold cream mixes with the grime only to cause enlarged pores and blackheads. Thousands of women look older than they should because they have not learned properly to wash their faces. A certain group of smart New York women who now have beautiful complexions discovered that Ara-mara is not only excellent for washing the face, but that it is absolutely safe to use; it cannot injure the most delicate complexion. All they do is to gently massage it into the skin and wash with plain warm water. It not only cleanses thoroughly, but it lightens the complexion much better than lemon juice or any kind of face bleach. It is surprising how fresh, clear and wholesome the skin becomes, even after only one proper washing. Those who use it declare it has done more real good to their complexions than any cleansing cream or toilet soap they ever used. Prominent dealers like The Fair and Buck & Rayner tell us that these clever women say a few cents' worth of Ara-mara lasts them for weeks. It is certainly a great blessing to those who are afraid of wrinkles and who have dull, sallow, lifeless complexions. There is really no excuse now for wrinkled, leathery, sallow skins, when one can so easily have a wholesome, clean, clear, radiant complexion. Save this notice.

Practical and Fancy Needle-Work

RED CROSS MITT AND WRISTLET.

As there have been recently several request for the new Red Cross instructions for the mit and wristlet, it seems timely to print them now. Formerly a mitt with covered fingers was advised, now the Red Cross, acting on advices from the army itself, most emphatically desires the open mitt.

This open mitt is similar to the wristlet, as can be seen from the photograph. The main difference is in the protection given the thumb. It is this mitt that the Red Cross wishes most. For some of us, not so expert knitters, the wristlet may present fewer difficulties, and so directions are given for it. But, please, if you possibly can, don't make the wristlets, make the mitts.

Use khaki colored or dark gray wool for soldiers and marines; dark gray for sailors. Use No. 3 bone needles or No. 10 steel needles.

All knitting is better if rather loose; casting on and binding off must be loose.

For the mitt, use one-half hank of wool and four needles, steel or bone.

Cast on with double thread, loosely, 52 stitches; 16-16-20. Knit 2, purl 2 for seven inches. Now to begin the thumb. Knit 2, purl 2, knit the "binding stitch" of fifth stitch. [The binding stitch is the stitch below the stitch on the needle.] Knit fifth stitch. Knit sixth stitch and knit its binding stitch. [You now have 4 stitches in place of 2 for beginning of thumb.] Knit 2, purl 2 to end of round. Knit and purl one more round. Then knit 2, purl 2, knit binding stitch of first thumb stitch, knit the 4 already set for thumb, knit binding stitch of the last stitch knitted. Knit one round.

Continue these directions until you have 22 stitches on thumb. Take off these 22 stitches on a thread, and draw needles close together above thumb for hand. Knit and purl for three inches. [There will be 4 purled stitches together above the thumb.] Bind off.

Pick up thumb stitches on two needles. On third needle take up the 4 purled stitches above the thumb with 1 on each side to make close connection with thumb stitches. You now have 28 stitches for the thumb. Knit 2, purl 2 for one and one-half inches, and bind off. Fasten all ends of wool carefully by running four or five inches into mitt.

The wristlet is the same as the mitt to thumb. To make opening for thumb, knit 2, purl 2 to end of third needle, turn; knit and purl back to end of first needle, always slipping first stitch, turn. Continue knitting back and forth for two inches. Then continue as at first for three inches. Buttonhole thumb opening.

Camp Stories Contest

Your son, your brother, your husband, or your sweetheart in the service undoubtedly has told you some amusing incident that has occurred in his camp. Undoubtedly, too, there are ever so many stories originating in camp that are still untold. This contest is especially open to the soldier himself if he has a good camp story to tell. It is open also to every one who has been told a good camp story of actual happening. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Address Camp Stories Editor, Chicago Tribune.

JOBS WITH UNCLE SAM.

THE government is calling for women workers. There is an urgent need, especially for the many vacancies in the departmental service in Washington, D. C., for women experienced in certain lines, such as the following:

Stenographers and typewriters can be used in all branches of the service and in all local offices, as well as in Washington. But it is for service in Washington that the greatest inducement in the matter of salary is offered. Examinations for these positions are held every Tuesday, owing to the present emergency and the urgent need for eligibles. These examinations are held at the federal building and any information about them can be obtained there at any time. The usual salaries for these positions range from $1,000 to $1,200 a year.

WOMEN WANTED

Examinations for bookkeeper-typewriters and clerk-bookkeepers will also be held every Tuesday at the federal building. For the former position the applicant must have had at least a grammar school education or its equivalent, and at least one year's experience in bookkeeping. For the latter a grammar school education is required and two years' experience in clerical work, one of which must have been in bookkeeping.

The United States civil service commission announces that vacancies in the bureau of markets, department of agriculture, for duty in Washington, D. C., or elsewhere, will be filled from the list of eligible telegraph operators resulting from the open competitive examination. The entrance salaries for these positions range from $1,000 to $1,600 a year. There are vacancies for telegraph operators in other branches of the service with salaries ranging from $900 to $1,600 a year. Certification to fill the higher salaried positions will be made from those attaining the highest average percentages in the examination.

Applicants for these positions must be 21 years and over. Those who have never received messages upon a typewriter or whose only experience has been on a train wire will not be eligible for appointment to the bureau of markets. Applications will be received at any time and will be rated on physical ability, training, and experience.

There are a large number of vacancies at Washington for graphotype operators, salaries ranging from $600 to $1,200 a year. Applicants for this work must be 18 years old or over and must have had a good common school education.

Addressograph operators, salaries $900 to $1,200, must have had at least one month's experience on the F-1 addressograph and must have reached their twentieth birthday before making application. Automatic 3 addressograph operators will be paid from $1,200 to $1,600 a year and must be over 21 years old before making application for position.

To proofreaders who are found eligible and certified to government service $900 to $1,200 a year will be paid. At least one month's experience in addressograph proofreading or six months' experience in a printing office is required for this position. All statements as to education and experience are accepted subject to verification.

Schedule clerks for making graphical charts of production and other records as well as index and catalogue clerks for cataloguing, indexing, and filing correspondence and records according to the decimal system, are greatly in demand for Washington service. The former will be paid from $1,400 to $1,600 a year and the latter from $1,000 to $1,200.

A position open for women only for vacancies in New York is that of inspector of underwear. Applicants must show at least a year of practical experience in a mill or factory where underwear is knit or woven.

The professions listed are but a few of those in which the government has positions to offer. But it is in these that the government feels the most urgent need for applicants at this time. Washington now is the most interesting city in the world. If girls experienced in any of the lines of work listed above are idle, or working under unsatisfactory conditions, this is their chance to do their "bit" for the country and, besides, furnish themselves with an interesting experience.

HOW THEY CAME TO BE STATUES

By William Lightfoot Visscher

The stories of the statues that have been erected in Chicago parks were originally told by Mr. Visscher to a party of children during a series of automobile trips on which the statues were visited. Mr. Visscher's explanations to the young folks proved of such interest that the substance of his talks, with photographs of the statues, will appear in "The Tribune" from Sunday to Sunday that they may reach a wider and no doubt an equally appreciative audience.

···La Salle···

Adventurer and Discoverer.

THE sculptor of this statue was Count Jacques de la Laing, and Lambert Tree gave it to the park.

La Salle was another Columbus, who, if he did not give Europe a new world, give to France, and later to us, a territory ten times as large as her own and far richer. He was a great discoverer, and, oddly enough, like Columbus, he was searching for a route to the Indies and Cathay, and no doubt for a similar purpose, for you know that Columbus' object was to get funds to fit out a crusade. La Salle cared nothing for riches except to fit out an expedition to convert the heathen.

America, you know, was all a wilderness. The French had made settlements on the St. Lawrence as far as Montreal, and they knew of the wonderful channel of lakes reaching westward a thousand miles, and of a big river that flowed somewhere, perhaps to the Mexican gulf, and perhaps to the South sea—and India. La Salle followed the river to the gulf. His ships were wrecked, his supplies lost, his debts piled up, sickness came, but he never gave up or lost his nerve.

Nearly three centuries ago this man was born in the gray old city of Rouen, in Normandy. The Cavelier family were merchant princes, and young Robert was given the gentlemanly title of "de la Salle," after an estate belonging to his family. He was sent to a Jesuit school and, reading of the heroic missionaries, he burned to follow their example, but at the same time he was not ready to be a monk. His elder brother was a priest of the seminary of St. Sulpice in Canada, which held the manorial rights of Montreal, and Robert was given his small fortunte and with the blessings of the brother superior he took ship for Canada.

He knew he was up against a big job, and he went into training. He buckled down to study with the help of the missionaries and a couple of tamed Indians. He spent three years in mastering Iroquois and seven or eight other Indian tongues. The Indian traders brought stories of the beautiful river, the O-hi-o, which flowed to the sea—surely the Vermilion sea, which was the way to China.

Expedition after expedition La Salle made—west to the head of the lakes, south to the Ohio, and down the beautiful river to the rapids where Louisville, the city of Louis of France, now stands. Living among the Indians as a friend and maintaining the dress and the air of a French gentleman, he pursued his journeys by canoe and afoot. Never a wheel or a horse in all his thousands of miles of travel. Twice he passed this very place, the portage of the Chicago, and down the Desplaines and the Illinois.

It was in 1682, nine years after Joliet and Marquette had made their voyage down the Mississippi as far as Arkansas, that La Salle and his men passed down the Illinois and into the great river, and, unheeding the murmur of his men, "sailed on" through the cordon of hostile Indians and other dangers, down to the sea of the Spaniards. At the mouth of the river he planted the cross and took possession of the whole region for the king of France.

ETIQUETTE

by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

THE CALLING CARD.

THE riddle of the Sphinx seems to be absurdly simple compared with the mystery of the calling card. I receive almost daily requests for the conventional rules and uses regarding it, and I am constantly patting myself on the back that I am able to comply directly.

It is customary for women to leave cards when making any kind of formal call. There are different formalities, depending upon the circumstances. If a maid comes to the door in answer to a knock or ring she should take the caller's cards to her mistress, thereby announcing both her name and arrival. If the mistress is out the maid takes the cards to give them to her upon her return. If, on the othr hand, there is no maid, cards may be left on a tray provided for that purpose, or on a convenient table as the caller is taking her leave; and if the would-be recipient of the call is "not at home" cards may be left with whomsoever comes to the door. In smaller towns where things are carried on quite informally cards may be slipped under the door, but this is hardly permissible except in the simplest of communities.

A married woman leaves two of her husband's cards and one of her own when she is calling upon another married woman, and one of each when calling upon a widow or unmarried woman. Either of the two last named leaves one of her cards for each woman upon whom she calls. For example, Miss Brown, when calling upon Mrs. Smith and her sister, leaves two cards, even though one of them is out.

Cards may be inclosed with flowers of gifts of any kind, but when sent with wedding gifts no message should be written upon them, except in the case of a small, personal present between two intimate friends.

It is not correct to write "regrets" or "acceptance" on one's card and to send it as a reply to an invitaton. The only time when a card is a substitute for such a response is when one sends cards to the hostesses of a large reception on the day of the affair. This signifies that the sender is unable to be present.

These few rules are practically adamantine, and it would be well to "read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest" them before using one's cards erroneously.

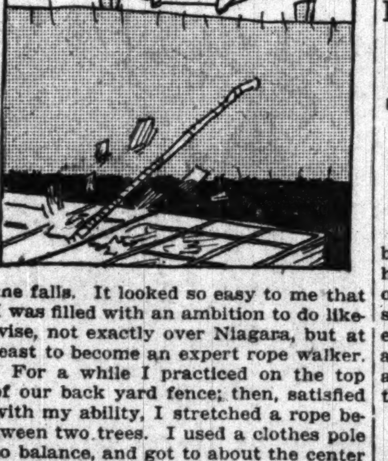
L. K.—When thanking your Sunday school class for their Christmas present it is a good idea to write them personal notes, telling each one how you appreciated his (or her) share in the gift, and how happy it made you. Be direct and simple, but, above all, natural and sincere.

Childhood Ambition Contest.

Did you ever have a childhood ambition—a humorous one? Of course you did. And what you did wasn't anything like what you dreamed. Tell us what your great ambition was—and then tell us how far short you fell. Do it in 250 words, on one side of the paper, and address manuscripts to Childhood Ambition Editor, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." For each story printed $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned.

Down to Earth.

I was 12 years old when Blondin performed his perilous feat of walking a tight rope over the Niagara river near the falls. It looked so easy to me that I was filled with an ambition to do likewise, not exactly over Niagara, but at least to become an expert rope walker.



For a while I practiced on the top of our back yard fence; then, satisfied with my ability, I stretched a rope between two trees. I used a clothes pole to balance, and got to about the center of the distance when I began to wabble. I threw the pole to one side and jumped off on the other.

My father had a hotbed in the yard, and my pole landed on top of it, smashing several panes of glass. Then father cured my ambition and made terra firma look good to me. M. L.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

EDITED BY JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

SAVING AND CLEANLINESS.

AS our supply of any product begins to fail us we wake up and learn to use what little is left to better advantage, though we also try to find something to take its place. Little coal was used in America while trees lasted. Frame houses also the rule and brick the exception.

Too bad, is it not, that we waste when we have abundance and only become wise in want? In olden times they had and heeded the parables and proverbs which taught foresight. There are some lovely ones, but we have lost sight of them.

While we are advocating new fats, new proteins, starchy foods from hitherto unused sources, we know that these new things will not be widely accepted until people learn many things connected with their uses and values. Therefore, it seems reasonable to say that our greatest or at least our most productive effort must be spent in learning to use the familiar things more wisely and well. We may thus have a better starting point to work from in teaching people what they must in time learn about foods, and what the present emergency is stimulating them to learn, as they were never stimulated before. Perhaps I know as well as any one could how much hostility there has been to better teachings about foods, which now people are ready to accept without question.

Is it not a commentary on what we pay for public dinners often that we often know at the end that the few cents' worth of raw appetizers like celery, radishes, ripe olives, etc., were the most gratifying things in the whole repast? Home cooking may be just as dirty, but it does not drive me to quite the same sort of despair. I would like to eat out hither and yon to observe how people eat, and how food is prepared, but I do not do it much.

The best demonstration of a food that we can give is a demonstration of clean use from source to its sacred consumption. If we have more reverence even for a dish of pig's feet we will handle this food with more regard for the high service it is capable of rendering. People with a soulful bent of knowledge about foods scorn them in a hundred ways when they should worship them with a high intelligence. They will learn that in time.

Once grasp the idea of what warm, clean air, clean people, clean and ventilated rooms mean to foods and we shall soon understand in what a barbarous way nine-tenths of our foods have been handled, and sometimes handled with snobbish self-sufficiency. It is an astonishing and shocking thing that some of the people who are trying to teach us how to use new foods and how to use the old foods to better advantage do many fundamentally dirty things. It is shocking because they are setting up examples for many people to follow. It is shocking because never was sanitary science so advanced as today.

Jellied Pig's Feet.

Cured pork is the great world staple. This leaves as by-products certain pieces, like the feet and spare ribs, both of which are pickled, but will not pay the cost of long transportation, when fresh, for local use. Some of our localities, however, will not use them. We find them generally in sections where the people think they must have meat, but cannot pay for choice cuts. On the other hand, pig's feet are put in glass for the epicure, who can pay ten or twelve times as much for them as he would pay for the trotters at the butcher's shop.

To jelly a set of pig's feet, four, prepare by splitting, washing, and scraping. The pig's feet of the markets have usually been scalded and the hard parts removed from the toes. When the set is clean cover with two quarts of cold water, add one or two sliced onions, one or two carrots scraped and sliced, put on the fire, bring slowly to boiling point, and simmer two hours. A little salt must be added, but it is best to put it in after they are cooked tender. When cooked they may be served hot with a bit of vinegar, but to jelly them first remove the bones, strain and clarify the cooking liquor with the white of an egg or how you will (recooking often clarifies by condensing what will settle as sediment), add to it three-fourths of a cup of vinegar, and boil the meat in this for five minutes with spices to taste. Be careful not to let it burn. Pour into dish or mold to set. This is more wholesome without the vinegar, but if not cleaned to perfection the sour disguises the fact.

Boiled Spareribs.

It is the salt spareribs that are boiled to make what is distinctly a man's dish. Wash off the salt thoroughly from both sides of the meat, then soak for about three hours. Put on to cook in cold water, and when this boils skim if necessary, then simmer for three hours. Prepare vegetables separately and serve on the same platter as the meat. To have them flavored like the meat partly cook them then add some of the cooking water. Let the water cool in which the salt spareribs are boiled, and then skim off the goodly portion of fat which rises to use as dripping.

To Try Out Lard.

If people of today more often rendered leaf lard and suet and so learned a little more about cooking it they might be taking a step that would ultimately lead to their learning how to handle fats more intelligently. A rancid fat or a dirty fat is one of the ugliest or most offensive of foods that are not absolutely spoiled. The cracklings from trying out lard make a corn meal mush a hundred per cent more palatable, especially if seasoned or savory, and they are useful in several forms of cookery.

Inspect a two pound piece of leaf lard for any dirt that may be folded into it. Cut out blood specks and remove the parchmentlike skin. Cut in a little at the edge and once well started it will come off without waste. If this seems difficult or you do not get the knack in cutting it up into pieces cut toward this skin and take the pieces off separately. Pieces two inches square make good cracklings or two by four.

Wash in tepid water carefully and put to cook in a covered utensil in at least half a cup of water. As long as the fat contains water it is not likely to burn, but having the fire too hot will make the lard dark colored. Burning the fat will spoil the fat for food. If cooked with bubbles no larger than a pea the cracklings will be light colored and crisp. When the fat becomes wholly quiet it is better to stop the cooking, even though the cracklings are not crisp. Strain carefully through muslin.

Rendering Chicken Fat.

The fat from any fowl may be rendered like leaf lard, though more care must be exercised. An old hen of six pounds weight may furnish enough fat for half a dozen sheets of gingerbread or batches of cookies, some for use in frying chicken or for basting any fowl. It is sweet and good if thoroughly cleaned, and it may be best to remove entirely the skin if a skin layer is tried out.

A Scheme That Failed.

I have tried the matchmaking scheme. It was a failure in one way and a great success in another. There was a fine, well to do old bachelor living in our town and I tried in every possible way to bring him and my daughter together. Of course, he was old enough to be her father, but nevertheless I knew he would make a good husband. I was a widow and anxious to have my daughter marry well.

He seemed attentive and spent two or three evenings each week at our home. One evening when he called my daughter was out, and I was surprised that he seemed rather pleased, and much more surprised when he asked me to be his wife.

That was a good many years ago, but I have never regretted my little matchmaking scheme, as he certainly has made me a fine husband and a good father to my daughter. R. H. H.

All Danger Is Past.

Speaking of matchmaking mothers, I wish I'd had one. If I had I wouldn't be here at the dangerous age of 40 without a danger attached to it as far as I'm concerned, trying to extract romance from the keyboard of this miserable excuse for a piano in a barren office which by natural birthright should be a cozy sitting room in my own home.

I didn't always look as homely and discouraged as I do now. I used to be pretty and have beaux. But my mother never liked any of them, no matter what perfect 36's or imperfect ones I brought around for Sunday night tea. And they got the idea they weren't in high favor before they were in the house long.

She might be in clover now if instead of trying to live off my salary divided between us she had let me have the one I liked best, whom she drove away, and he's now a millionaire.

E. L. J.

That Was Enough.

One Sunday at supper, after taking a second piece of cake, I made a remark about the fine qualities of it. Her mother said: "Carrie baked it. After you're married you'll have the satisfaction of knowing you will get good cake." That was enough—too much, in fact. I adored the girl, liked the cake, but not that kind of a mother-in-law for me. S. D. H.

Safeguards Health of the Children

Constipation, or inaction of the bowels, is a great menace to health. Cathartic or purgative remedies should never be given to children as the violence of their action tends to upset the entire digestive system. A mild laxative is far preferable, and the combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and sold in drug stores for fifty cents a bottle, is highly recommended. This preparation contains no opiate, narcotic, or habit forming drug of any description, is mild and gentle in its action, and brings relief in an easy, natural manner. Its pleasant taste appeals to children and they take it readily.

Thousands of mothers have testified to the merit of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and in countless homes it is the standard family remedy. A trial bottle, free of charge can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 453 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois, for whom this advertisement is published.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to "The Tribune," but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

Cards for Scrap Books.

"Would any one at this late hour like to have a lot of Christmas cards and calendars which were saved over, for making scrap books, etc., to send to children or invalids for the entertainment of a few weary hours?

"E. B."

If you have in mind some poor invalid child or soldier whose hours could be brightened either making up or receiving these scrap books, send me a stamped, addressed envelope and I will give you the address of the woman who so kindly offers them.

Blind and Helpless.

"Please take notice of a blind man. I have been blind for ten years, and have a wife and two children, one boy 15, afflicted with inflammatory rheumatism and heart trouble, and one girl, 10 years old. I have had no other income than peddling brooms for five years, and I am not able to do it now, since I got overheated a year ago, and I ask you if there would be any way to get a little help for me, in clothes or underwear, shoes or any other things. I would be thankful to you. I hope you will help me out. W. H. B."

In the face of such affliction one cannot help but feel some of his discarded clothes would be doing a greater service to humanity covering this poor family than lying idle in an old trunk or closet. Is it not true? One word to the kindly hearted is sufficient.

Needs Baby Buggy.

"If you hear of somebody with a discarded baby buggy would you be kind enough to forward the address to me, as I am much in need of one and cannot afford to buy it? A. W."

There must be plenty of women who have baby carriages their own children have outgrown and who would be glad to relieve the necessity of another mother. Will not some one who has a discarded baby buggy write to me for the address of this mother, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope?

School Wants Phonograph.

"I am a young school teacher, who seems never to be able to keep enough ahead to buy all the supplies needed for my thirty-one small pupils. I am trying to teach them folk games and music, but find it hard without any musical instrument. And so I have turned to you to beg a disc playing machine, for which I can secure educational records. Surely in this broad world there is some one who has tired of his phonograph and who will pass it on to brighten the lives of my thirty-one? If I were able to buy my own I would not ask it, but I'm not, and so I turn to you to beg this gift of you. Please help me! E."

If one of my readers has a discarded talking machine, won't she be the happy one to be able to brighten thirty-one young lives, as is promised in this letter? The request comes from an out of town correspondent, so that the donor will be called upon to pay the express, which really won't be a large amount for so much happiness distributed thereby.

To Keep Irons from Rusting.

"Would you please send me Mrs. M. G.'s address, and I will do my 'bit.' Also, could you tell me how to keep my irons from rusting. If I grease them with a wax they don't rust, but when I use them the wax rubs off on my clothes and makes streaks.

"MRS. C. P."

Never allow them to cool on a stove when the fire is going out, as damp collects and rusts them, but stand them up on end at the side of the stove. Irons must be kept in a perfectly dry place. If you once allow them to get rusty the rust eats into them and their surface is never so smooth again. If they are laid away for some time see that they are thoroughly dry, then grease well, and wrap in brown paper. Mrs. M. G. has already been taken care of. I will put your name on file to give at the next similar request.

What are You Doing to Help Win the War?

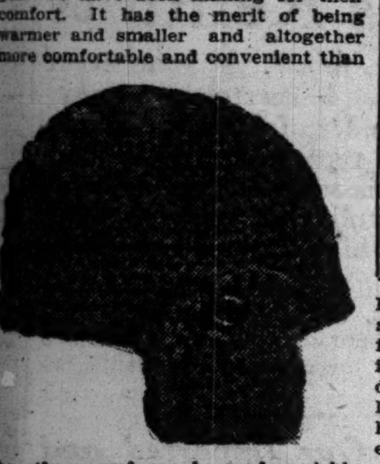
What are you doing to help win the war? If you are one of the thousands of women who have responded to the call to the colors, is the rifle you shoulder loaded with practical ideas on how to save wheat, meat, milk, fats, sugar, and fuel, and are you handling it as the soldier handles his, with the idea of winning the war? Have you practical ideas on dress conservation, on health conservation, and the health of those under your direction? Perhaps you have faced the problem of earning a living while your soldier man is away. Have you any touching, appealing anecdote of him you would like to share with other mothers and sisters and wives of other men in khaki?

This department is an exchange for the women who are helping to win the war. Will you enlist?

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on what you are doing to help win the war. If other things occur to you than those suggested send them in. Remember the suggestion you make may be a big "bit." Write on one side of the paper only. No manuscripts can be returned. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "Chicago Tribune."

A Cap a Soldier Will Like.

Here are instructions for making the most practical headgear I've found yet for our soldiers. It was evolved out of the criticisms I heard made by soldiers on the various forms of headgear we have been making for their comfort. It has the merit of being warmer and smaller and altogether more comfortable and convenient than the others, and can be made quickly by any who crochet. The materials required are one-half hank of yarn and a bone crochet hook.



By "single crochet" I mean to insert hook in work, draw thread through, then throw thread over and draw through the two stitches on hook. This is the only stitch used in the entire work.

The hood may be used as a helmet, a trench cap, or a sleeping cap.

To make it chain four stitches and join. Into the tiny ring thus formed put as many single crochets as will fill it smoothly.

Continue round and round with single crochet, being careful always to take up both sides of the stitch, and widening by putting two single crochets in a stitch, as often as necessary to keep the work smooth and flat until it measures six and one-half inches across. Then continue round and round without widening for another six inches.

This completes the cap or hood portion. To make the lap across the front turn the work without breaking the thread and crochet back four inches. Turn again and go back over this same four inches. Continue to work back and forth until the strip thus formed measures nine and one-half inches.

Make buttonholes in end of strip as follows: Work three stitches, then chain five. Skip five and work until within eight stitches of opposite end. Chain five, skip five, and work last three stitches. Turn and work back, being careful to work in chain stitches. Crochet back and forth on this until the buttonhole is about one-half inch from end of the strip. Break thread and finish neatly. Put buttons on opposite side of cap to match these.

I would suggest that in making this article it be adjusted by fitting it to some man's head. The directions as given were adjusted by trying it on my husband, who wears a seven and one-eighth hat. The sample illustrated has only one buttonhole, where the larger one requires two, and I have given instructions for two.

Making Little Suits.

A class of girls is making little suits for the French peasant boys out of good but discarded men's clothing. We had a tailoress teach us at first, and now we are quite proficient. We clerk in a store but give two evenings a week to this work, and we are glad to help in this way. E. L. R.

Eats Up the Soot.

We have a hard coal furnace, but this year have had to buy soft coal and yet pay a big price for it. We have had a terrible time with the flues and chimney stopping up. Had the furnace cleaned three times so far this winter.

After asking dozens of people what to do to better these conditions we have found that a strong solution of salt water sprinkled over the coal before it is put in the furnace and once in a while putting in three or four old dry batteries [they have zinc in them], letting them burn up, proves of great help. There is a chemical action which eats up the soot.

This saves money in two ways—no furnace cleaner's bill and the difference in price of soft and hard coal.

YOUR SICK CHILD IS CONSTIPATED LOOK AT TONGUE

Give "California Syrup of Figs" if cross, bilious or feverish.

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit-laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs"; then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."—Advertisement

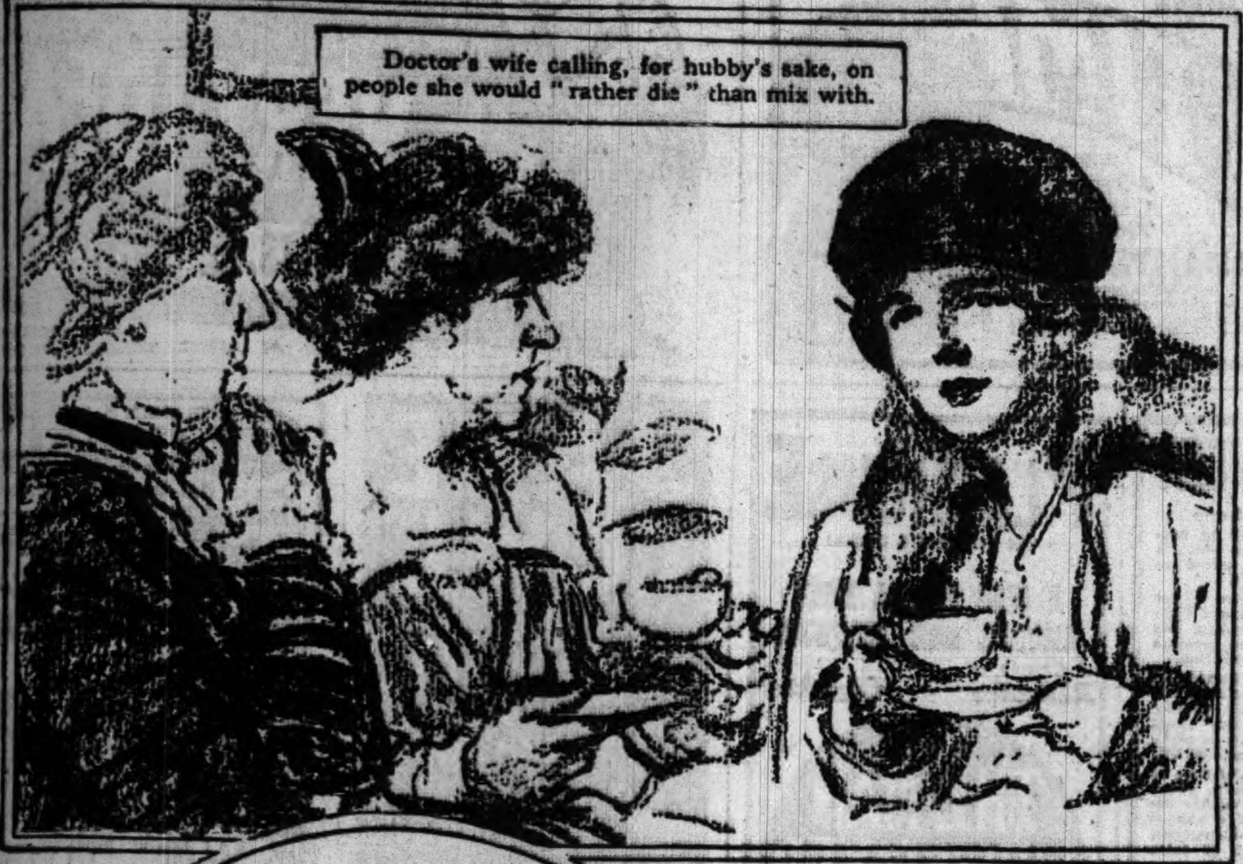
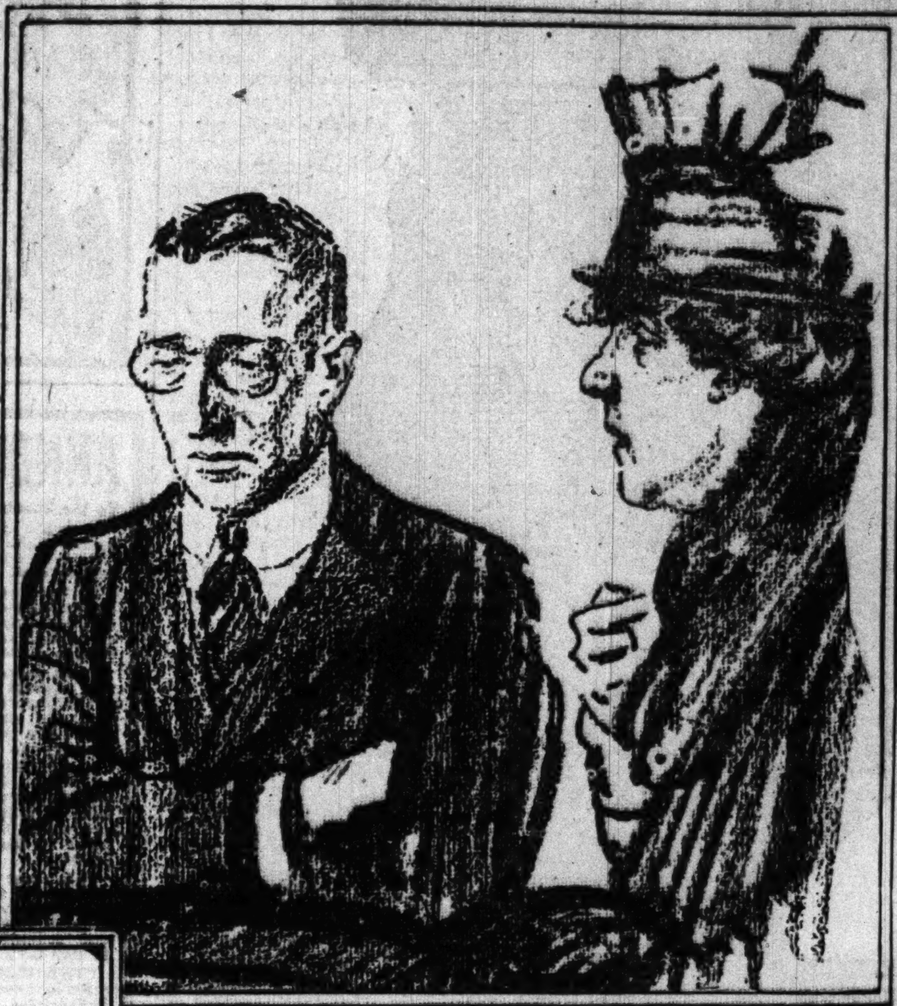
AMONG US MORTALS
"THE MEDICAL PROFESSION"

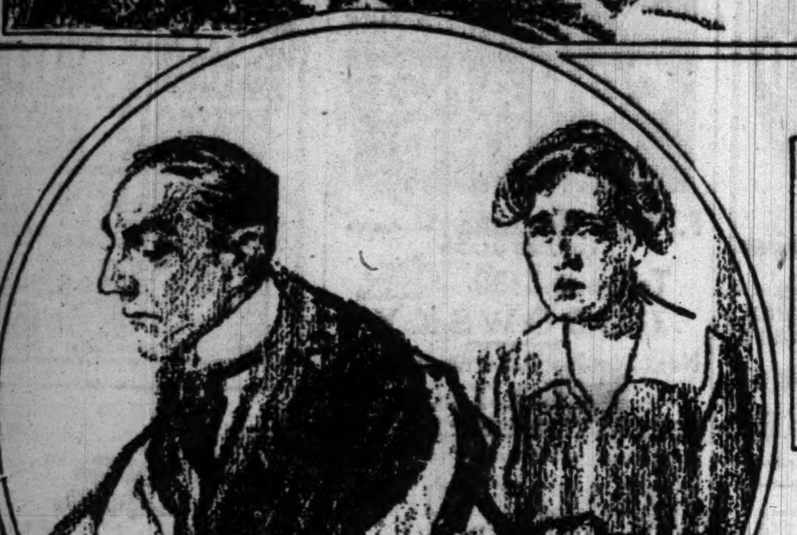
DRAWN BY W. E. HILL



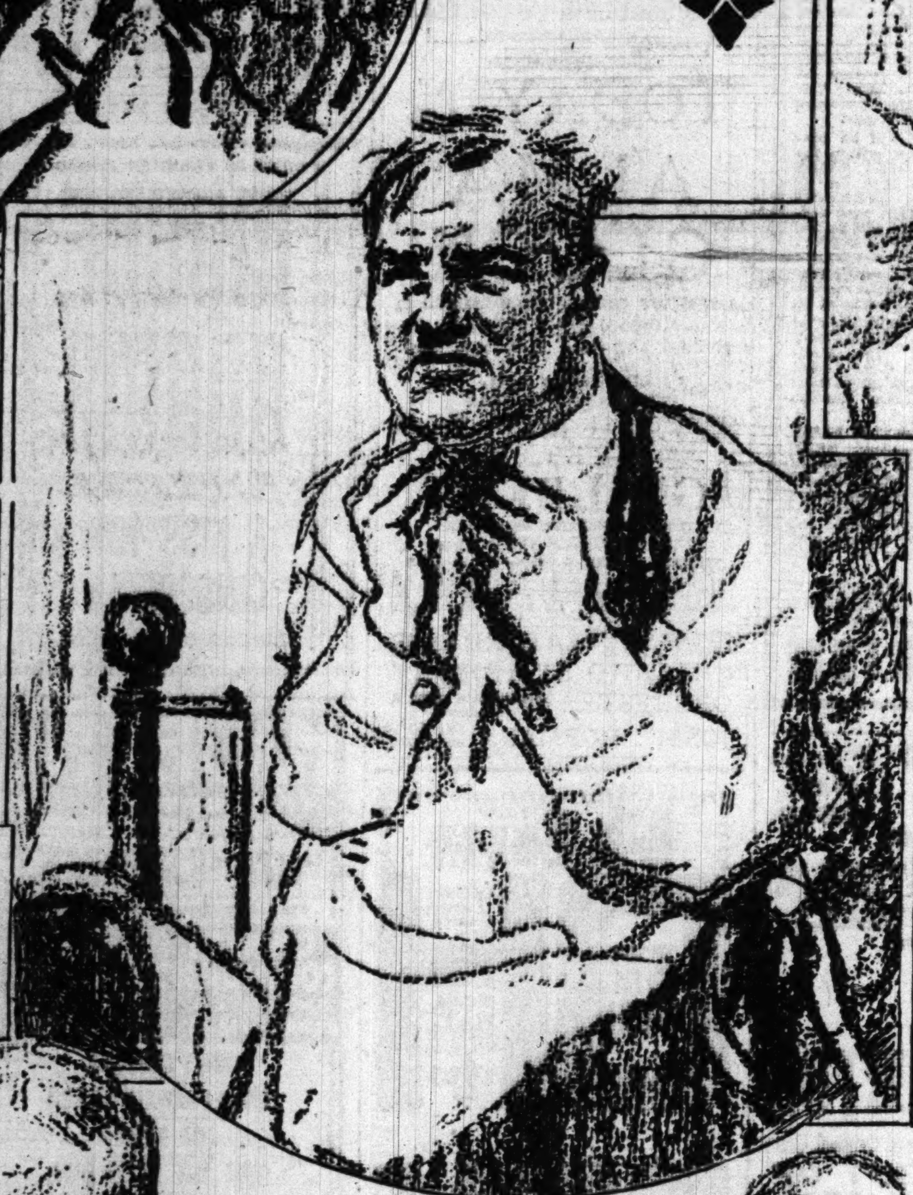
Doctor's wife calling, for hubby's sake, on people she would "rather die" than mix with.



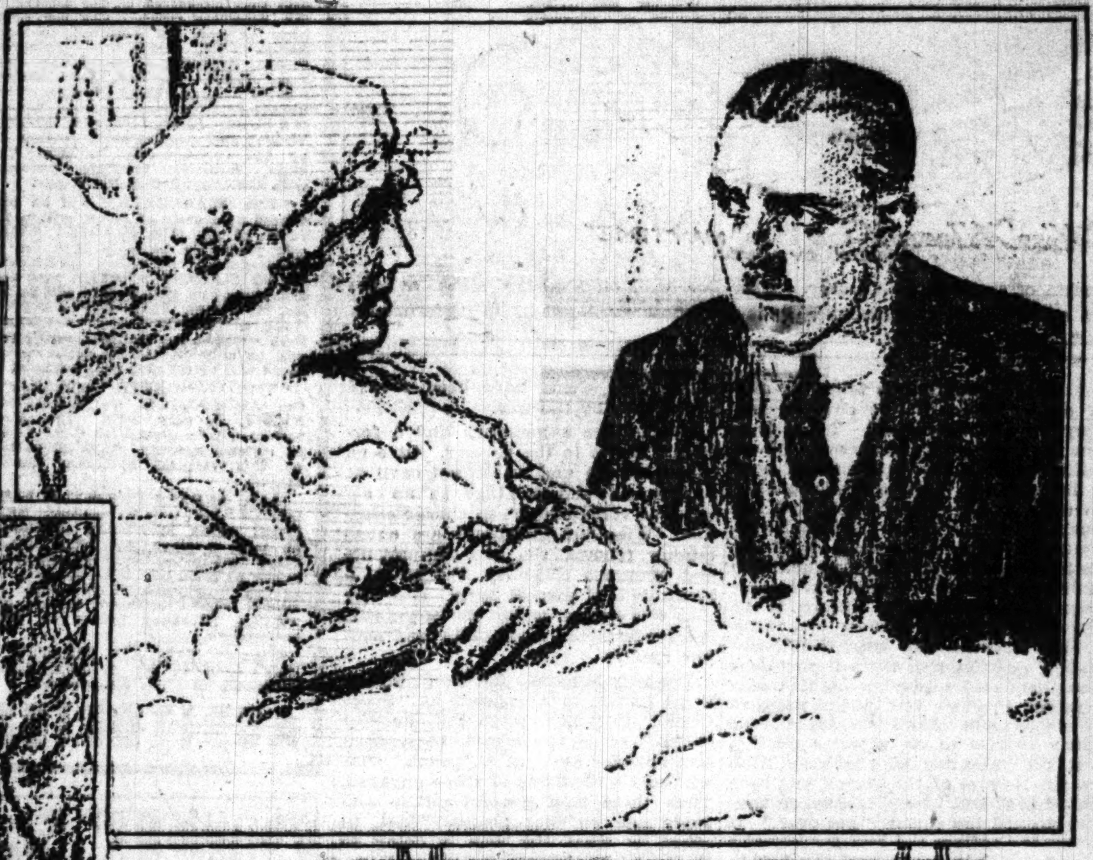
Listening to the fifteen minute recital of Mrs. Dean's symptoms and just what her own diagnosis of the case is. The doctor is expected to agree with her, but she is willing to hear his opinion.



"Just keep her out in the car all day and she'll be all right in no time!" says Dr. Crisp, whose practice lies usually among the very well to do, and is not to be blamed for supposing that Miss Heery, the seamstress, had her own Rolls Royce.

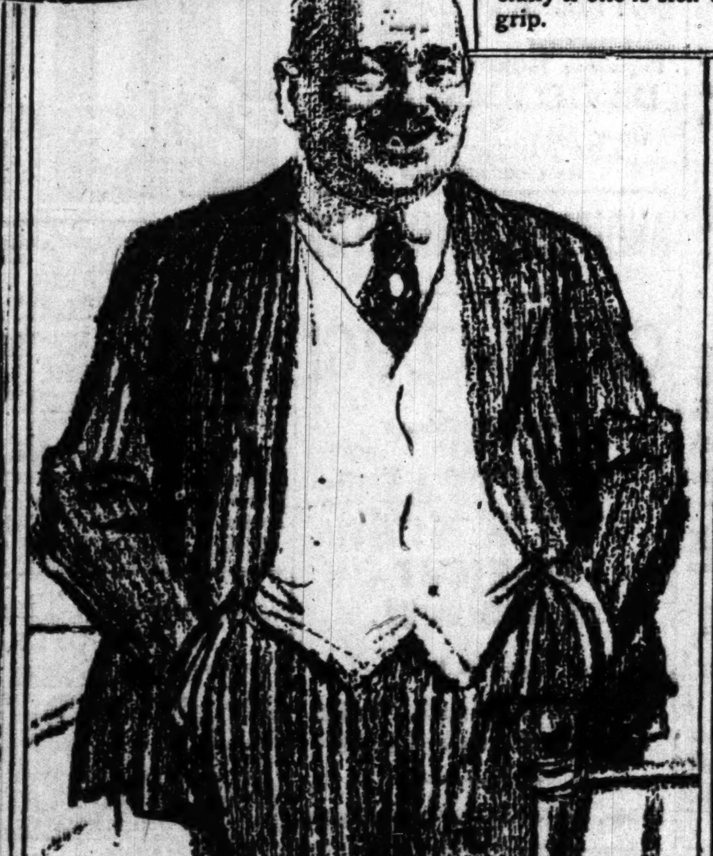


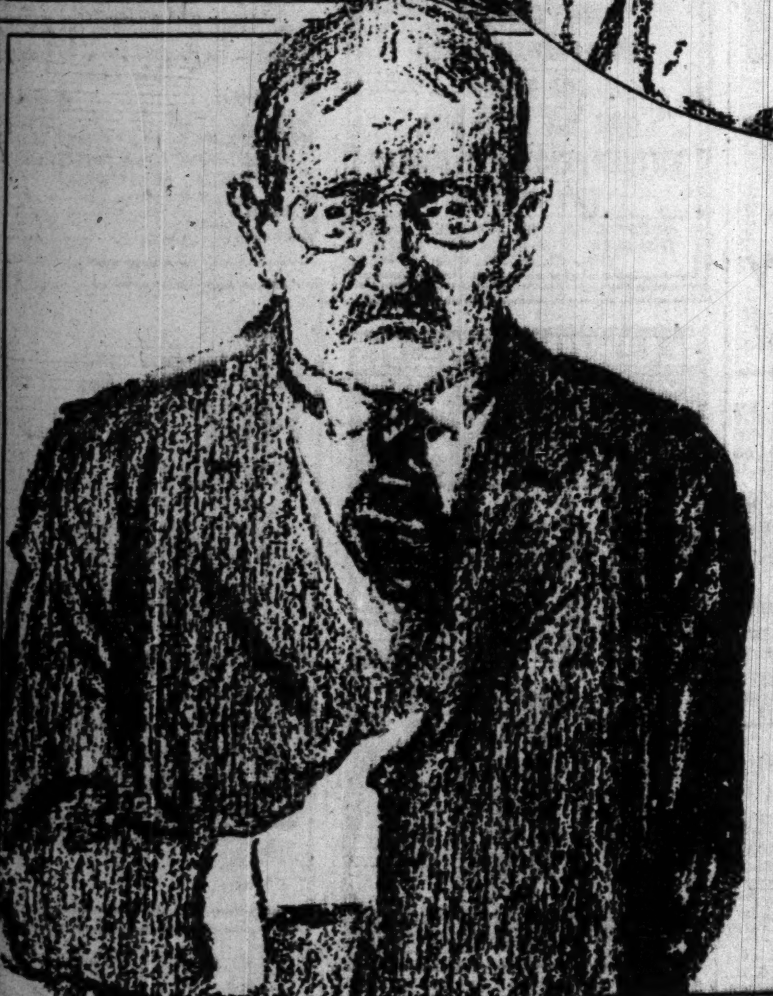
Three-thirty a. m. and Dr. Towne is called for the third time this week to attend a patient three miles off—who has let his bill run for six months and will probably owe for six months more.



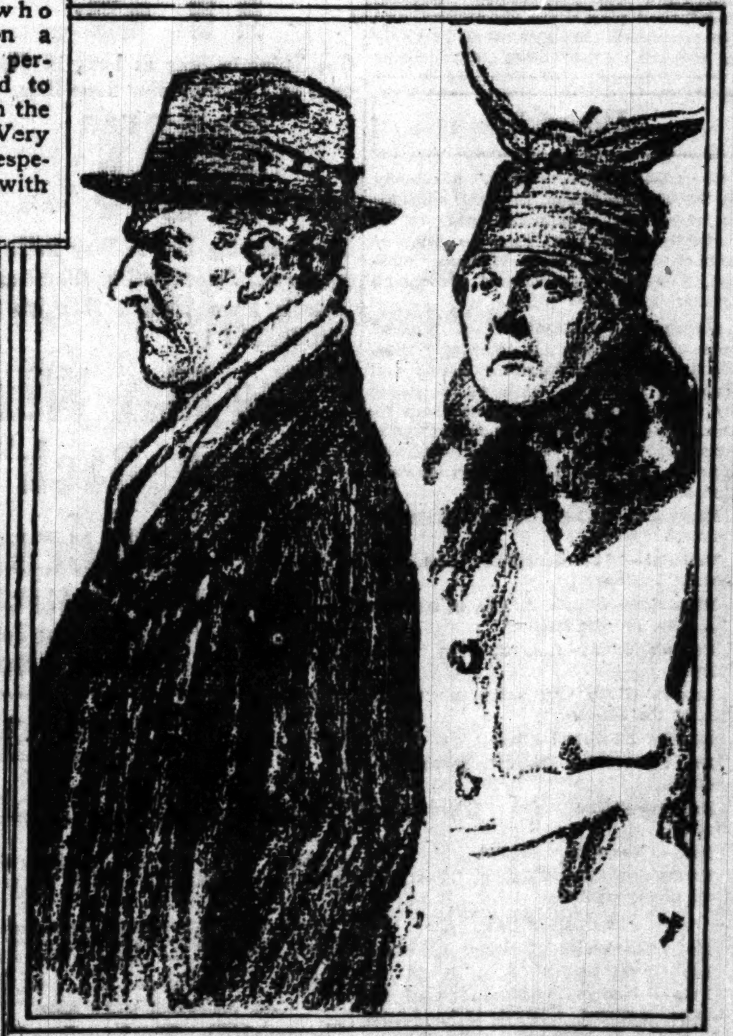
Dr. Rus , whose slogan, "We've got to get the roses back in those little cheeks," makes a great hit with Mrs. Switzer, who buys her complexion at the drug store.

Dr. Deady, who prides himself on a cheery sickroom personality, calculated to start the patient on the road to health. Very annoying at times, especially if one is sick with grip.





Dr. Lampay, who specializes in the knee and scapula. His latest discovery is that liver trouble is curable even in most extreme cases by an operation on the knee.



Doctor who has just looked through and beyond the lady who made the unpardonable mistake of changing doctors and getting well under the care of a rival M. D.

News and Views of the Theaters

By Percy Hammond

UNDER so fragrant and floricultural a caption as "Lilac Time" you would not, would you, suspect that there lurks a drama about war's horrible snarl and bristle and blood?

Yet is it so at Cohan's Grand where "Lilac Time" blooms, an odorous mask to a red-breathed innuendo about the stern strife and carnage drear of the Western Front.

In hasty midnight musings concerning "Lilac Time" last week I ventured the compliment that its two women authors had written some amazingly manlike lines for its military characters. Excepting the New York actors' usual predilection to have eight arms, twelve legs, several mouths and eyes that map at once the universe of emotions, and an elocution that epitomizes the entire catalogue of symphonies and sonatas, the soldiers in "Lilac Time" approximate the modern warrior.

They are the sunny battlers, perhaps, of Capt. Beith's relations, resolute, complaining, fatalistic, dauntless, British, God bless 'em, playing the game cheerfully as it ought to be played and as it will eventually be played, Heaven willing, by the class of them all!

Anonymously I am informed that the he-portion of "Lilac Time" is the work of Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf, two virile phenomena of Broadway who know their way about among the male muscles. The rumor is untrue, according to others, who are sure that Miss Cowl and her schoolfriend, Miss Jane Murfin, wrote it all. At any rate, "Lilac Time" is in spots a man's play as well as a woman's. You and I may regret that it is necessary to kill the hero so that Miss Cowl may be miserable, and to bring him quickly back to life so that Miss Cowl may be happy. But what is technique when compared to receipts? A timid suggestion as to detail: Mr. Caldara, the hero, embarking upon a perilous errand at day-break, throws his bag to his servant and says "Carry on!" The phrase "Carry on" as I understand it is in American "Be game!" or "Stick!" or "Go through!" It does not apply when assigning one's servant to carry one's trunk to one's motor. Mr. Henry Stephenson's British major is, in my opinion, 100 per cent a British major. Miss Cowl's penguin beauty is accurately bestowed upon the heroine and there are luscious bits, effectively etched.

TODAY'S adieus are to be said to "Love o' Mike," those pretty but somewhat puling didoes which have been cut lately in more or less solitude at the Studebaker; and to "The Passing Show" which quits the Garrick, shaking its gaudy fist in umbrage at the Chicago press. Some of the local scriveners, it should be explained, announced their hatreds of this show in terms less elusive than usual, and, being understood, were disciplined therefor by the Messrs. Shubert, whose property it is. One of the most offensive of the scurvy lot has been banished, in fact, from the Shubert shops. To this desk there comes a courtly remonstrance from the owners, admitting its probity in the matter, but deploring its lack of acumen when confronted by a masterpiece of extravaganza. The letter contains a ripe suggestion.

"You claim," it says, in effect, "that 'The Passing Show' is not good. We claim that it is. Let us leave the decision to the public." It is no more than news that the result of this plebiscite be printed here:

For "The Passing Show"—The Messrs. Shubert and a lucrative engagement.

Against "The Passing Show"—The reviewers of the Journal, the Post, and THE TRIBUNE.

The ayes seem to have it—the ayes have it, as Speaker Clark would say, and "The Passing Show" is a good show, despite the determination of this atom of the minority to believe it otherwise.

A CHICAGO lady visiting the political Capital the week before last was fascinated by the excellence of the dramatic criticism prevalent there. So she wrote to the Washington Post, felicitating that periodical on the possession of its solemn reviewer, Frank P. Morse, and lamenting the presence in Chicago of "Mr. Hammond and the others" who scribble frivolously about a great art. Mr. Morse had just printed a puff for "Camille," maintaining courageously that it was a successful drama, and saying that its star, Miss Ethel Barrymore, was, in the unique locution of Mr. Louis De Foe of the New York World, an artiste to her finger-tip.

I and "the others" of the local bouffonade should take to heart the wail of our irritated townswoman. Heaven knows we have enough to laugh at, Byronically, as it is. When I and my fellow clowns write of "The Brat" or "The High Cost of Loving," or of "Why Marry?" or of "The Battle of Zalamea" (as a Drama leaguer called it in my hearing) we should put upon our emboned heads, the critical crown of thorns, instead of the cap and bells, and bleed with, rather than laugh at the drama's wrongs. Be patient, lady, until "Toot, Toot" comes.

ROBERT EDESON plans to play in a new health-drama, bearing the enticing title "Love Forbidden," in Washington next month. It is from the French "L'Amour Defendu," by Jules Renaud, and its contents advise one to be wary if romantic and tubercular.

W. H. Crane, showing his vaudeville play to the variety mandarins, found no enthusiasm for him or it among them. Therefore it exists no longer save as manuscript. Mr. Edeson's late Indian melodrama, which so much depressed the Majestic theater recently, has also returned to its original form. He is now doing a thing called "Pearls" in vaudeville.

The playbill of Raymond Hitchcock's new revue, "Words and Music," ascribed the libretto to Shakespeare and the score to Beethoven. So many persons believed the stated authorship to be true that attendance was threatened, and Glen Macdonough and Jean Schwartz were forced to abandon their imposing pseudonyms.

The composer, librettists, and producers of "Oh, Boy" will present a new work in Albany tomorrow under the title, "Oh, Lady, Lady." The expression, it seems, occurs frequently in another of their products called "Leave It to Jane." The cast is costly, including Miss Carol McComas, Miss Vivienne Segal, Edward Abeles, Carl Randall, Harry C. Browne, Harry Fisher, Reginald Mason, Miss Florence Shirley, and Miss Margaret Dale.

Klaw and Erlanger will cause another effort to be made to establish Miss Phyllis Nielson-Terry as a star in America. "Maggie" is the play's name, Edward Peple is its author, and a handsome Irish laundress is its leading character.

Mrs. Janis indites an exasperated and genealogical protest against the inuendoes that she and Miss Elsie are German, just because Bierbower happens to be their patronymic. Sir Charles B. Oldham of Oldham, England, was Mrs. Janis' granddad, says she, and the late Senator Cockrell of Missouri was her first cousin, once removed. As for the Bierbowers, they came to America before the revolution, and number among themselves such celebrities as a lieutenant governor of Idaho and a professor in the inhospitable University of Chicago.

In Atlantic City the other night Sydney Rosenfeld, author of "Under Pressure," announced that his plans were to make Chicago a center of theatrical production, with an organization similar to that of Augustin Daly. He said it in what the dispatches described as "a witty address."

David Warfield's engagement in "The Music Master" will begin Jan. 21 at Powers' with Miss Marie Bates, William Boag, Miss Eleanor Barry, Miss Hazel Lowry and others in the cast. On the same evening Mrs. Fiske will reach the Blackstone in "Madame Sand," which, though onerously praised by the newspapers in New York, did not last very long.

Mr. Mantle writes that "in imitation drama of the 'Happiness' type Miss Laurette Taylor's art is wasted. More's the pity." Miss Taylor's rôle is that of errand girl to a fashionable sempstress, delivering modes at $6 the week and retaining her purity. The time is the present and the place, New York.

December's ticket tax at the failed Century theater in New York was $12,048, indicating receipts of $30,000 a week, exclusive of the speculators' tithe. Charles Dillingham, one of the late managers, telegraphing his condolences to the new lessee, Ray Comstock of the La Salle theater, quoted a catch line from the vaudeville act of Savoy and Brennan. "You don't know the half of it, dearie," he wired. "You don't know the half of it!"

The sinister toast, "Der Tag!" when given by the spy de luxe in "The Man Who Stayed at Home," meant nothing whatever to the audience at the Playhouse, much to the mystification of William Moore Patch, the producer. In cities less Teuton than Chicago it caused shudders, but here, it seems, its dreadful meaning was not known. Mr. Patch, changing the line from "Der Tag!" to "His Imperial German Majesty!" obtains the desired tremors. The sentiment so revolts Miss Dorothy Dorr, playing another spy, that it sticks in her throat, she says. Miss Dorr has two sons in the war.

Mr. Patch, by the way, comes of a celebrated American army family, and his heart is in every syllable of the English spy's denunciation of the German spy. He was once the dramatic reviewer of the Pittsburgh Dispatch, and it was of him that Henry Miller, upon a Pittsburgh stage, coined the poisonous phrase "a cancer critic."

The advent of Mr. and Mrs. Hatton in New York is greeted with these rhapsodies by Rennold Wolf in the New York Morning Telegraph:

"The Hattons are here and great is the joy thereof. Which is to say that Chicago's most industrious team of playwrights, Frederick and Fannie Hatton, have just arrived in our midst for the especial purpose of directing rehearsals of the new play they have fashioned for Grace George.

"It is not mere coincidence that has brought the Hattons to New York during the holiday season, and at the very height of metropolitan gay night life. As a matter of fact, it isn't among the possibilities that the Hatton pair would be missing from the cabaret district on New Year's eve. Playwriting with them, just between ourselves, is a sort of side line. Fox trotting and the intricate tango are their real occupations in life and Mrs. Hatton is considered by experts the most accomplished all around, catch-as-catch-can, Graeco-Roman, strangle-hold-not-barred stepper that ever dipped to the strains of a jazz band. She claims no less than three endurance championships.

"Fortune has been kind to the Hattons, inasmuch as their plays have consistently brought them in big revenues, thus enabling them to keep completely equipped in dancing slippers and the other fauna and flora of the cabaret classes.

"Indeed, the coming of the Hattons at this time is a most propitious event. Both the drama and Broadway will be greatly enlivened thereby."

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—[Special Correspondence.]—When the audience was assembling for the new Cohan revue at the New Amsterdam theater New Year's eve, Josephine and Elsie Janis slipped quietly into two seats down near the trap man in the orchestra. After which Miss Elsie sank deeply into the fur collar of her evening coat, and took no more than a sly peek or two at those near her.

Now it is the usual theater going custom of the Janises to sit in a stage box, usually a balcony box, from which point of vantage it is an interesting entr'acte diversion to observe the index fingers of the multitude pointed impolitely but admiringly in their direction. Therefore their guarded appearance on this occasion indicated some unusual happening.

Inquiry disclosed the cause for secrecy. The Century theater, where Miss Janis appeared in an eleventh hour attempt to save the Dillingham-Ziegfeld revue, "Miss 1917," is again on the rocks, and that attraction has gone into the receiver's hands and its doors are closed. Elsie being out of the bill at the time (the saving of her weekly salary of $2,500 being quite an item these cheerless days) had considerately agreed to advertise that fact as little as possible.

Thus the Century again becomes the white elephant of local theatrical properties. Temporarily the Messrs. Elliott and Comstock are to take it over and move their Ali Baba spectacle, "Chu Chin Chow," up there from the Manhattan Opera house. Nobody offers to guess what the owners will attempt after that. They may club together and turn the handsome edifice into a community garage, or, most persistent of rumors, they may yet move the Metropolitan company to the Century from the opera house, it being suggested that they may as well lose all their money in one place.

George Michael Cohan is much more interesting than most of those who review the old year and welcome the new. He is far less statistical, and facts and figures (saving the feminine) interest him not at all, but the most exacting of his following had rather rag theatrical history with him than study it with any other living human.

His newest revue is largely a local affair. It can mean little to those living outside the charmed circle to know that the leading lady of the troupe amused the audience highly when she insisted the crystal gazer in "eyes of youth" had told her she could easily become a star of stars if only David Morosco would help her. It is only hereabouts that the vanities of play producers mean anything. "My name," insisted Charles Dow Clark, impersonating David Belasco, "my name is not David Morosco, but Oliver Belasco."

"The genius of stage graft" was David, in search of a Polly with a past. And it was Nora Bayes who met the test, coming over from the Follies to be starred by David. Travesties of practically all the current plays followed, one of them a full scene from "A Tailor Made Man" cleverly done in rag time, as was the scene from "Common Clay" in the first of these Cohan affairs.

Young Mr. Cohan tired writing the present entertainment. He was, in fact, in no condition to attempt it. It has been a sad year for him, the loss of both his father and his sister Josephine, and the continued illness of his mother affecting him deeply. So Irving Berlin was called in to help with the score. He has contributed an effective finale for the first part, in which Miss Melody, about to marry Mr. Words, is halted at the altar by one who remembers her as the property of Mendelssohn, the "Spring Song" kid. The Berlin songs, several in number, are tuneful additions to the score.

Cohan has written another war song, the receipts of this one to go to the war relief fund. "The Boys Are Over There, But Their Hearts Are Over Here," is the general plan of the new number, and though it lacks the snap and wartime swing of the first "Over There" inspiration, it still is a good song and quite certain to return a profit to the fund. An imposing list of principals, programmed as "the salary list," is headed by Miss Bayes, Frederick Santley, Charles Winninger, Paul Nicholson, and Irving Fisher.

The newest of the Ziegfeldian revels known as the "Midnight Frolic," has to do, so far as novelty is concerned, with the lightless nights of Broadway. The melodic hero of teh revels, one Frank Carter, on this occasion searches for the Great White Way with a green lantern and a song detailing his descent from High Falls, and his failure to discover the boasted illuminations of the greater city.

Whereupon the blonde and copper-haired divinities of the Ziegfeldian menage swarm upon him, declaring as they swarm that they are in fact, the real "Bright Lights of Broadway," and that they never fade—a statement justified by the rhyme if not the reason of the lyricist.

The new "Frolic," which happens to be the sixth of the series, is much like its predecessors. The decorations are new and expensive, and there is a bit of an innovation in the introduction of a rubber-tired stage that rolls quietly out over the dancing floor toward the audience. This provides an elevation for such numbers as are better displayed thereon. One of them is a reflection of the Spanish invasion illustrating a song by Frances White called "Carmen Had Nothing on Me." Another is a parade of the wedding anniversaries a bride is heir to, beginning with paper the first year and concluding with pearls if she lives to be a hundred or thereabouts. None of the Ziegfeldian beauties appeared hopeful, though they were bright and eager as far down the list as the golden and diamond celebrations.

To settle the question of who is the prettiest girl in the current "Frolic," ballots are to be passed through the audience that all the boys may cast a vote. At the conclusion of the season the ballots will be counted and the winning girl will have a salary doubled. The money, of course, is nothing: pouf! But a girl's pride will naturally inspire her to make up most carefully hereafter.

The best of the individual songs is Frances White's newest problem in mathematics, phonetically entitled "Gozinto." She sings it dressed in pink rompers and her observations have taught her that "1 gozinto 2, 2 gozinto 4, and mother gozinto father's pants when be begins to snore."

I saw Margaret Anglin play a new war time comedy called "Billeted" last week and felt sorry for Grace George. Not because Miss Anglin is the better actress; they are of an equal talent so far as that is concerned; but because Miss Anglin has this season been the luckier of the two, and has just taken Miss George's home theater away from her.

The gods of the game play curious tricks on th players. Here, for example, is Miss Anglin, famed for her skill as an emotional actress, playing a comedy rôle perfectly suited to Miss George, while Miss George, equally famed for her skill as a comedienne, failed to popularize an emotional rôle in "L'Elevation," which any manager having the choice would have engaged Miss Anglin to interpret.

"Billeted" is a charming play, cast in the mold of high comedy touched with farce. An engaging widow living in an English village has been notified that two army officers are to be billeted with her. In the midst of her preparations the sister of the vicar discovers that she (the widow) has merely been abandoned by her husband after a domestic dispute and is therefore no fit person to remain with single officers under the same roof.

The widow, however, refuses to be so suspiciously put aside. She may have been abandoned, but she is not an abandoned woman. And there is a distinction between entertaining her country's defenders under one roof and under one ceiling. However, if a scandal threatens, she is prepared to stop it. To do which she forges a telegram to herself detailing the death of her absent mate. And has no sooner announced its receipt than she discovers that the last officer to arrive is the husband himself.

Here is indeed a pretty kettle of fish. The complications following are, of course, more or less obvious, but they are not so treated. There is a fine flavor of common sense and plausibility in their development and both a literary and epigrammatic quality to the dialogue. The widow and her husband, who is in the army under an assumed name, are forced, both by their pride and the circumstances, to continue the masquerade until their mutual confessions of failure to be happy though separated reunite them.

Miss Anglin first tried "Billeted" in Philadelphia, and there it surprised the Quakers by playing eight weeks straight through the recent unheard of depression. Here we are not so likely to rise to its superior quality, but the attention of the busy little rescue leagues of the drama has been called to it and I hope it may, as they say around the square "get over." It offers the actress the best comedy rôle she has had in years, and she has so perfectly cast and trained her company that the performance is 90 per cent flawless. Edward Emery plays opposite her as the anxious husband.

It is not easy to think of Thomas A. Wise as an English baronet, nor of the immaculate William Courtenay as an English village tailor. Yet in another new war play called "General Post" they play these characters, and are presumed, through them, properly to establish the class distinctions which over there have been turned topsy-turvy by the war.

But we are a generous and a forgiving people in the theater. Give us entertainment and we do not cavil at such minor shortcomings as an absence of verisimilitude in characterization. Wise and Courtenay are entertaining fellows, the one an amiable and unctuous comedian, the other a romantic and earnest lover. And they play this drama, which, sentimentally, is a modernized "Lady of Lyons," with fine results.

The play is named for the children's game known to Americans as "Stage Coach," in which, when the one who is "it" gives the signal, there is a scramble for seats in a "coach" that will hold all but one of those engaged. Thus there is a general mixup and every one changes places. That, in effect, is what the war is doing to England. Tradesmen are rising to positions of importance in the army and many a titled gentleman is finding himself in the ranks, awkwardly saluting his "inferior" officers.

ANNOUNCEMENT
To the Theatre-Goers of Chicago:
In a few days a play will be presented in the city of Chicago which is certain to exercise a great moral influence upon this community.
In three other great cities of our country—New York, Boston and Philadelphia—this play was heralded and applauded as one of the greatest dramas of this day and generation.
Based upon the Biblical parable of the prodigal son, staged elaborately yet in a reverential spirit in keeping with the sacred theme, this great drama is a play which is sure to make every young man PAUSE and THINK.
The Parable of the Prodigal Son, as told in the Gospel of St. Luke, Chapter 15, points out the inevitable results of folly, the evils of a wasted patrimony, the ruin and destruction which follow the pursuit of false pleasure.
This great drama is "THE WANDERER," a mammoth production of a gigantic play, written by Maurice V. Samuels, staged by DAVID BELASCO, and presented by William Elliott, F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest.
"THE WANDERER" ran two seasons in New York, three months in Philadelphia and three months in Boston, and has been endorsed by more than 2,500 clergymen of those cities.
"THE WANDERER" is such a colossal dramatic offering that it cannot be presented on the stage of an ordinary theatre. Therefore it has been booked for the enormous AUDITORIUM THEATRE. Yet even that immense stage will have to be extended twelve feet into the orchestra to hold this massive and superb spectacle.
"THE WANDERER" will be presented in Chicago by the greatest cast ever organized in the history of the American stage. The big company of over 200 PEOPLE includes Nance O'Neil, James O'Neill, Charles Dalton, Frederick Lewis, Lionel Braham, Sydney Herbert, Jean Stuart, Florence Auer, Olga Newton, Jean Robertson, Gertrude Davis, Sydney Mather, Henry Duggan, Stephen Wright and a ballet of 90 dancers led by the incomparable Katherine Galanta, formerly premiere danseuse with the Diaghileff Ballet Russe.
"THE WANDERER" will be presented at a scale of prices within the range of all. The HIGHEST PRICE will positively be only $1.50 for all performances, including EVENINGS (ALSO SUNDAY NIGHTS) and Saturday matinee. Other seats will be 25c, 50c, 75c and $1. There will be a BARGAIN MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY, when the entire lower floor will be only $1. At all performances there will be 600 orchestra seats at $1.
"THE WANDERER" will open at the AUDITORIUM on THURSDAY NIGHT, January 24th. The Auditorium will be closed for three nights to make necessary stage alterations so this colossal spectacle can be staged.
MAIL ORDERS FOR "THE WANDERER" will now be received. SEAT SALE opens MONDAY, JANUARY 14, with a clean box office sheet—every seat in the house on sale to the public at BOX OFFICE PRICES. Get in line in advance if you want the BEST SEATS without paying outrageous advanced prices to ticket speculators.

"Of Ballads, Songs, and Snatches"

By Frederick Donaghey

IF but one in every ten persons who have told me of their burning desire that Mr. Campanini should revive "Pélléas and Mélisande" tries to get into the Auditorium Saturday afternoon, the turnaway will represent thousands upon thousands of dollars. If they may be believed, the sole reason for the deficit of the Opera from year to year is Mr. Campanini's obstinancy in not devoting each season to at least seventy performances of Debussy's piece—or, the moderates allow, to fifty performances of that and twenty of Massenet's "Don Quichotte." The love for the latter opus is scarcely less an amazing revelation (as narrative, that is) than the widespread passion for "Pélléas and Mélisande."

To pursue the subject and seek to obtain statistics on the number of times each importunate soul went to the Auditorium when the Debussy and Massenet pieces were on sale is to learn that a fraction more than nine in ten never went, and that the fraction which did got in on passes. Ask by what standard they estimate "Pélléas" as the greatest opera and "Don Quichotte" as better than any other after "Pélléas," and you are told, sniffily, that any real musician knows that.

I am keen again to hear Debussy's opera, and again to hear and see Mary Garden in it, and am happy that the new week is to bring the opportunity. I am sorry that Vanni Marcoux did not come, and, so, provide what appears to be the best excuse for reviving "Don Quichotte." I hope that Saturday's afternoon audience will be a paid-up congregation in use of every seat on every plane of the big operahouse. But I expect to find in that audience, be it large or small, not even the explemental fraction of each ten of the uncounted hundreds who have twittered through the years to me of the high and shining duty Campanini would perform if, casting off the mood of the recalcitrant and the monger, he would restore "Pélléas and Mélisande." They will not be represented at the matinée any more than the vocal and insistent lovers of home-made opera were represented, save on passes, at the première of Mr. Hadley's "Azora."

Debussy's opera takes the place in the week's schedule which had been given to the première of Lazzari's "Le Sauteriot"—a title which may be translated as "The Grasshopper." Whether the latter is to be mounted in the final week was not explained in the announcement about "Pélléas," made Friday night.

Music is doing well in January by Chicago. Heifetz and Zimbalist will play the violin less than a week apart; and Ysaye will play in one hall while Heifetz is in another. Godowsky and Hofmann are in this week's list. Alma Gluck sings this afternoon through a bill of the type with which in a brief period she has earned a fortune. Galli-Curci will tonight give the first out-and-out recital of her busy Chicago career. A taste of her quality in this field was had at last year's concert by the Glee Club of the Association of Commerce, and another in May at the Evanston festival. With "Pélléas" on Saturday and "Falstaff" in prospect for the final week of the season, the Opera, too, contributes. Galli-Curci will have a new rôle, Mimi, next Sunday, when John McCormack will join her to sing one of the few parts in opera in which he obtains a real reaction. Later, he will sing Händel and Beethoven with the Chicago Orchestra, having meanwhile put in one of his own recitals.

Jeska Swartz
PHOTO © MOFFETT

Miss Swartz, in her first season with the Chicago Opera, is pictured as Lola in "Cavalleria Rusticana"—a rôle in which she will be heard this afternoon for the third time. She has made good in a number of parts, including the respective boys of "Faust" and "Romeo and Juliet," the slave in "Lakmé," and Mercedes in "Carmen."

Heifetz's recital of next Sunday was a sellout an hour or so after the box-office of Orchestra hall was opened. The mail, of course, had taken care of most of the seats. He is booked for another on Sunday, Feb. 24; and the seats are ready.

Ysaye, in his recital next Sunday in the Grand, will revive Bach's concerto for two violins, with Leon Sametini playing the second. The body of the concerto will be given by a small string orchestra. Beryl Rubinstein, listed among the soloists with the Orchestra for later in the season, also will take part in the Ysaye program.

The Minneapolis Orchestra comes two weeks from today for a concert in Orchestra hall, with Alexander Raab, a resident pianist, as soloist. He will take part in Felix Borowski's concerto. The other matter in the bill will be a composition by Emil Oberhoffer, himself, and Tschaikowsky's "Manfred" symphony.

Miss Florence Ffrench went up to sing last Sunday with the Minneapolis Orchestra, and obtained some warm praise in the Monday newspapers. She sang Mozart in a way to disprove the fallacy held by most singers that Mozart is not vendible matter in a concert or recital. Mr. Oberhoffer told her, before she sang, that Mozart was vendible if properly sung, and, after the concert, that she had sung Mozart properly. If you go to Galli-Curci's recital tonight, you will hear her sing one bit of Mozart properly—Cherubino's "Non so più cosa son" in "The Marriage of Figaro."

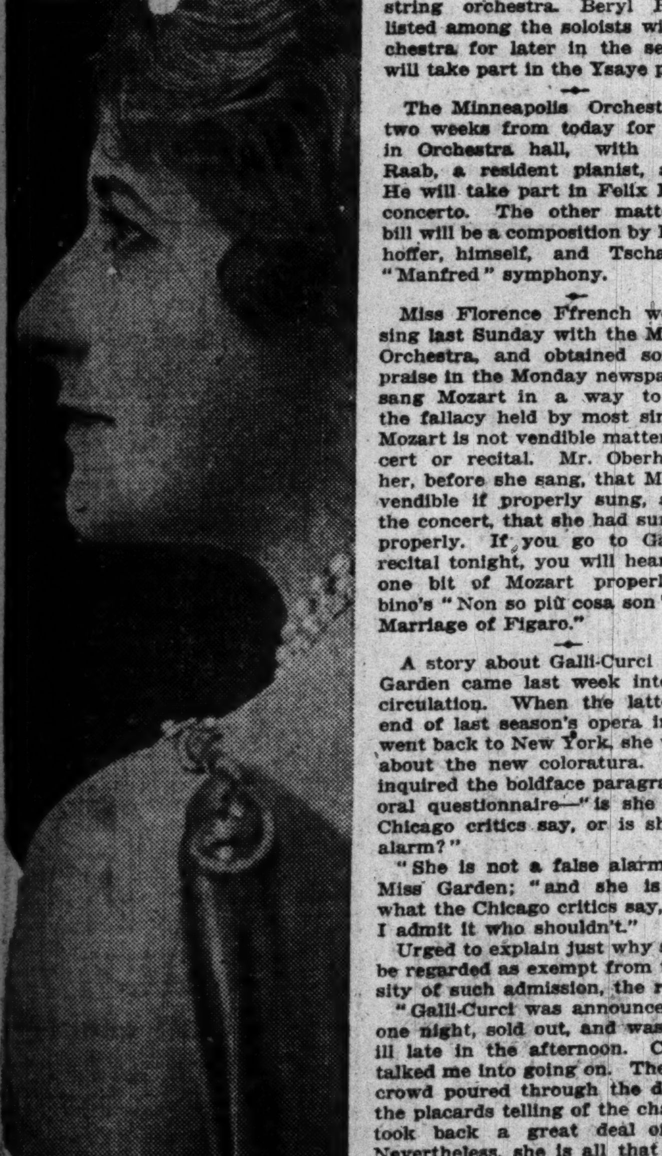
A story about Galli-Curci and Mary Garden came last week into Chicago circulation. When the latter at the end of last season's opera in Chicago went back to New York, she was asked about the new coloratura. "Is she," inquired the boldface paragraph in the oral questionnaire—"is she what the Chicago critics say, or is she a false alarm?"

"She is not a false alarm," replied Miss Garden; "and she is at least what the Chicago critics say, although I admit it who shouldn't."

Urged to explain just why she might be regarded as exempt from the necessity of such admission, the reply was:

"Galli-Curci was announced to sing one night, sold out, and was reported ill late in the afternoon. Campanini talked me into going on. The capacity crowd poured through the doors, saw the placards telling of the change, and took back a great deal of money. Nevertheless, she is all that the Chicago critics say."



Mary Garden

Miss Garden, who made her return to the Opera as Carmen on Friday night, will sing twice this week—as Monna Vanna on Wednesday night, and as Mélisande at the Saturday matinée. A fourth appearance, in the final week of Mr. Campanini's Chicago season, will be as Thaïs, it is expected.

The Week's Bills

JOSEF HOFMANN, the pianist, comes to Chicago for the first time this season to take part in the week's concerts, Friday afternoon and Saturday night, of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. He will play twice in the program prepared by Mr. Stock—in Beethoven's fifth concerto and in a new piece, a "chromaticon" for piano and orchestra by Dvorsky. This latter is the week's item in the way of music by a native or resident composer. Other matters in the schedule are Saint-Saëns' second symphony, Debussy's Marche Ecossaise, and Charbier's "España" rhapsody.

The orchestra's fifth Pop of the season will be on Thursday, with Goldmark, Beethoven, MacDowell, and Saint-Saëns in a program including Frank van der Stucken's march based on American airs.

The Opera

MR. CAMPANINI'S final week save one in his Chicago season of ten starts this afternoon with a special bill of fragments, making use of Muratore, Crimi, Stracciari, and Miss Fitziu, among others. The schedule for other performances involves repetitions of "Azora," "Dinorah," and "Romeo and Juliet"; the revival of "Monna Vanna" and "Pélléas and Mélisande"; and the first hearing in Chicago of Massenet's "Sapho." The arrangement of operas and singers is:

Today at 3—"Cavalleria Rusticana," entire, third time, with Crimi, Peralta, Maguenat, Swartz, Berat; "Pagliacci," first act only, with Muratore, Stracciari, Fitziu; "Ernani," third act, with Crimi, Stracciari, Arimondi, Peralta, Bonnar, Nicolay.

Tuesday at 8—"Dinorah," fifth time, with Galli-Curci, Lazzari, Maxwell, Dua, Rimini, Huberdeau, Paltrinieri.

Wednesday at 8—"Monna Vanna," with Garden, Muratore, Baklanoff, Huberdeau, Dua, Nicolay, Defrere.

Thursday at 8—"Sapho," with Vix, Sharlow, Berat, Dalmores, Dufranne, Hubeardeau, Dua, Nicolay.

Friday at 8—"Romeo and Juliet," fifth time, with Galli-Curci, Muratore and usual cast.

Saturday at 2—"Pélléas and Mélisande," with Garden, Maguenat, Dufranne, Huberdeau, Berat, Dora de Phillippe (for the first time this season), Nicolay.

Saturday at 8—Not announced in time for this edition of THE TRIBUNE.

Mme. Gluck will return to Chicago this afternoon for the first time this season, and give a recital in Orchestra hall. She has for some years held a unique position among the singers in American activity, lacking successful rivalry in her field till the advent of Galli-Curci. A large division of Mme. Gluck's earnings for the season are to be given to wartime charity, she has announced.

Right off the Reel

REDUCED TO MECHANISM.

By Mae Tinée.

THE late Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree was at dinner one evening with friends, when the conversation touched on motion pictures. One of the company turned to Sir Herbert with a question. This conversation ensued:

"What was the name of the production in which you appeared?"

"I haven't the slightest idea."

"But think a moment. It will come to you."

"No, I think not. I do not believe I ever heard it."

"But how, pray, could you act in a picture without learning its name?"

"Well, everthing was done by count. At a certain time in the morning I would arise. I would breakfast and at a certain time appear before my director, who was always there just a moment before me. After that I had no responsibility whatsoever. He reduced me to a piece of mechanism, responsive to his voice. Thusly:

"'Enter room. Count three. Walk to table. Stand there pondering, counting four. Turn, counting two. Register surprise, then alarm for one, two, three, four, five. Shrug—one, two, Walk to door, one, two, three, four. Leave room, closing door softly while counting two.'

"Then, my duties finished, I would leave the picture place.

"But," Sir Herbert said. "I am quite sure that at no time did any one mention the name of the production to me."

Henry B. Walthall's second Baralta production will be called "With Hoops of Steel." Many of the scenes were photographed on the Mojave desert. Mary Cherleson will play opposite him.

They do say that the average expenses of the Douglas Fairbanks' studio amount to about $5,000 a day!

And now Earle Williams has migrated to California. Sooner or later they all go, don't they. It must seem like returning home to Mr. Williams, for he is a Sacramento boy.

Mary Pickford's sixty-five orphans will be taken in state—i. e., special omnibuses—to a special section where they will witness Douglas Fairbanks endeavor to rope and hog-tie a steer at the Rodeo he is to give—profits to go to the army. There are times, you see, when it pays to be an orphant.

Poor Marshall Neilan has broken his toe, and is peevishly hobbling about on crutches. The accident happened in the Los Angeles Athletic club gymnasium.

What they really think:
Curse me, knock me without stint
Only—put my name in print!
Praise is sweet—but so is blame
If you'll only use my name!
When the "column's" news I scan
And no mention of me can
I decipher—Ah, I quail!
To be ignored means—to fail!

It seems to me that as a matter of patriotism and loyalty we should see "The Man Without a Country," which was Florence La Badie's last picture. She didn't know it was to be her last picture, but to its timely theme she gave the best as well as the last of her charming self. See it and see it reverently.

Agreeing with my most severe critics who aver that I don't know everything, I nevertheless insist that changing the title of the Alice Brady picture "Jane Eyre" to "Woman and Wife" is bad business. Any one who ever read and was thrilled by the story would not rest until they had seen the picture. Camouflaged, as is the intent, who's ever going to recognize it? Producers do do such funny things!

In her next picture, "Stella Maris," Mary Pickford will play a dual rôle.

ASK ME! ASK ME!

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

A STUDENT: I am glad the department interests you. D. W. Griffith is in Los Angeles at the present time. He is connected with the Artcraft Pictures corporation as head director. If you care to send me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall be glad to mail you the material I have on scenario writing. The honest to goodness truth is, however, that the scenario editors of the various companies prefer to receive ideas merely submitted in synopsis form. The various studios have their own forms of technique and prefer to put the idea in shape for themselves. You don't mean Eugene O'Neill, you mean Eugene O'Brien. You are welcome.

DAN B.: It is nice to be hearing from you again, Daniel. Marie Cahill did three comedies for Mutual. I understand that the contract was canceled by mutual agreement. Yes, I met Florence Lawrence when I was in New York. She was one of the first motion picture stars I ever interviewed, and her dainty dressing room at the Ince studio, with its desk heaped high with its piles of mail from admirers, is something that will always remain silhouetted in my memory. Do I remember? Well, and just don't I?

AMBITIOUS: Yes, good pictures nowadays are an expensive proposition. The screen people may not array themselves in "just any old thing" as they did when pictures were in their infancy. Gowns, shoes, and coiffures must be up to date, and to be up to date in these three respects means money. You know that, Ambitious. The stars are supposed to furnish their own everyday garments, street clothes, evening dresses, etc. For costume plays, however, the company usually assumes the responsibility of the outfits. No trouble at all.

Comment by Mme. X.

Warmer Climes Begin to Lure the Snow Bound

By Mme. X.

WINTER'S social season is at its height. The holidays are well out of the system. Except for Hobart Chatfield-Taylor, who departed for Santa Barbara on Friday the usual migrations to southern California, Florida, and other balmy winter resorts have not begun. There's a restless fluttering, however, in many a fleece lined nest, and in shop windows, which are banked with snow and trimmed with icicles, milliners and dressmakers are already offering straw hats and diaphanous frocks or sturdy sports suits.

In the autumn, when a return to the city brought a deeper realization of the tremendous obligation imposed on each one of us to devote every ounce of strength and every moment of time to aiding in the prosecution of the war, many of our F. F. C.'s resolved to forego their usual flittings to warmer climes and to brave the rigors of our northern winter and early spring in order to give the fullest possible coöperation to war work.

But custom inevitably stales the intensity of emotions, and it seems probable now that about the same number of people will flock to pleasant dalliance on California golf links and on Florida beaches as of yore. There's many a seemingly sturdy exterior that conceals a frail constitution.

Figuring Your Taxes.

Doesn't the new war income tax shorten any stride? A mere study of some of the pamphlets which are abroad in the land to explain it to the uninitiated makes the hair grow gray. How pleasing, though, to learn by close study of the income tax table that, whereas you, out of slim $3,000 a year, will have to pay an $80 tax, that unhappy, many times a millionaire, who gets no more out of life than you do—and that's only board and lodging when all's said and done—though his income is, say, $2,000,000 a year, has to hand over to Uncle Sam $1,130,180, leaving him only $869,820 a year to live on, not $3,000 a day! That horrible tax pamphlet is responsible for this digression.

Apropos of finances, the military and creation of Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, netted far more than was expected by those managing the affair. As a New Year's greeting Mrs. Chase sent Gen. Kennon at Camp Grant $680 to be given to the camp's Y. M. C. A. work.

The ball itself in the Blackstone's crystal ballroom was as pretty a gathering of youth as we shall see for a long time to come. Most of the young men were in uniform, while, oddly enough, as one of the youthful officers remarked, many of the girls wore black, thus reversing the usual order of plumage. The black toilettes were not the expression of a serious spirit, but were an illustration of the average debutante's greatest ambition—a black evening frock. It is in her opinion the crowning evidence of being really "grown up."

Supplies Training Station Need.

Few social activities this season are divorced from war reliefs. Howard Gillette, for instance, is working overtime to make a great, civic success out of the entertainment to be given at Medinah temple on the afternoon and evening of Feb. 2. This promises to be a remarkable and moving spectacle. It aims to reproduce the life of a naval apprentice at the Great Lakes Naval Training station from the time he arrives there in civilian clothes until he leaves there, the perfectly trained and seasoned seaman, to man one of our war fleet ships.

It will be a feast of patriotism and a flow of music and flag fluttering such as Chicago hasn't yet seen. The proceeds from the sale of tickets will be devoted to the athletics of the training station.

Twenty-five thousand young and husky lads are up there with hardly a baseball or bat among them. It is generally conceded that this war has revealed the importance of sports as nothing else could. The supple, wiry frames, the team work, and the individual powers of initiative developed among the sports loving nations have in many a battle proved the decisive factor.

The Englishmen who made a successful charge on German trenches by kicking a football across No Man's land are a famous instance, while our baseball pitchers, when it comes to throwing hand grenades, will make our national game a reality to the enemy as nothing else could. Perhaps the Germans will take to baseball and football when the war is over. Could anything tend more to peaceful fraternization than for all the youth of Europe to play the same games?

Chicago's Grand Opera.

As the social season draws to its close this column desires once more to emphasize the important part opera plays in the fabric of society and with what really great opera Maestro Campanini has provided us. New York is on the qui vive to hear our famous stars. It is worthy of note that in the latter city where their opera boasts no soprano to equal Galli-Curci and where the completely artistic quality of Muratore is not matched, no boxholder gave up his or her box this year because of war times. The New Yorker knows that once relinquished, an opera box can never be recovered. And so, while many a household has reduced its domestic staff and wages for the house servants have gone down, retrenchment has not been made in the support of one of the city's greatest assets.

Among Chicago's faithful opera mainstays, people who have been regular in their attendance, have been the Cyrus H. McCormicks, Charles Hutchinsons, Edward L. Ryersons, Walter Brewsters, Robert McGanns, R. T. Cranes, William G. Beales, Samuel Insulls, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. Malcolm Caruthers and Mrs. C. M. Ely.

Life Has a Dramatic Quality.

What a dramatic thing life is nowadays! There's young, handsome and charming Mrs. John Borden; she was always the gayest of the gay, but now goes down to St. Luke's hospital every day to assist the doctors and surgeons in the orthopedic department, while her husband, one of the most interesting and striking personalities among the younger men of Chicago, is on his yacht, converted, both yacht and yachtsman, into submarine chasers.

There is much peril in this work, even if one doesn't encounter U-boats. There's no stormier water in the world than that he patrols. To have to deploy in those crowded, tempestuous, tossing seas at night without a light on any craft is enough to test the nerve of any man.

But these perils didn't satisfy John Borden. He grieved over the fact that no long dark, whale-like, steel monster crossed his path. He fretted over the very evident avoidance of him on the part of the German submarines. He need grieve and fret no more for two at once attacked his craft lately and, though his guns didn't bag either of them, his wireless calls to other bigger ships accomplished the destruction of at least one. Life assumes a new radiance now for Skipper Borden.

An Amazing Report.

The miracle of the loaves and fishes is rivaled by the report of the comforts and knitting committee of the women's auxiliary of the Hundred and Forty-ninth field artillery, when Mrs. Arthur Rogers of Evanston (who is the entire committee) announced that with an initial contribution of $715 from the men's committee, of which ex-Judge J. M. Dickinson is chairman, and from the comforts committee, she with her workers had turned out for the regiment now in France and for some of Camp Grant needs, knitted articles to the value of $20,856.50. It's an amazing report that she makes, and one that ought to be printed and distributed broadcast over the war relief field to show what one untiring, devoted, efficient woman can do and to serve as a guide to others engaged in a similar line of work.

The women of the Hundred and Forty-ninth F. A. have provided their men with 1,620 sweaters, 1,113 helmets, 2,431 pairs of socks, 382 pairs of rifle mitts, 5,804 trench caps, and now have ready, or nearly so, about 1,400 suits of vermin proof underwear. This is an article of attire the value of which as yet our war office doesn't seem to appreciate, though letters from innumerable English soldiers and officers attest to its worth.

Mrs. Francis C. Farwell is chairman of this woman's committee and has working with her, besides Mrs. Rogers, Mmes. J. M. Patterson, George Higginson Jr., Tiffany Blake, James Keeley, A. H. Wolf, Hammond, Parkinson, Benton, and Schuneman, and Miss Hester Reilly. Every day except Saturdays and Sundays their workroom at 1133 Marshall Field annex is open to those women who are interested in the regiment and would like to knit or sew for it. On Tuesdays and Thursdays Miss Constance Hodges gives instruction in knitting either with needles or on the knitting machine.

Over in the Fine Arts building the women of the Hundred and Thirty-first infantry have also opened workrooms on the eighth floor to sew and knit for the men of that regiment.

Chatfield-Taylor's New Book.

Having for years had a strong obsession for everything connected with the history of Chicago, feeling that this city is really the most remarkable product of this western world, it was with joy that this column hailed the appearance of H. C. Chatfield-Taylor's latest literary production, a six chapter history of this city.

It is, however, quite unlike the regulation history, the history full of annotations, dates, authorities, and quotations. It is more as if the reader sat down with the author in front of a cozy fire in a Lake Shore drive mansion and the latter wove in friendly, discursive fashion what he had gleaned from records and his own many memories of happenings and people here in Chicago.

In a most entertaining fashion the author has written himself—all unconsciously—into his book, so that you get to know him almost as well as you do his subject. You enjoy his humorous but cautious handling of Chicago's puritanical element—a factor not so strong now as formerly, but still permeating much of the city's life. You like and sympathize with his sometimes reluctant but none the less genuine love for his native town. You thrill with pride when he wields a lance in defense of Chicago's spiritual quality as against her alleged materialism.

He states the facts that our art school is the largest in the land; that taking the University of Chicago and all the faculties and students of the local institutes for higher learning, and its medical, musical, and dramatic schools, the student population of the city would equal the entire population of Peoria, the second city in the state. Chicago's altruism is further attested by the strenuous support given not only to philanthropy but to everything belonging to social service by the "uplift" movement.

It's a book well worth your perusal, for how much do you really know about Chicago? What do its street names mean to you? What visions of other times come to your eyes in looking on Chicago's brick, stone, cement, and asphalt exterior today?

Lester G. Hornby's drawings, which adorn the volume, are attractive, though, curiously enough, they are infused with a certain air of patronage and would give to those who don't know Chicago today a picture of us as we were twenty years ago.

In Literary Lanes.

Since we've strayed into literary lanes let's not forget that not only was Chicago the only community that ever established and endowed a periodical devoted entirely to poetry, but to this city belongs a similar distinction in the Waste Basket, the lively and well dressed magazine written and published for young people entirely by young people whose ages range from 16 to 21, with Carlos Drake, aged 17, as author of its being and its editor in chief.

The first number appeared two months ago. The second (for it's only an every other monthly) is called the holiday number and is now at hand. There are stories and poems and word sketches and the little magazine has the added distinction that comes from good type and printing, wide margins and excellent paper. Altogether it is a chic and notable enterprise.

Its editor is going, or has gone, back to his school in the east and Miss Annette Washburne and Miss Helen Hinde are among those who are helping him run it from this end.

The Arts club is always buzzing. Just now it's agog over the furniture show which David Adler, Harry Milliken, and Robert Allerton have assembled and which will open tomorrow in the clubrooms. It's a loan exhibit where will be on view rare old furniture, rugs, tapestries, bric-a-brac, reft from such lovely abodes as those of Mrs. R. T. Crane, Mrs. C. M. Ely, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. Charles Garfield King, and Capt. Abram Poole. It will be an unusually interesting and worth while affair.

The Kellogg Fairbanks' New Year's day buffet luncheons are now become annual events of great social importance. The one that inaugurated 1918 last Tuesday was a grand gathering of everybody from the university to north of Lincoln park. Mrs. Fairbank has that especial trait of the natural born hostess—she gets all sorts of people together who are glad to meet, but whom distance and circumstances usually keep apart.

Her charming, big rooms were filled with young and old, high brows and frivolous, local celebrities and foreign officers, and talk and laughter and song (I'll get in the Line o' Type if I go on).

One exhausted man murmured as he left the cheerful babel:

"I'd like to go home and sit all alone in a dark cellar." Nevertheless his spouse had all she could do to persuade him finally to leave the scene. Will next year see the same crowd in the same mood?

Pupil of Mme. Guilbert Captivates Society with Her Art.

Miss Virginia Pope
ALICE BOUGHTON, PHOTO

One of the most refreshing things in this season of social activities is the arrival of Miss Virginia Pope from the east, where she has been studying with Mme. Yvette Guilbert and David Bispham toward becoming a most accomplished and delightful "diseuse," or one who speaks in recitation. Miss Pope's work with the Hull House players is well known to society, and her work since returning to her friends more than fulfills the promise of other days. One of the most interesting features of her work is her exquisite costuming for her parts. Dressed in a bewitching Pierrot suit of white satin, she reads old French ballads, often to the accompaniment of a harp, sometimes to that of a piano.

Creamed Whale Among the New Patriotic Foods

"COME and see what to eat and how to cook it," is the slogan of the patriotic food show held at the Coliseum from Jan. 5 to 13 under the direction of the state Council of Defense. There will be demonstrations showing the most nutritious substitutes for the foods that must be saved.

The University of Illinois, under the direction of Miss Mamie Bunch, will demonstrate proteins. Here every sort of substitute for red meat will be shown. The rabbit will be especially featured. Creamed whale and reindeer are also new delicacies.

The school of domestic science, under Miss Lillian Kemp, will demonstrate fat substitutes. Butter should be used only on the table, is the platform taken at the food show. The same principle of growth recently discovered in milk has been found to exist in green leaves, and a green salad with vegetable oil dressing is an excellent substitute for cream. Miss Kemp is arranging an extensive exhibit of salads.

The University of Chicago will have charge of the starches, the Illinois State Normal school of vegetables and fruits, and the Lewis institute of sugar. The national food administration is having a large exhibition of food charts.

The most picturesque exhibit will be the mess kitchen, where an army cook will prepare the identical meals that are being served at Rockford. There will also be a "rolling kitchen."

Nothing will be sold at the food show except the official recipe book at 5 cents. The book contains 350 recipes, each of which has been tested and all of which will be demonstrated at the show. Thirty young women will have charge of the sale of the book each day, under the chairman of the day.

The chairmen of the day are as follows:

Saturday—Mrs. John Mitchell.
Sunday—Mrs. Louis Stumer.
Monday—Mrs. John B. Drake.
Tuesday—Mrs. August C. Magnus.
Wednesday—Mrs. Edward Swift.
Thursday—Mrs. M. M. Sheriff.
Friday—Miss Isabella Holt.
Saturday—Mrs. Henry Faurot.
Sunday—Mrs. Albert Loeb.

The entire show has been arranged by an executive committee of members of the conservation committee of the state council. The representatives of the woman's conservation committee who have acted on the executive committee are Mrs. Lynden Evans, Miss Jennie Snow, and Miss Elizabeth Allen.

WOMEN IN WAR WORK.

Members of the Brownleigh club have charge of the tea room of the Patriotic Food show which opened yesterday and is being held at the Coliseum during this week and next Sunday. All the menus of dishes served will be made up in compliance with the regulations and suggestions of the federal food administration, and there are to be a number of original dishes introduced during the show. The tea room is in the balcony and is open to the public. On each day one member and twenty assistants will have charge. The proceeds will go to the war relief fund of the club, which has an active auxiliary of the Navy Relief society, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Frederick R. Webster. Miss Margaret H. Brown will be in charge of the tea room. Corn meal dishes will be featured at the lunchroom, as January is the month set aside by the food administration for specializing on corn recipes and the discussion of corn products.

The meeting of the Kindergarten club in the club room of the Art institute on Saturday, at 2:30 o'clock, will be given over to war service and the discussion of how to preserve and protect the nation's children. A number of committees have been appointed in furtherance of this cause, and Miss Gertrude Stone, Miss Sarah Meseroll and Miss Katherine Martin will speak.

Miss Isabella Holt

Miss Isabella Holt, representing the woman's committee of the state council, will be chairman of the day at the Coliseum Patriotic Food show on Friday.

The war activities branch of Our Lady of Sorrows club will meet in the parish hall on Friday evening.

Mrs. Benjamin Lathrop of the American Fund for French Wounded has just returned from several years' work in France and will be the guest of honor at a reception to be given for her at the Fortnightly club on Tuesday. Mrs. Lathrop will also receive her friends next Wednesday between 12 and 1 p. m. at the American Fund shop, 60 East Washington street.

A war meeting convention, the purpose of which will be to sum up the work which has been done in the state by the woman's committee, will be held Jan. 14 and 15. Samuel Insull will address the convention.

Brainerd auxiliary No. 310 of the Red Cross invites all the women of the community to join in the work. The meetings are held every Tuesday and Friday at the Brainerd school and on Monday evenings at the residence of Mrs. John A. Maxwell, 3824 Loomis street.

Every woman who has a coal pile in the basement must learn how to make it last as long as possible, according to the woman's committee of the defense council. A text book on stoking has been issued to chairmen of woman's committee units in Chicago and the state with the following plea:

Will you as chairman or member of your ward, county, or township committee give your assistance in carrying out the following program?

Consult the fuel conservator or chairman of the fuel administration of your county for the plan and coördination of the work.

Urge the use of wood and oil and other substitutes for coal wherever it is possible.

Help to enforce the government order to keep temperature in homes at 70 degrees Fahrenheit or less.

Help to enforce the government order in regard to economy in use of electric lights, both indoors and outdoors. Coöperate with the fuel conservator in helping to enforce lightless Thursdays and Sundays.

Assist in making a success of "tag your shovel" day on Jan. 30.

The tag day referred to will require that every shovel be tagged by some school child with the hints on fuel conservation issued by the state board.

In preparation for such of our soldiers as may be sent back blind from the battle front, Miss Marjorie Harvey, daughter of Mrs. Alfred T. Martin, is working with the woman's committee towards some sort of constructive work for their benefit. The plan being discussed is for a shop similar to one on Boylston street in Boston, where work made by the blind is offered for sale. Miss Harvey volunteers to teach not only the blind but to instruct teachers in Braille, typewriting, weaving, pottery, basketry, willow ware and broom-making.

Mrs. William P. Nelson of the knitting department of the Chicago chapter urges more speed in the matter of knitted caps for the jackies, many of whom are suffering from frosted ears.

Coeducational's Associates to Give a Dance

ON Tuesday evening the young women associates of the West Side Coeducationl club will give their annual program and dance. Members of the association will give the program. Miss Marguerite Thjomoe, who is the leader of the associates, will give a group of songs, as will Miss May Hildrethin. Miss Evelyn Bourke will read and Miss Bertha Skallerup will dance. The program will be followed by dancing.

Miss Thjomoe, who is also chairman of the evening, will be assisted in the receiving line by Miss Mary Hildrethin, Miss Bonnie Beales, Miss Edna Rojahn, Miss M. Katherine Wise, and Miss Evelyn Bourke.

The West Side Coeducational club was founded April 13, 1906, at the home of Mrs. C. Todd Hood, who was its first president. It immediately became a member of the Illinois State Federation of Women's Clubs and in 1908 it affiliated with the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

The object of the club is "the advancement of art, the study of history, the study of literature and music, the fostering of a philanthropic spirit, and the bringing together of its members in a social manner."

In the beginning the small club met at the homes of the club members. It now has a membership of almost 300 active members, fifty young women associates, and seventy-five men associates. The meetings are held in the Illinois clubhouse, 113 South Ashland boulevard.

The departments of the club provide the different programs of the year. The literary round table, under the leadership of Mrs. A. J. O'Neill, is making a study of the literature of America, France, Italy, England, Belgium, Russia, and India. The next meeting of the round table will be held at the home of Mrs. George Rehm, 425 South Oakley avenue, on Thursday at 2 p. m. Papers will be read on "Flanders, the Battle Ground of Europe," by Mrs. Joseph Soravia, and on "Flemish Art" by Mrs. S. A. Walther. There will follow a general discussion of "Alsace-Lorraine."

The music study class, directed by Mrs. D. E. Colles, is studying the history of music and different instruments. Its programs have included the work of many noted Chicago musicians.

The philanthropy department is under the direction of Mrs. W. S. Haskell.

The Red Cross department, with Mrs. D. D. O'Keefe as chairman, has been organized since the entrance of the United States into the conflict and has made many surgical dressings, hospital garments, and knitted articles, which have been turned in to the Chicago Red Cross.

Mrs. John Bohr heads the department which aids the Illinois Improvement Association for the Blind.

The young women associates meet once a month at the homes of the members. The men associates, with Nils Nilsson as head, give one entertainment a year for the entire club membership.

The club is preparing a service flag, with the first star for Maj. George C. Amerson, the husband of the president, who has gone to Texas to be with him. The club is therefore in charge of the first vice president, Mrs. Jeremiah Hallissy. The other officers are: Mrs. C. P. Wise, second vice president; Mrs. A. C. Roos, recording secretary; Mrs. John E. Connelly, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. L. E. Miley, treasurer. The directors include Mrs. A. L. Baldwin, Mrs. D. E. Colles, Mrs. W. S. Haskell, Mrs. A. E. Hedstrom, Mrs. Estelle M. Kinney, Mrs. Robert McGuire, Mrs. A. J. O'Neill, Mrs. G. J. Rehm, Mrs. Joseph Soravia, and Mrs. George T. Travis.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS.

There will be a business meeting of the Chicago Woman's club on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in Recital hall. Herbert L. Willett Jr., field secretary of the Chicago committee for Armenian and Syrian relief, will speak on "Turkey in War Time," and reports will be given by chairmen of the various committees in the corrective institutions group of the club. Tomorrow afternoon at 2:15 the study class in modern philosophy will meet to hear Dr. Reginald I. Raymond speak on the influence of tradition. On Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock the board of managers will meet. On Wednesday morning at 10:30 Mrs. Charles F. Millspaugh will speak before the literary study class on "American Humor." On Thursday morning at 10:30 the English study class will meet. On Friday morning at the same hour there will be a joint meeting of the music study class and the drama study class. "The Opera of Monna Vanna" will be the subject of the meeting. On Saturday at 12 o'clock the education department will have a luncheon and business meeting. Andrew McLaughlin of the University of Chicago will speak on "Training for Citizenship." The first regular Sunday open door meeting will be held next Sunday at 3 o'clock. A musical play will be given. Miss Mari Ruef Hofer is in charge of the program.

The board of directors of the Woman's City club will meet at the clubrooms tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. This is an open meeting to which all members of the club are invited. Prof. Frederick D. Bramhall of the University of Chicago will address the Tuesday morning citizenship class on Tuesday at 11 a. m. at the clubrooms. His subject will be "The Substance of Democracy."

News of the Religious World

Universalists Dedicate New Church Today

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE St. Paul's Universalist church, one of the oldest religious organizations in Chicago, will dedicate today at 11 o'clock its new community hall at Dorchester avenue and the Midway. The community hall is the first of four buildings which are to be erected, including a church building and the Ryder divinity house, which will house the Universalist theological school, in affiliation with the University of Chicago.

Because nearly every denomination has a St. Paul's church, and in recognition of the new location, the new church is to be known as St. Paul's by the Midway. The last location occupied by the congregation was the church at Prairie avenue and Thirtieth street, which was vacated last Sunday and will henceforth be known as the Trinity Methodist Episcopal church.

The ceremony today will be twofold, the reception into the St. Paul's membership of the members of the Woodlawn Universalist church, formerly at Kimbark avenue and Sixty-fourth street, and the dedication. The Woodlawn building, known also as Ryder Memorial chapel, has been sold to the Nazarene denomination. The Rev. F. W. Millar, former pastor of the Woodlawn church, and Don Pennywik, president of the board of the Woodlawn trustees, will speak in behalf of the Woodlawn membership and Prof. L. B. Fisher, dean of the Ryder Divinity school, will extend the welcome of St. Paul's to the new members.

At the dedication ceremony Charles Hodgson, architect of the new building, will present the keys. The pastor of St. Paul's, the Rev. L. W. Brigham, D.D., will make the response after the keys have been accepted in behalf of the church by F. A. Nichols. The Sunday school will be held at 9:30.

The St. Paul's Universalist congregation was organized in June, 1836. Its first building was erected in 1844 in Washington street near Clark street. In 1857 another church was built at Van Buren street and Wabash avenue. This was destroyed by the fire of 1871, when a new building was erected in 1872 in Wabash avenue south of Sixteenth street. This building was sold to Dr. Alexander Dowie and in 1888 the building at Prairie avenue and Thirtieth street was erected at a cost of $200,000. The foundations for the three additional buildings are all laid.

The La Salle Avenue Baptist church has organized three companies, A, B, and C, who are devoting one hour one evening each week in cleaning and renovating the church building. The young women are arranging the pastor's study for a guild room.

Bishop W. A. Quayle of St. Louis, formerly of Chicago, will speak next Friday evening in the Cuyler Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, Oak Park, on the subject, "Abraham Lincoln, the First American."

The annual meeting of the Methodist Old People's home, 1515 Foster avenue, will be held next Wednesday beginning at 10:45 a. m.

A fund of $500,000 for war purposes is expected from the Protestant Episcopal churches of the nation by a simultaneous offering on Jan. 27.

Bishop Edmund M. Dunne

The Rt. Rev. Edmund M. Dunne, bishop of the Peoria diocese of the Roman Catholic church, will preach this evening in the Holy Name cathedral, Superior and North State streets, on the occasion of the annual feast of the Holy Name of Jesus. The services, which begin at 8 o'clock, will consist of solemn pontificial vespers and benediction of the most blessed sacrament in the present of the Most Rev. George W. Mundelein, archbishop of Chicago. The Rt. Rev. A. J. McGavick will be celebrant. The Holy Name societies of the archdiocese will participate, and it is anticipated the cathedral will be filled. The Holy Name societies of the archdiocese have had the most active and successful year in their history.

Bishop Dunne was chancellor of the Chicago archdiocese from 1905 to 1909, when he was appointed to the diocese of Peoria, as the successor of the late Bishop John L. Spalding. Bishop Dunne was born in Chicago, educated at the Moseley public school and St. Ignatius college. Later he attended Niagara university and the University of Louvain, Belgium. He finished his collegiate training at the Gregorian university, Rome, Italy. He studied also in France. The rest of his ministry was spent in Chicago, where, because of his fluency in several languages, he labored with special success among various nationalities.

The program of the Y. M. C. A. branches today is: Wilson Avenue, L. Wilbur Messer, "How We May Win the War," 4 p. m.; Division Street, the Rev. W. H. Huber, 3:45; North Avenue-Larrabee, F. J. Hocking, "Aviation Camp Experiences," 2:30 p. m.; Wabash Avenue, colored, the Rev. Franklin Bray, formerly of the Eighth regiment, 9:30 a. m., and L. L. Stone, afternoon; West Side, Serjt. H. Baldwin, Fifth Canadian infantry; Hyde Park, Dr. H. L. Willett, "America and the World Crisis"; Hotel, K. A. Shumaker, a. m.; the Rev. Roy L. Smith, 4:30 p. m.

A series of meetings will attend the inauguration of the Rev. L. F. W. Lesemann, D. D., as president of the Chicago Training School for City, Home, and Foreign Missions, Fiftieth street and Indiana avenue. Next Thursday evening the Epworth leagues of Chicago will hold a rally, addressed by the Rev. Charles E. Guthrie, the newly elected acting general secretary of the young people's organization of the Methodist Episcopal church. Friday will be woman's day. Mrs. W. F. Thirkield, New Orleans; Mrs. Lena Leonard Fisher, Cleveland; Miss Isabelle Horton, and Dr. Wallace McMullen, New York. Saturday night the Rev. Frank L. Anderson and others will speak. Next Sunday, 4 p. m., Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus; Monday, ministers' meeting, 10:30 a. m., inauguration 2:30 p. m., and banquet 6 p. m.

The speakers at the ministers' meeting will be Dean Shailer Mathews, University of Chicago, and Dr. Abram Harris, former president of Northwestern university. The inauguration speakers will be Bishop Thomas Nicholson, Bishop M. S. Hughes, Mrs. Lucy Rider Meyer, and Dr. Lesemann.

As the result of an every member canvass the St. Chrysostom's Protestant Episcopal church, 1424 Dearborn parkway, has raised for parish support $6,700 and for missions $3,700, an increase over last year of $3,000 for parish support and $1,600 for missions. The number of pledges for missions was doubled.

Improvements on the Sixth United Presbyterian church, Woodlawn avenue and Sixty-second street, have been completed. A fund of $2,500 was raised by the church to pay indebtedness and the cost of the improvements.

The Rev. Ingram E. Bill has resigned from the pastorate of the Parkside Baptist church and accepted a call to the First Baptist church at Beloit, Wis. He will begin his new pastorate today. Jan. 6.

The Rev. Samuel J. Skevington, pastor of the Belden Avenue Baptist church, will leave next Tuesday night for two months of service at Camp Logan, Houston, Tex. Other Chicago Baptist ministers doing similar service are the Rev. William H. Main, First church, at Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill., and the Rev. Floyd I. Beckwith, Tabernacle church, at Camp Dodge, Des Moines, Ia. The Rev. George W. Taft, dean of the Northern Baptist Theological seminary, will supply Dr. Skevington's pulpit during his absence.

Miss Margaret Williams, daughter of C. M. Williams of the Lake View Presbyterian church, Broadway and Addison street, will speak at 7:30 this evening on her experiences at Camp Custer, near Battle Creek, Mich., where she was secretary of the Young Woman's Christian association. Following her address Al Saunders of Scranton, Pa., will tell his experience as a trail hitter in the Billy Sunday campaign in Scranton. The Rev. Henry Semour Brown is pastor.

The Hyde Park Presbyterian church, Blackstone avenue and Fifty-third street, will call next week a successor to the Rev. Alexander Allison Jr., who resigned several months ago, the Rev. Jesse R. Zeigler, D. D., pastor at Indiana, Pa. It is considered certain Dr. Zeigler will accept. The church in Indiana, Pa., numbers 1,200 members and has a benevolent and current budget of more than $15,000. The Hyde Park church has more than 1,000 members.

The Rev. C. A. Nyman, pastor of the Broadway Methodist Episcopal church, Broadway and Buckingham place, will preach today at 11 o'clock on the subject, "Over the Top," and on succeeding Sundays on the subjects, "No Man's Land," "Camouflage," and "Carry On." The Rev. A. F. Clark, district superintendent, preaches this evening at 8 o'clock.

The Rev. John C. Jones, who has been pastor of the Hebron Welsh Presbyterian church, South Francisco avenue and West Adams street, for twenty-four years, resigned last week and left Thursday for Oak Hill, O., where he said he would remain three months. An effort is to be made on the part of the congregation to induce him to change his mind and continue his pastorate. Dr. Jones was released by his congregation in 1914 to raise $100,000 for mission work in the denomination. Other pastors will supply the church in his absence, as the members refuse to consider his resignation final.

The Welsh Hebron church has an organization, the Sons of David, organized expressly to raise money "to back up the Chicago Welsh boys at the front." The church has 47 men in the army and 7 in the navy, 54 in all. The slogan adopted is, "We who can't go across can 'come across.'"

Billy Sunday was interviewed while in Chicago last week by Bishop W. S. Lewis of the Methodist Episcopal church, China, and urged to accept an invitation which had been cabled him from a joint committee in China. Mr. Sunday said he was afraid he would have to change his vocabulary if he should go. Bishop Lewis assured him he would be welcome just as he is in America. Mr. Sunday said he wouldn't cancel his Chicago engagement next March even for China. He will begin his campaign in Washington, D. C., next Sunday and continue until March 3. He will begin his meetings in Chicago March 10.

The Rev. E. L. House will speak today at 3 p. m. in the Second Presbyterian church, Evanston, on "The Psychology of he Boy and Girl," and at 8 p. m. in the Hemenway Methodist Episcopal church on "Life as a Masterpiece." Three churches are uniting in the meetings. Dr. House is thus described in the announcements: "He is Bryan's equal as an orator and has a greater message."

St. Stephen's Methodist Episcopal church, One Hundred and Thirteenth and State streets, will have a go-to-church Sunday today. Automobiles will be provided for the aged and for shut-ins. Former members are invited. At the morning service the sermon will be preached by the Rev. Prof. W. J. Davidson of Evanston. The pastor, the Rev. R. N. Miller, will be in charge.

The Calvary Protestant Episcopal church, Kedzie avenue, near Monroe street, is fifty years old today. The rector, the Rev. H. R. Neely, will make reference to the event at the morning service, but will defer preaching a historical sermon until a later Sunday. The Rev. Luther Pardee, dean of the Northwestern deanery, was a former and well known rector.

The Pilgrim Congregational church, Sixty-fourth street and Harvard avenue, has divided the church constituency into red and blue sides for a thirteen weeks' contest in church attendance, the losing side to banquet the winners.

The annual midwinter ball and card party of the Canterbury club will be held on Friday evening, Jan. 25, at 8:30 o'clock at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Mrs. A. M. Flanagan is president of the club.

Members of the Junior league, who are now giving amateur plays and dances in settlements and other places for the benefit of their charities, are planning to take their "troupe" to Joliet, where they will play in the woman's prison. They are also planning to take their play to a number of institutions and old people's homes. Miss Sylvia Shaw has been rehearsing the players.

Lieut. W. De Courcey O'Grady of the eighth battalion, "Little Black Devils" of Canada, is to speak at the South Shore Country club tonight on his experiences. He was wounded and captured by the enemy and sent to many German prison camps until recently exchanged for a Prussian officer. This will start a week full of activity at the club, the bridge tournament being resumed tomorrow afternoon, a patriotic night on the program for Tuesday, and the regular Thursday and Saturday dances with an augmented orchestra. The Red Cross classes in the old Casino are busier than ever trying to meet the Red Cross supplies, and the leaders are anxious to have more help.

The women's auxiliary to Chicago lodge No. 4, B. P. O. E., will hold a hard times party at the new clubhouse at 174 West Washington street on Saturday. Mrs. William J. McDonald is in charge of the dancing and will be assisted by Mrs. Jack Rothschild and others. The proceeds are to go toward the philanthropic fund.

"Candida," by George Bernard Shaw, will be given at the Blackstone theater this evening at 8:15 o'clock by the Players' club of the Chicago Hebrew institute. Songs by members of the Chicago Grand Opera company will be on the program. Judge Hugo Pam is president of the club and Mrs. Hulda B. Morris is vice president. Miss Bertha A. NEW YORK SOCIETY.

By Mme. X.

New Year Greeted by a New Spirit, Sane and Serious

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—New Year's has come and gone, and with it has come and remained one little message of cheer. This year the birth of a new period of time was not so insanely celebrated as in the past and prediction is being made that it will never be celebrated again in the old spirit on this planet. People, including New Yorkers, are getting a little sense and a little sensitiveness. They say they think the celebrations of the past have not always been in good taste!

This year, to be sure, the wine which flowed during the evening, if turned into a stream, would probably have equaled the width, depth, and fullness of Sugar creek, Indiana. But from church chimes and cabaret orchestras, from the pulpits where they had prayers on the midnight program and the restaurants where they had lobster à la Newburg, one anthem was heard. Chimes and cabarets, choir boys, and sinners sang "The Star Spangled Banner." It set one's thoughts on serious things and that is where one's thoughts belong these days.

Some Quiet Celebrating.

In smart circles there was some quiet celebrating. Col. Cornelius Vanderbilt got his leave that he was rather expecting for New Year's and was able to act as host at the small house warming which he and his wife gave in honor of their son and daughter, young Private Cornelius and Miss Grace. The youthful guests came at 9 o'clock, danced until midnight, watched the new year in, and enjoyed a simple supper. That was all there was to it.

Another party, which Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs was to give for one of the Vanderbilt girls, her niece, Miss Muriel, daughter of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt Jr., was postponed.

Mrs. Benjamin Guinness gave an entertainment at her residence in Washington square which furnished merriment to old and young. It was a dramatic entertainment consisting of three one act plays in which the characters were depicted by the three children of Mr. and Mrs. Guinness.

Unlike Last Year.

How very different this all reads from my chronicles of this period of last year!

It began with a big ball by Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt at their former home in Fifth avenue. Debutante affairs were then in full swing. Big charity fêtes were commanding the dollars and the attention of the smart set. Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs gave a brilliant theatrical entertainment in her ballroom.

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor were just about to give their ball for Mrs. Astor's debutante sister, Miss Alice Huntington. Shortly after this young girl became the bride of Charles H. Marshall Jr. Now she is in Fort Worth, Tex., with her soldier husband, and the Astor residence in Fifth avenue, a year ago the scene of so much gay happiness, is dark in the evenings now. Its owner is somewhere off the coast of France, serving as an ensign in the American navy, and his wife is over there working with the Y. M. C. A.

Celebrate in the Country.

As for the celebrations in our rich suburbs this New Year's, the country clubs were open for family gatherings. Tuxedo, Piping Rock, Ardsley, and Sleepy Hollow entertained informal neighborhood assemblies. It was like the quiet evening celebrations in country villages, so little of the metropolitan and dash and flash of worldliness garnished the scenes. Many of the heads of prominent families of these settlements are down in Washington holding dollar jobs with their government.

An entertainment was given at Lenox which was notable from at least one point of view. Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt was the hostess. It is the first time she has come out in this capacity since the death of her husband on the Lusitania two years ago. She gave a dinner to thirty guests at the Lenox club. It was garnished with greens in honor of the fête and the season. A bonfire thirty feet high lit the lawn. After dinner there was some dancing. But the entertainment was furnished by a theatrical company which Mrs. Vanderbilt brought out from New York for the occasion. On New Year's day Mrs. Vanderbilt closed her big house at Lenox on account of the shortage of coal. She has come to New York for a few days and will presently go south.

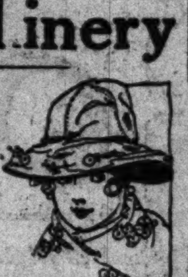
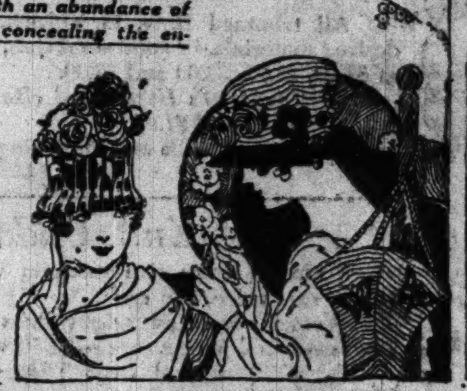
Glorious New Spring Millinery

Second Floor—State Street



Unique and beautiful aptly describe this group of 1,000 advance spring hats, mainly because the styles are so vastly different from any heretofore shown, and then again, "spring" breathes from every deft touch of the trimmings and the harmonious colorings. You'll quickly note that they are all exclusive models, one of their strong features being the rich Oriental colors, such as Asia blue, Chinese gold and Nippon green.

You'll find picturesque affairs for afternoon wear, saucy small high effects for street wear, with an abundance of flowers at the top, bottom or nearly concealing the entire hat.



Ribbons are also used in a brand new effect that is charming and alluring. The knitting vogue has suggested among patriotic women the combination of hat and knitting bag to match—one style illustrated. The hats include combinations of georgette and straw, satin and straw, velvet and straw. No two alike, many with novelty bags or collars to match. It's the kind of millinery one loves to think of as the winter styles begin to grow too familiar; choice at

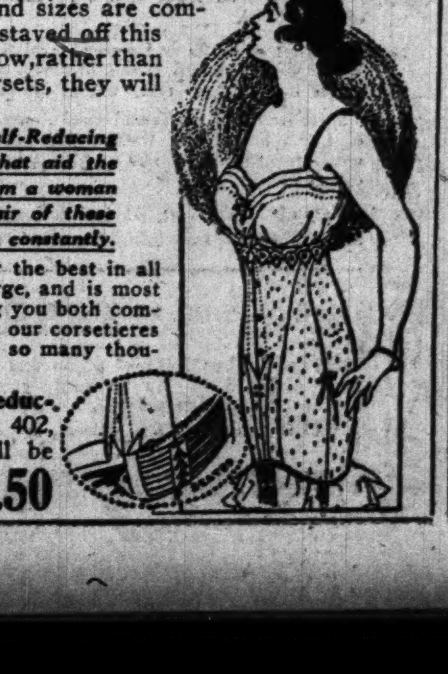
Before "Nemo" Prices Advance

Third Floor—Center



Every woman who wears the Nemo Wonderlift or Nemo Self-Reducing Corset—the two styles which are to advance in price—should choose one or more pairs here, while varieties and sizes are complete. The makers of Nemo corsets have staved off this advance in price since the war began, but now, rather than in any way impair the quality of Nemo corsets, they will very shortly advance prices.

The Nemo Wonderlift and the Nemo Self-Reducing corsets have so many exclusive features that aid the wearer in so many ways that there is seldom a woman who has once been properly fitted to a pair of these corsets who does not continue to wear them constantly.

The fitting service here, conceded to be by far the best in all Chicago, is offered you without additional charge, and is most vital, for only a properly fitted corset can bring you both comfort and the fashionable figure lines. If you let our corsetieres fit you, you will appreciate the service, just as so many thousands already do.

The Nemo Wonderlift, Nos. 553, 554, 555, 556, 557 and 558, will be $6.00, now, at only......... 5.00

The Nemo Self-Reducing corset, Nos. 402, 403 and 405, will be $5.00, now, at only......... 4.50

ASTRONOMY

KEPLER AND HIS LAWS.

JOHN KEPLER [1571-1630] discovered the laws of planetary motion. He was born in Germany. When young he was attracted to Tycho Brahe by the brilliant work of the latter in astronomy. When Tycho died, he left to Kepler his library as well as his office as astronomer to the king of Bohemia.

Kepler was not a brilliant thinker; his reasoning was often vague, but he was an excellent mathematician, and he persevered in caluculations where others would have given up. The orderly procession of the heavenly bodies, each of which, after a certain time, returns to the same place in the sky, had always aroused much wonder in his mind. Their motions are so constant that it seemed certain to him that some great law must underlie all their wanderings.

Ptolemy, Copernicus, and Tycho had each advanced theories to explain the motions of the sun, moon, and planets. Kepler studied each of them with much care and found that after all they were but theories, and only stated the probabilities as each man saw them. That which was lacking in each one to make it final was an absolute accordance of fact and theory, as rigorous and exact as possible.

Tycho Brahe's observations were then the most complete in the world. Kepler knew his old teacher well and trusted his ability. Any great law which would be devised must accord with these facts already ascertained. Kepler selected Mars as the planet of his special study. First he tried the old crystal globe-epicycle system of Ptolemy. It would not explain the facts. Then he tried various modifications, none of them satisfactory. He endeavored to find what would happen if Mars went in a circle about the sun, or in a circle with the sun out of center. His results were not in accord with Tycho. Then he began to contemplate various hypothetical orbits.

It is difficult for the average person to realize the enormous amount of labor necessary to compute a planet's orbit. It requires six months of constant calculating to prepare one system of tables.

Kepler's salary was small, and, in addition, was irregularly paid. In order to support himself and his family he had to resort to making horoscopes and telling fortunes by the stars, although he despised this pseudo-scientific practice. Once he thought he had discovered the law. The tables he made varied so slightly from Tycho's own observations that only one skilled in the art might detect the difference. But he knew that Tycho would not be in error to even that extent, and so his theory must be wrong. After nine years, and after trying and discarding nineteen imaginary orbits, he formulated these laws:

"Every planet moves in an ellipse with the sun at one focus."

"The radius vector of every planet sweeps over equal areas in equal times."

"The squares of the periods of any two planets are to each other as the cubes of their respective distances from the sun."

These laws agreed perfectly with Tycho's observations of Mars. Kepler tested them on Jupiter, Saturn, Venus, the moon, Mercury, and the earth. The accordance was complete. He had discovered the laws which govern the motion of satellite, planet, sun, and star.

For half a century these laws remained unexplained. Kepler only knew that they were demonstrable facts. Then Sir Isaac Newton showed that they were the necessary consequence of universal gravitation.

Tanks and Women Two Show Features to Pals on Leave

By Patrick MacGill.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—Ginger Gahey, D. C. M., soldier of the B. E. F., an Irishman home on leave, now on his way back to the trenches, was in London waiting for the leave train to start. But much more important than the train was the mate for whom he was waiting at Charing Cross, Spudhole Bubb, his pal, a Cockney rifleman who had left the trenches with him eight days ago.

The two men had traveled together to London, and there they separated. Spudhole went to his home off Walworth road and Gahey went away to Ballyrudden, the Irish townland in which he was proud owner of a farm, fifteen acres hill and holm, and no land to equal it in the whole country.

Now back in London, he was waiting for his mate at Charing Cross. Spudhole was not there at the appointed time. He was late in turning up and Gahey was not a patient man.

"The limb!" he muttered to himself. "What the divil's keepin' him. I suppose it will be a woman, for that is always the root iv all troubles!"

"Cheerol ye Irishman!"

The greeting came from a distance, and Gahey turned to see his mate approaching, his face flushed with pleasure, his shoulders thrown back, and his cigaret alight.

"Ye're swankin' it all right," said Gahey. "Why the divil were ye not here in time?"

As he spoke he shook hands with Spudhole, and when Spudhole drew his hand away he shook the fingers apart.

"The last time I'm goin' ter let ye get 'old o' my 'and, Gahey," he muttered. "That's unless I've got boxin' gloves on. Are yer not comin' ter see the lord mayor's show?"

"Is that what all the people's goin' to see?" Gahey inquired.

"Did yer not read the papers, then?" Spudhole said.

"If that's all I've to do on leave I might as well stop in the trenches," was Gahey's reply.

"Well, come along wiv me as far as Blackfriars bridge and see the show," Spudhole advised. "It'll soon be passin' that way."

The two men went to Blackfriars bridge, Spudhole with a cigaret between his lips and Gahey smoking a little, black clay pipe.

Sitting on the parapet of the bridge afforded a first class view point, and from there the two soldiers had a good sight of the procession.

"Jolly good show and a free un," said Spudhole, as the line of soldiers and sailors appeared, some of the former in full marching order. "And there are tanks, too, male and female, as they say. I saw them a while ago and they look rippin'. Almost put the wind up me."

"It's hard to get away from the war, no matter where ye go," said Gahey. "There's a bloomin' gun disguised as a field."

He pointed at a gun which nosed along in camouflage, or paint disguise.

"S'pose it 'as sent some dirt over our heads out there," said the retrospective Spudhole. "And look there's a lot of R. A. F. men wiv trench 'elmets on . . . and behind 'em look, a bloomin' 'owitzer. Captured from the Germans, too. Maybe it's the one as used to send the plum puddin's into our trench out't La Bassee, three weeks ago."

The squat howitzer rolled by and following it was a novel feature, the turnout of the women workers of the land army. Attired in white smocks, knickers, and puttees, they carried rakes, hoes, milking pails, and stools as they followed a lorry laden with hay.

"All that I want for me bit iv land in Ballyrudden would be one iv them," said Gahey. "With a wife from that crush I'd be the happiest man in all Ireland."

"That's more in my line," said Spudhole, as a party of munitionettes came by in their traveling workshop. "Hello, dearie!" He waved his hand to a fair damsel who responded with a smile.

"And a Gotha!" exclaimed Gahey as a captured German aeroplane came by on a lorry. "They're not as bad in a lorry as they are in the air. But look!" he exclaimed, as the tanks hove in sight, two of them nosing forward on the streets of London with the utmost apathy.

"Just as if they were out there," he said, jumping down to the street and holding his arms over his head.

"Kamerad! kamerad!" he whined mindful of the Germans whom he had more than once seen surrendering when confronted by the tanks in real warfare.

The crowd stared at Gahey and the loyal Spudhole stared at the crowd. If any one dared to say a word to Gahey! But no one spoke, which was well.

"Lord, it's good to have a sight iv them," said Gahey, turning his attention to his pipe and lighting it. "I thought this was goin' to be a lord mayor's show, but as far as I can see it's a bloomin' war museum."

"Tonight we're goin' back ter the trenches," said Spudhole, addressing all who cared to listen. "But it's a grand thing to see the show while we are 'ere."

"I'm glad to have seen the women workers," said Gahey. "It shows that it's not us that does all the work of the war."

"So you think the women are the most interesting feature of the show?" asked a woman who was standing by.

"Second to the tanks they were," said Gahey. "Those land workers are well worth seein'."

A STRANGE CHILDISH SPORT.

I view with pride each infantile achievement,
  And marvel at the wondrous things you do,
But often you occasion me bereavement
  And cause me deep humiliation, too;
I'm proud of your intelligence and beauty,
  Your locomotive powers and your vim,
But I would be deficient in my duty
  If I ignored your latest little whim.

Our house is strong for Herbie Hoover's teachings,
  But still we have a modicum of chow,
Enough for second helpings and for reachings
  And you have had your portion up till now;
You have a most abundant lactic ration
  And solid foods of all caloric types;
I ask you then for private information:
  Why do you dote on pop's informal snipes?

Collecting snipes is not a noble calling,
  The lowly butts no secret treasures yield;
Your predilection, child, is most appalling—
  It shows a fancy wandering far afield;
Desist, I pray, or else your flair dissemble,
  The wicked weed is bad for baby's pipes.
Find newer games that will not make me tremble,
  Find keener sport than shooting papa's snipes.

OUCH! BACKACHE! RUB LUMBAGO OR STIFFNESS AWAY

Rub pain from back with small trial bottle of old "St. Jacobs Oil."

When your back is sore and lame or lumbago, sciatica or pain has you stiffened up, don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle of old, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub it right on your aching back, and by the time you count fifty, the soreness and lameness is gone.

Don't stay crippled! This soothing, penetrating oil needs to be used only once. It takes the pain right out and ends the misery. It is magical, yet absolutely harmless and doesn't burn the skin.—Advertisement

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

JANUARY

UNCERTAINTY gives way to sustained brilliance, the brilliance of days of snow fields blinding in the radiance of the sun, of nights steel cold with the sparkle of Sirius and the great winter suns.

The moods which flashed in December from brown to white, from white to brown, from soft winds to northern blasts, from frozen ground to melting drifts, have been resolved into one mood, that of fixed and continuing frigidity, an established condition in which a variant will seem abnormal.

January has this fixity, this permanent character in experience and prospect. Winter has established itself beyond challenge, to be endured by the impatient, but enjoyed by the lover of sharp contrasts, of luxuries, of simple sensations.

The white narcissus is the indoor life blossoming for contrast to the snow drifts outside. January is a cold hand at the door. To keep it closed is an effort which brings the sensation of increased comfort, a luxury of simple sensation.

M'VICKER'S.

Clarence Wilbur: Well, this is a funny world. Over in Paris you can buy a monthly commutation ticket to ride on the trolley cars, but your photograph has to appear on the ticket. But I think it must be tough for a fellow to get his face punched every time he rides. It's only a question of time when he'll land in the hospital.

I remember one time out in San Francisco there was a Scotchman in a hospital. There were eleven other patients in the same ward and the poor chap was not expected to recover. When the news was broken to him that there was no hope he expressed a desire to hear the bagpipes played once more before he died. The kind hearted house surgeon sent out for a piper and asked him to walk up and down the ward, playing Scotch airs on his instrument. The next day the house surgeon asked the head nurse how the Scotchman was. "Oh, he's all right again," said the nurse, "but all the other eleven patients are dead."

At one time I was a patient in that hospital myself. But when I saw the label on the bottle of medicine they wanted to give me, I flew the coop. The directions read, "Give patient a tablespoon and repeat dose after one hour—if still alive."

But talking of strange adventures: Last night I dreamt that George M. Cohan offered me a pass for his show. He said, "Will you go to the matinee just about to start, or will you wait for the evening performance?" I said, "I'll wait for the evening performance." And while I was waiting I woke up. I'm sorry now I didn't go to the matinee. I'm quite a matinee favorite myself. I'm getting mash notes all the time.

ART by Louise James Bargelt

Noted Artists on List at Exhibit of Institute Alumni

On Tuesday there will be an important event in the history of the Art institute. For the first time in one exhibit there will be a varied output of those artists who have been students in the school during some time of its existence, beginning thirty-nine years ago.

Many distinguished names may be found in the list of exhibitors. There is George Grey Barnard, the sculptor of the much discussed Lincoln statue; Jules Guerin, the designer of the color scheme of the Panama-Pacific exposition; Arthur B. Davies, the painter; Albert Sterner, Orson Lowell, Franklin Booth, and the Leyendeckers among the illustrators. In addition to these and many others well known there are a large number who have become famous in architecture and in design.

This exhibit will probably be quite a surprise to the public at large, for few people after all realize how large a part the work of artists plays in ordinary articles of commerce. There will be at least four rooms fitted out with suites of handsome furniture, some of these being furniture de luxe, and others being the substantial articles of regular trade, but all designed by men and women who have been trained in the school of the Art institute.

Besides this it is instructive to know that the low and inconspicuous section of the Art institute building houses the largest school of art in the United States and what is now probably the largest in the world.

A brief survey of the art conditions in the world at the start of this year 1918 shows no decided change over the last three years except that prospects are perhaps more vague and indefinite than before. Still, in the eyes of optimists, there is much ground for hope in the renewed activities of France and England.

In 1914 the art treasures of Paris, and London, and Venice, and Antwerp were hurriedly embedded in sandbags, hidden in cellars, buried deep in the earth. There they still remain. Public exhibitions of art have practically ceased in Paris. There have been few sales since 1914. In London the royal academy exhibitions have continuously coninued, but the sketches and illustrations and pictures of war have crowded purely artistic productions from the foreground of public attention. On the walls of the National gallery second rate pictures are hanging, paintings of comparative unimportance, especially at a time like this.

Recently, however, in both Paris and London, private and public art auctions have brought high prices. Large fortunes have been made by men hitherto unable to spend money on art of any sort, and this newly rich element is spending money generously in cultivating its tastes and acquiring art treasures.

In America art conditions are still about normal. Indeed they might even be considered above normal, for the highest price ever received for a portrait will be paid to John Singer Sargent by the executors of Sir Hugh Lane for the portrait of President Wilson for the city of Dublin.

It was a Frenchman, Anatole Le Bras, distinguished in the art world, who recently said, "It is wrong to say that art should be put aside while we are fighting. The fight with the gun and the sword must be made. But there are other great battles to be fought out, and of these others the greatest is the fight for beauty." And since art's real aim is to beautify existence, all that it can do this coming years in the way of alleviating and brightening, even in a small way, the gloom of the stricken globe, should be gratefully, sincerely, eagerly appreciated.

Several interesting movements are under way for the encouragement of patriotism among artists and the artists' public. One of the most recent is by the National Arts club. It intends to hold an exhibition in the early spring of a group of painters whose subjects must record some phase of the war. Artists all over the country are asked to submit work, though this work must first be passed on by a local jury before it can be received in New York. A prize of $1,500 is to be awarded to the best work, and other smaller prizes will be given. E. H. Blashfield is chairman of the undertaking.

Worthy of comment is the act of the British government in commissioning four women artists to carry out the work of painting records of the war at the front. Over half a hundred men are employed, but up to this time no women have been given commissions. The work consists of painting scenes in the training camps, in the munition centers, and in the Red Cross hospitals.

Should it happen that the art of horology has ever proved fascinating to you, if you have ever gone a mile out of your way to note the odd combination of a certain watch's wheels and springs, if a watch that plays a soft tune each quarter of a passing hour, or one that winds whenever a hunting case springs open, possesses for you a fascination all its own, then feast your eyes on an entire exhibit of watches now in Gunsaulus hall, Art institute. The display belongs to Maj. Paul Chamberlain, now in the United States service in the east. For a good many years he has been collecting pieces of horological interest, and his display contains many novelties of bizarre interest.

Beginning the last week of this month and lasting till the middle of February is the Painter-Gravers exhibit of prints at the institute. The names promised us are familiar. From reports of the New York papers, the exhibit is now being held in New York, and the display is of unusual excellence. This is only the second year, too, of the organization's existence, and it is being hailed with enthusiasm by its viewers.

You will see work by George Bellows and Mahonri Young, and Childe Hassam. And then besides Henson and Higgins and Levy and Meyers. Miss Anne Goldthwait has a series of church prints which are attracting much comment. So is Sloan's "Conspirators" and Mielatz's "Bride of the Sea," a huge warship, and Mielziner's "General Pershing."

In gallery 16 of the Art institute there is the beginning of a real children's corner. Mrs. John Buckingham, president of the Public School Art society, was the instigator of this corner, making it possible by the gift of $50. Some dolls have been contributed by outside individuals and the institute, pending an adequate supply of furnishings and objects of display, has loaned some statuettes. An excellent start has been made this new year towards a long coveted corner "for children only," and there is every indication for speedy completion of the necessary furnishings.

Commencing tomorrow, the Arts club will have on exhibit a display of seventeenth and eighteenth century furniture and decorative arts. These pieces are French, English, and a few of Venetian lacquer, and are drawn from the finest private collections in the city. It is claimed for this exhibit that no such collection has ever been held in the country before, and the general quality of it is high. There are to be many pieces from well known private collections, all excellently and artistically arranged.

STABILITY AND STANCHNESS IN DEMOCRACY.

The now dominant Russian revolutionists are rebels against organized democracy. The most destructive revolts are not revolts against autocracy but against democracy; impatient, violent, inconsiderate attempts to knock down the democratic scheme as it has been proved workable.

Democracy has a worse enemy within than it can find without. Russia is proving that. As an autocracy Russia was helping the democratic cause. Now it is about to release German and Austrian prisoners of war, turn them loose upon the democratic armies, release German and Austrian ships, give Germany and her allies the benefits of Russian resources, and contribute to the difficulty of establishing democratic security.

This new force released against democracy is an enemy which democracy has in itself. In Russia it has the upper hand. In the United States, in Great Britain and France stability has been proved, and this successful testing of the composition of these democratic national organizations is not less important than the successful resistance of predatory autocracy in the field.

British labor has given its indorsement of British war purposes and has declared its stanchness in the British cause. Labor generally is opposed to war as a national enterprise. The labor suspicion is that such an enterprise is a capitalistic diversion. The real war is a continuing domestic one for the proper distribution of the results of work. A war between nations is a diversion of activity from the war in the nation.

There is in or about the edge of labor organizations a great deal of violent opinion against the slow and awkward progress of democracy in doing effective things for the great numbers of people controlled by it. The scheme seems hopelessly faulty, and correction seems to require merely a shattering of inertia and an assertion of power.

The compromises of democracy, the inequalities it permits, the privileges it offers or withholds, seem to be necessary only because of shackles easily removed by the people themselves if they would merely make an effort when they have the opportunity.

A war described with ardor and unction as a war between democracy and autocracy impels in democracy an examination of democracy itself. What is found is autocracy growing by necessity. The German idea of state socialism is forced on the people fighting Germany.

The commandeering processes of the United States are overriding individual and corporation rights and privileges. The individual, what he has and what he may do, is being absorbed. He has no property which he may withhold. He has no power which he may refrain from using.

The temptation, it being thus demonstrated what the state may do, is to seize the state and make it perform these services not in an effort against another nation but in an effort for its own citizens. Where there is no stability in patience and forbearance and no restraint or correct judgments prevailing, the Russian situation will be found.

The lure of impossible things—impossible good and impossible benevolence—is a destructive temptation in a disturbed democracy. A radical revolution against a democratic government frequently is a more terrible thing than a democratic revolution against an autocratic government. The democratic revolt against French monarchy was orderly. The wild revolt against French democracy was horrible and gave the Terror. The French commune was another terror, and it was revolt against democracy. Russian disorder did not grow out of the attempt to substitute a constituent assembly for an absolute monarchy but out of the attempt to carry democracy to its theoretical maximum—to its dead level of human equality.

The stable democracies have a consciousness of the futility, the inevitable destructiveness, the waste and terror of these efforts to attain perfection. They accept their compromises, no matter how little they like them, and do not break down the scheme merely because it is slow and awkward.

The dangers in the democracies fighting Germany were not all on the outside. Germany was not the greatest of them. Russia met a worse than German danger, and it came from within.

If the great democracies had been subjected in their emergencies to the revolt against democracy, their ruin would have been assured. Americans and British never have had experience with a powerful revolt against democracy, but they never were subjected to such pressure as they are withstanding now or are about to withstand. The French have had experience, but are not repeating it.

We are entitled to the optimistic consideration of the fact that democracy is not only proving its power of resistance against an alien enemy but is proving its stability against the more terrible enemy within itself.

THE CIVIL WAR AND THIS WAR.

The democracy of England earned some of the support which the democracy of America will give it this year. If it had not been for the stratum of stubborn altruism in a class of English workmen, led by a great democrat, John Bright, two nations might exist where one now does in the domain of this republic.

The "might exist" is faint in our ideas, such is our belief in the destiny of the United States, but the self-sacrificing service to democracy of the mill workers of England remains as a complete service regardless of the possibilities or probabilities involved in their attitude.

The aristocratic government of Great Britain aided the south in the civil war, but the democracy of Great Britain, the democracy which has won its fight in Great Britain and now is fighting German autocracy, suffered rather than submit to the violation of principle.

In France Louis Napoleon wanted to recognize and aid the confederacy. Napoleon would have done so if Britain had joined him, and aristocratic Britain wanted to do so, to sever the American union, to create two jarring republics with a hostile frontier in the place of a unified nation.

English manufacturers would have liked an independent south hostile to the protective policy. It would be a better market for English goods. The Lancaster mill worker, although suffering from the cotton famine and the closing of mills, was the representative of English democracy. He endured actual privation and want rather than submit to the violation of a principle of liberty.

If clamor had gone up from the English workman Great Britain might have joined Napoleon—with what results we do not know, but with the possible result of two governments here. English democracy was true then and the American democracy is both strong and true now.

THE CONDITIONS OF PEACE.

Whether peace is at hand or some years off, it is clear that a study of the complex relations of what Mr. Lansing somewhat gingerly calls our cobelligerents and of our enemies is highly advisable. We are traveling in a maze set with diplomatic pitfalls. We are in contact, or shall be when peace terms are in discussion, with a complicated interplay of interests, forces, and ambitions. And we are new to it all, guiltless of knowledge or policy, tradition or perspective. At least we ought to acquire a considerable fund of political, commercial, and economic information to give us a footing for sane judgment. We cannot afford to go into any peace discussion with nothing more substantial than noble intentions or highly academic designs for a perfect world.

By we is meant, of course, our government, upon which we must rely for a wise exercise of what influence we possess or, after performance, acquire.

The government of Great Britain, in spite of her superior knowledge and the ripe wisdom won from the longest experience in the shaping of difficult international relations of any existing power, is said to have had a large corps at work in this field for months. What is our government doing about it?

There was announced some time ago that Col. House had been assigned to organize an investigation of this sort, and several men were named as his aids. Since then the redoubtable Col. House has been busily engaged on other missions of importance, and we hear of him moving actively, if on rubber heels, among the war machinery at Washington. Obviously, he can be giving little time or thought to his commission of investigation.

The situation seems to us unsatisfactory and even dangerous. We need not quarrel with the astonishing and unprecedented rôle Col. House is taking in our public affairs, since it is Mr. Wilson's privilege to avail himself of a tried personal friend to serve as a medium of information or as a special personal emissary. But a commission to provide a basis of informed action at the world congress of peace ought not to be made up merely of Mr. Wilson's or Col. House's personal friends, or of men of little note or mediocre ability. Even if at this time its functions are merely those of investigation, we have a right to demand that its members be specialists of standing in their respective fields of inquiry. If such a commission exists, the public, and especially congress, ought at least to know who they are and what, in a general way, they are doing.

We suggest that the senate and house committees on foreign relations take this whole subject under consideration. Without derogating from the authority or the ability of the president, it is well for them to realize that the constitution invests them with duties and responsibilities respecting our foreign relations which they cannot shirk. Mr. Wilson at times has seemed to overlook this and the committees have accepted their obscuration with a complacency which, we have no doubt, is the modest flower of their patriotism. Nevertheless, constitutional responsibilities cannot be evaded even with the best of motives, and as we travel toward peace, whether it be near or far, we approach the moment when congress, if it is to do its duty, will be required to exercise judgment and have as great need for the material to form it upon as the chief executive.

It is hardly consistent with the American system of government or with our oft asserted claims of advanced democracy that the executive should be left to act in isolated authority upon questions the determination of which will affect the republic's future and, perhaps, the interrelations of the great powers for generations. With all respect to Mr. Wilson's gifts, it seems to us that it is the duty of congress to share with him the burden of determining our international policy and directing our international influence at this critical stage of our history. It is true that Mr. Wilson is inclined to isolate himself as no other chief executive has done, but unless we are ready to accept an autocracy not the less complete for being well intentioned and, in great measure, permissive, our representatives in congress must provide in some measure the requisites of informed criticism and decision. Unless this is done the fateful terms upon which peace is to be made and, as we hope, maintained, must be left entirely to one man, aided, perhaps, by some agents unknown to the public and moving dimly in the background.

A weighty commission for the study of the problems involved in the war, and especially of those phases directly affecting our own interests, should be created and set to work without more delay.

Editorial of the Day

THE CONSCRIPTION OF CAPITAL.

[From the New York Times.]

The difference between conscription of capital and labor is illustrated by what is happening in Russia. The Bolsheviki have levied "excess profit taxes" to a total exceeding 100 per cent, but graciously collect only 90. Even the Bolsheviki see that it is necessary to leave something for the capitalists if they are to be expected to fulfill their function of providing revenue. Also the Bolsheviki are seizing the banks. They took even the trust funds of the Imperial—now the State—bank some time ago, and are now seizing the private banks, including even the branch of the National City bank of New York. In this the Bolsheviki fall below even their own grade of intelligence. If they had protected the banks even as well as the industrials they could have reaped many a harvest from them both. But by their processes they are crippling their own resources.

Mr. Stevens, the American railway commissioner to Russia, said in Tokio on Thursday that the soldiers are operating the railways at 30 per cent of their efficiency. The workers are loafing and the women are working. The farmers are hoarding three years' harvest because the Bolsheviki have made rubles worthless counters. The lesson of such incidents is the sole profit to be derived from them. They teach nothing more surely than the distinction between conscription of men and capital. A man is conscripted to be used, not to be consumed. Capital is conscripted to be consumed, not to be used. Men mostly return from wars, but tax money never is returned to those from whom it is taken. Government has no use for money but to spend it.

GEN. E. H. H. ALLENBY

OF all Great Britain's leaders in the present war, Gen. Sir Edmund Allenby is assuredly the most fortunate. For as long as history endures, his name will occupy an important place therein, as the twentieth century conqueror of Jerusalem.

Originally an Egyptian stronghold, and then the capital of the Jebusites, its first captor on record was King David. Then it was taken from King Rehoboam by the Egyptian Pharaoh Shishak. Retaken by King Jehoash of Israel, it was subsequently captured in turn by Nebuchadnezzar, Alexander the Great, Ptolemy of Egypt, the two Antiochus Kings of Syria, the Roman general, Pompey, sixty-five years before Christ; King Herod the Great; the Roman general afterwards Emperor Titus, and Constantine the Great. Then came the Persian King Chosroes, the Emperor Heraclius, in A. D. 629, and Caliph Omar, eight years later. It was emancipated from Moslem domination by the Crusaders under Godfrey de Bouillon, its first Crusader king, in 1099, was recovered near a hundred years later by Sultan Saladin of Egypt. Emperor Frederick II. of Germany obtained Jerusalem by negotiation, and had himself crowned there in March, 1229. Emir Saladin of Kerak took Jerusalem by storm ten years later, and it remained under Egyptian domination until captured by the Ottoman Turks, under Sultan Selim, in 1517.

Its next captor, after a lapse of just four centuries, is Gen. Sir Edmund Allenby, whose name must now be added in the annals of the Holy City, extending over a period of 3,000 years, to the notable list of its captors.

In view of the profound impression created throughout the Christian, the Moslem, and the Jewish worlds by its seizure, without damage to its time honored edifices and shrines, through artillery fire—considering also the military difficulties overcome—it is somewhat surprising that Sir Edmund Allenby should not have been singled out for conspicuous honor, among the distinctions bestowed by King George on the occasion of the new year.

Assuredly a peerage would have been more appropriately bestowed upon him, than upon the late William C. Whitney's English son-in-law, who, as I predicted last summer, in these letters, has just been raised to the house of lords, in recognition of his surrender of his seat in the house of commons for Cambridgeshire, to Sir Eric Geddes, who on appointment to the cabinet, as first lord of the admiralty, found himself without the requisite seat in the lower chamber of the imperial legislature.

Almeric Paget, who lost his American wife, the former Pauline Whitney, eighteen months ago, spent a number of years in the United States prior to his marriage, ranching and farming in the northwest. Afterwards he was in various enterprises in New York, and for a while president of the Chihuahua and Pacific railroad. He is a brother of Gen. Sir Arthur Paget, of the late Sydney Paget, both married to American women, and of Lady Colebrook, now in New York, and is probably the most popular member of the old family of Paget, which has been represented in the house of lords ever since 1553, that is to say, since the reign of Edward VI. The Marquisate of Anglesey, now borne by the head of the family, is held by a young officer serving at the front, as a captain of the Royal Horse guards, and was created in favor of the distinguished general who in the battle of Waterloo led the grand charge which is admitted to have determined the victory.

LADY RALPH PAGET.

Gen. Sir Edmund Allenby is now pushing rapidly forward toward Damascus, his advance being facilitated by his possession of the great trunk line of railroad running from the sacred city of Medina, in Arabia, northward via Damascus to Aleppo, and thence without a break through Asia Minor to the shores of the Bosporus, opposite Constantinople. By securing possession of this railroad south of Damascus Sir Edmund Allenby has safeguarded the new kingdom of Arabia from any further invasion of the Turks, and has at the same time made a long step forward toward reaching Aleppo, the junction of the branch line running thence toward Bagdad. It is at Aleppo that Sir Edmund expects to join forces with the Mesopotamian army which captured Bagdad under the late Sir Stanley Maude and which now, under the command of his successor, Gen. Sir William Marshall, is rapidly advancing in a westerly direction from Bagdad toward Aleppo.

Mention of Jerusalem reminds me that Lord Dysart, a somewhat eccentric peer, has just come out strongly in the English press against Zionism. He does not object to the return of the Jews to the Holy Land as individuals, but he vigorously opposes any idea of their return thither as a nation. In this connection he calls attention to the Book of Zechariah in the Old Testament—that is to say, in what may be described as the Jewish portion of the scriptures, and which he insists predicts the most appalling disasters for the Jews, should they return to their own land and form once more a nation without including therein their brethren of the long lost Ten Tribes of Israel.

Now nobody knows with any degree of certainty what has become of these lost tribes. According to some, they are identified with the large population of Chinese—several millions of them—who, inhabiting one of the western provinces of China, have for two thousand years past professed the Jewish faith and practiced its rites, retaining the most marked Semitic traits of character and of feature. According to others, the lost tribes found refuge in Central America and, in Peru, while still others profess to be able to trace them amongst the ancient Phoenician settlers of the Emerald Isle.

It would be a terrible task running to earth these long lost Ten Tribes of Israel, and when found, if still existent, to induce them to accompany their brethren of the other two remaining tribes back to the Holy Land.

I commend Lord Dysart's arguments to those of my readers who are careful readers and erudite students of the scriptures, merely premising that the earl, while learned, is extremely eccentric. In fact, so much so that his wife has been obliged to leave him and has a house of her own in London and a country place at St. Neots in Huntingdonshire. She is a clever woman and the first of her sex to be elected to the office of churchwarden—namely: of the parish church of Croxton, in Cambridgeshire.

Lord Dysart is not unknown in this country, which he visited some twelve years ago or so, when he excited considerable astonishment by his intimation to newspaper interviewers that he "did not care tuppence for the house of lords," and that he voiced "the sentiment of many peers when I say that I do not care tuppence whether Canada goes to the United States or remains to Great Britain."

How to Keep Well.
By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered, subject to proper limitations and where a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases. Requests for such service cannot be answered.

Dr. Evans' advice on "How to Keep Well" appears daily on the editorial page of "The Daily Tribune."

IN THE MATTER OF HEATING.

OPEN FIREPLACES—In the play, "The King," the author makes a newly rich, near statesman show his boorishness by sitting astride a chair at a party attended by three cabinet officers, their ladies, and other persons of culture in Paris. Whether the author knew it or not, sitting astride a chair is a sign that the person with the habit was brought up in a region of open fireplaces. It is only in rooms where the vicinity of the fireplace is hot and the remainder of the room is occupied by cold currents of air rushing forward that men sit astride their chairs. The statesman referred to was from such a neighborhood.

Open fire heating is wasteful because most of the heat goes up the chimney. It is poor heating because it heats only a small part of the room, and the flow of cold air needed to keep the fire supplied makes the greater part of the room uninhabitable. Even if the woman of the house attempts to sit and knit midway of a seemingly warm room, she will make use of a footstool, since she finds that after a short while the cold currents of air on the floor make her feet uncomfortable.

As a minor objection, open fireplace heating is dirty. Fine ashes settle on the furniture and hangings. In some well heated rooms a fireplace fire is kept going on the theory that it induces ventilation. I think this theory is correct and that such a fire does more good than harm. We should not forget, however, that the floors and the more remote parts of the room are very apt to be made cold by the cold air entering to supply the fireplace fire.

STOVE HEAT—Stove heat begets such habits as chewing tobacco, spitting, loafing, gossiping, as well as sitting astride chairs. Each is dependent on a quality of the heating. Tobacco chewing is done because the men can spit on the stove or in it. Loafing and gossiping, because there is a central comfort point around which men can gather, and, since they are gathered, they can and will talk. Sitting astride the chair is because one side is hot and the other is cold, and it is necessary periodically to swap sides—when the face is toasted and the back is chilled it is time to straddle the chair.

Stove heating is more economical than open fireplace heating. The heat being near the center of the room a good part of the room becomes inhabitable on a cold day. Its shortcomings are many. The fire being in the room, cold air to supply it must leak in. Stove heated rooms, therefore, always have cold floors and cold areas near the windows and the outside walls.

Stove heat is always dry heat. A large pan of water set flat on the stove top may go a good way to remedy this defect. The air near the stove is apt to go above 75 or even 80. Students become drowsy, sleepy, inattentive, and nonretentive whenever the temperature goes over 80. If with the rise in temperature the humidity falls very low, say 20, the pupils become very subject to colds, measles, sore throat, and diphtheria. Stove heat wastes coal as compared with hot air, hot water, and steam heat. Small schools, small town railroad waiting rooms, and smaller stores make use of stoves because they do not cost much to install and they do not require a great deal of care. One handy man can take care of the stove and do a lot of chores besides.

When circumstances make the use of stoves seem desirable certain modifications lessen their disadvantages. For instance, certain stoves have an air intake pipe which runs from the outside air to the fire grate of the stove. Certain makers of stoves have water evaporators near enough to the firebox to evaporate gallons of water per day and to discharge it into the air of the room. Certain makes are jacketed so that the vicinity of the stove is not too hot and the warmed air is carried to points near the windows and outside wall. Such a complicated and developed stove is in reality a miniature hot air heating system and costs less money to install than does a hot air system. Health officers can indorse such a system, though they go the limit in denouncing heating by the old fashioned wrought iron stove with its red hot firebox feeding carbon monoxide into the room while it is roasting and drying out the occupants and furniture.

GAS HEATING—Little can be said in favor of gas heating. It is convenient and cleanly and is well adapted to cooking and the heating of bathrooms and nurseries, in both of which it is desirable to run the temperature up quickly and to maintain it high for a short while. It is well adapted to the uneven weather of the fall and spring and to mild climates such as those of the far south and of the Pacific coast. On the other hand, it is expensive. Even when saving on labor is figured it is not economic. On account of the foolishly fantastic gas log arrangements for gas heating the gas escaping through some of the discharge holes always fails to ignite and escapes into the room. Owing to the fact that gas fires do not smoke gas stoves are generally not provided with chimneys or pipes. The products of combustion are discharged into the air. One of these, water, is harmless. Another, carbonic acid, is very mildly poisonous. A third, carbonic monoxide, is a deadly gas.

Gas heating is like stove and open fireplace heating in that it consumes the air in the room. Fresh cold air flows in through the cracks. Therefore, gas heated houses have cold windows, floors, and outside walls. Gas is sometimes used to heat water, steam, or air in central heating plants. It has the advantage of being cleanly and of being easily turned off and on. Against this is its high cost.

ELECTRIC HEATING—Electric heating is cleanly. It does not use up the air in the room nor does it contribute the products of combustion to the air. It is easily turned on and off or run up or down. As against this is the expense, for at prevailing prices for current to domestic and nonindustrial consumers it is expensive.

HOT AIR HEAT—Hot air heat, as compared with open fire and stove heating, is economical so far as cost of operation is concerned. The installation cost of hot air heating is somewhere between that of stove heating and that of steam heat. It is less dirty than stove heating. It is a satisfactory method, though it has certain drawbacks. The air ordinarily is very dry. This is because it is heated, but no water is added to it. Therefore, hot air heating predisposes to colds and infections generally and flowers do not thrive in it.

This defect is easily remedied by building an evaporating pan into the furnace, either over or otherwise, closely adjacent to the firebox. About the only satisfactory method of operating this water pan is to connect it with the water system and to provide an automatic feed regulated with a float valve. Since many gallons of water must be evaporated each day, filling the pan by hand is too much trouble. Water buckets and pans hung in air ducts and over registers do not evaporate enough moisture to prevent the furniture from coming apart.

Another objection to hot air heating is the difficulty in heating the rooms on the windward side of the house, and particularly those on the lower floors. Hot air heating is a satisfactory method of getting warm floors provided the intakes and exits are properly located. There is no objection to recirculation of the air provided a proper proportion of fresh air is taken in.

The greatest objection to the method is the fact that hot air heating often works poorly if there is window ventilation, and without window ventilation it is difficult to maintain healthy conditions.

HOT WATER HEAT—Heating by hot water has many advantages over any other method. The temperature of the coils is never very hot and in consequence no part of the air is ever cooked. This is a point of considerable importance. The heat "is the nicest and softest of all," though just what that means I do not know exactly. Probably most of us have a general idea as to its meaning. As compared with the fireplace, or even stove heating, it conserves fuel. However, the cost of installation is high.

A few years ago there was no satisfactory method of humidifying where heating was done by hot water. Now we know that both the Bryce and Lyon methods work, and perhaps there are others. Flowers flourish in the Bryce home all winter long and the room air is comfortable.

STEAM HEAT—Steam heating is satisfactory from the standpoint of effectiveness and fuel economy. Ordinarily the air in a steam heated room is both too hot and too dry. The first is a fault of operation, the second of method. The temperature of a steam heated room should range between 60 and 68. It should not fall below 60 during the midday hours when the head of the household is away but when the wife and children are at home and suffer. Nor should it rise to 75 or 85 in the evening and early morning. A more nearly even temperature is a matter for regulation by the operator.

The humidity can be raised by any one of several devices. The simplest are those which discharge steam from the coils into the rooms. The very simplest is a wooden wheel valve costing a few cents. Evaporation devices work if there is enough evaporating surface. Gallons of water must be evaporated if the humidity is to be materially elevated.

Steam heating uses less coal and cheaper coal than does open fire heating. It is cleaner. It heats the outside walls and windows when the radiators are placed with that end in view. It heats the floors satisfactorily if the temperature of the air is kept down. When the room temperature goes too high cold air leaks in and settles near the floor.

GOOD DANDRUFF SOLUTION.

M. F. M. writes: "Some time ago I read a little article in THE TRIBUNE suggesting a 10 per cent solution of boric acid for dandruff. [1] Would one teaspoon of boric acid to ten of water be a 10 per cent solution? If this is not correct, how can I determine a 10 per cent solution? [2] I should also like to know what the correct temperature should be in a room when people are sitting still and the correct temperature when they are moving about."

REPLY.

1. That would be about right. One ounce in 10 ounces of water would be more nearly accurate. It is not necessary to have boracic solutions of accurate percentages. Commonly plenty if added and the water takes up what it can.

2. 68 degrees F. where the occupants are quiet. 60 degrees F. where they are moving about.

BULGARIAN MILK.

An old subscriber writes: "1. Will you kindly tell how to make Bulgarian milk from Bulgarian culture, and as an article of diet. 2. What is this milk's specific value? The culture we have was originally brought from Bulgaria. It is not a powder."

REPLY.

1. The following is a good method: The milk is boiled, then cooled. The milk is put in a thermos bottle at 100 degrees F. and to this the culture is added. The flask is then closed and set aside for twenty-four hours. If this makes the product too sour for the taste the time should be shortened.

2. Bulgarian milk is an excellent food. Besides high food value it is of some service as a laxative. It is helpful in intestinal putrefaction.

HUMIDITY WITH FURNACE HEAT.

Dr. P. W. M. writes of how he got enough humidity in the air of his furnace heated house. He got a three gallon metal pan and had two holes made in the sides. One was for an inlet pipe and the other for an outlet pipe. A small pipe with a funnel on the end was soldered to the pan at the inlet opening. This pan was set in the air chamber above the firebox of the furnace. When in position the funnel was outside the furnace wall. The pan was filled through the funnel and inlet pipe.

HELP FOR JAUNDICE.

F. J. O. writes: "I am sick with jaundice since Aug. 29. My doctor told me I would be healed in six weeks. I am still in the same condition. The pain is not much, but the itching is simply awful. Please, can you help me? Advise me what to do."

REPLY.

Warm baths will give some temporary relief. Lotions containing carbolic acid, wintergreen, and chloral well diluted are also somewhat helpful so far as temporary relief of itching is concerned. But you want to do more than that. Your bile duct is partially stopped up. This may be due to cancer or other tumor or to gallstones. See a surgeon. You need a diagnosis. It may be possible to operate.

OLD RAILROAD TIES AS FUEL.

Grand Haven, Mich., Jan. 2.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Why do railroad companies burn up old ties on their right of way? In these days of fuel shortage surely poor people would be glad to have them for fuel. J. H. K.

This matter has been taken up with all the railroads in the United States. It has been found that the general practice is to give them to employés of the track department for use as fuel or to the farmers living along the right of way. As a general rule, ties taken from the track are badly decayed, permeated with gravel, most of them have been treated with chemical preservatives, and make very poor fuel. It would incur great expense to get them to people for use as fuel, necessitating train service and labor to pick them up. The cost of the labor would be greatly in excess of the value of the material as fuel. At the request of the fuel administrator the railroads are now working with the local fuel administrators in an endeavor to work out some plan whereby some of the ties will be utilized for fuel with a view of saving other classes of fuel.

AS IT IS IN BOSTON.

Chicago, Jan. 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I have just returned from a trip to Boston. Since the beginning of the war it has been rather the fashion out here to crow over New England a bit and to boast that we have given more to the country in both men and money than have the people there.

As a loyal daughter of the middle west I hope those boasts are true. But of one thing I am very certain: In the smaller sacrifices, not as showy but fully as necessary to the good of our cause, we are not ahead. In the observance of wheatless and meatless days we are indeed far behind.

In Boston two wheatless and two meatless days are observed each week, and they are truly observed.

Out here a huge majority of the people seem to consider these days a sort of joke and take the same pleasure in defying them that a child takes in breaking a rule just because it is a rule.

Tuesday sees quantities of meat exposed for sale—and sold. Wednesday sees little falling off in the sale of wheat products. One bakery in my neighborhood chooses that day to make a specialty of a certain kind of white bread!

Restaurant keepers observe the rules of the government. Why not other merchants, too?

Would it not be possible to make a law so that a grocer, or baker, or butcher asked for the forbidden food on Tuesdays and Wednesdays can truthfully answer, as does the restaurant keeper now, "I am not allowed to sell you that today"?

HATE

By Rollin Lynde Hartt

DR. ADELE PHILLIPS and her husband appear once more in the Atlantic Monthly, this time discussing "The Decline of the Berliner." They witnessed "the orgies that followed the sinking of the Lusitania." They watched "the fierce outburst of joy at the introduction of gas." They have seen women "entering the church for solace and coming forth with a sullen hatred for all mankind in their hearts." They heard "the mighty roar of acclaim which arose from the crowd when the submarine crews marched through Berlin to celebrate the resumption of Schrecklichkeit."

The Phillipses had dearly loved Berlin. They stood aghast at the spectacle of old friends now grown "like creatures of the wild, beasts of ravenous instincts," the men reverting to barbarism, "the women unsexed," a "nebulous moral turpitude befogging their mentality." Instead of the gentle, endearing Germans, lo, "a people characterized by cruelty almost maniacal in its ferocity."

Ernst Lissauer's "Hymn of Hate" (mad doggerel, so to speak) advertised to the world a mood identical with the one Adele Phillips and her husband describe. So did the less known ditty, "Germany, Hate," by Heinrich Vierordt. Sings he, "O Germany, hate! Slaughter thy foes by the millions and of their reeking corpses build a monument that shall reach the clouds. O Germany, hate! Arm thyself in steel and pierce with thy bayonet the heart of every foe. Turn our neighbors' lands into deserts. O Germany, hate! Beat in their skulls with rifle butts and with axes. These bandits are beasts of the chase, they are not men. O Germany, the time to hate has come. Strike and thrust, true and hard. Afterwards thou wilt stand erect on the ruins of the world."

A modest, pious soul is Herr Vierordt. "To those who think me too violent, I make this simple answer," says he. "It was God who enjoined me to write this work with words of power. There is still a God of force, of pride, who loves the savage onslaught. To this God, the shouts of the strong are sweeter than the moaning of old women."

CURIOUSLY, the "strong" are the only troops who yell when wounded, and there is perhaps a connection between their lack of self-control and their genius for hate. An American pathologist has traced both to beer. Drench nursing mothers in beer, give beer to tiny children, and keep an entire population continually saturated with beer, and there results a deficiency of moral stamina on the one hand, and on the other an extreme irascibility—the traits, that is to say, of supermen distinctly below the average.

It is true that Tommy Atkins tried his skill at hating for a time, but it is also true that he operated under difficulties. What came out of his mouth was not "Hate of the head and hate of the hand," but something quite harmless because incomprehensible—namely, "'Ite of the 'ead an' 'ite of the 'and." Then, too, Punch had shown him the delightful cartoon, "A Prussian Family Having Their Daily Morning Hate," and, as Dr. Johnson once remarked, "No man hates him at whom he can laugh." Meanwhile, Thomas came gradually to accept a truth set forth by Goethe's aphorism, "National hatred is peculiar. You will always find it strongest and most violent in the lowest forms of culture."

Falling in with Canadians and Frenchmen—here at home, I mean—I seem rarely to find hatred. I recall a giant Kiltie (rather large for a giant) who would report atrocities with a singularly dispassionate air of "Well, what else can you expect of German soldiers?" or perhaps more precisely of "They are obsessed, insane, and know not what they do." Now and then I thought he pitied them—coldly, to be sure, but not from mere sense of duty. One day he told how they crucified a Canadian. Almost icily he told it. If I understood him, there was no hate, only a dismal, heavy-hearted conviction that the German people must be cured of their madness. It would take years. It would cost oceans of blood. It was the sorrowfulest business ever the world set about seeing through. At another time he told how the pockets of dead Germans are found stuffed with obscene pictures.

He was a most amusing Kiltie at that point; wanted it understood that he himself was a regular devil; reminded me a little of the English comedian, Huntley, who kept declaring, "I don't mind telling YOU; I've led a fee-uh-ful life, a FEE-UH-FUL life"—which you know he hadn't. But it struck a Kiltie that going over the top—across No Man's land—to your death—with obscene pictures in your pockets was shocking bad taste, by George, and "indicated a coarseness." With that, he stopped.

THERE has been unprintable coarseness in French châteaux—as Grace Ellery Channing puts it, "everywhere a trial of filth, a thing unmistakably pathological." But do Frenchmen hate the Boches for this? Do they so much as blame them? The impressions I get from what Frenchmen say and from the look on their faces is that they think of it all as illustrating the "nebulous moral turpitude" that "befogs the German mentality." Victims of a loathsome plague, supermen are sucked down into abysses so foul that Mr. Hornaday protests, "Don't call such monsters beasts; the beasts in my zoo at Bronx park are infinitely cleaner." A Frenchman excuses poor Fritz, saying, "Why be censorious? It's his nature now."

Since our entrance into the war influences official and unofficial have been busily at work to arouse hatred against Germany in America. Said an army officer last June: "If we want the people to back this war, we must make them mad. Go learn how Germany is governed; then tell." Many a journalist undertook the thing. But it was a surprisingly impersonal wrath that came of it—hatred of a system, of a philosophy, of an idea. Nobody got hot under the collar, really, or lost a night's sleep. We merely "registered disapproval."

A few weeks later newspapers began explaining why we were at war. All manner of red rags were brandished freely—editorials, speeches, state documents. Recently Uncle Sam's fighting press agents have poured out incendiary pamphlets by the million. We take them simply as court evidence justifying our part in the war. They are, on the whole, soothing. Meanwhile a perfect storm of blood and thunder, punctuated with war-whoops, disports itself on the popular stage. Audiences applaud, but not without laughter. At Rockford, so one hears, boys are taught to roar, "Take that, you —— —— —— —— Boche!" as they run a bayonet through a dummy. The net result of such machine made hate, I imagine, is the sort of playfulness that chalks, "Damn the kaiser!" on a "Berlin special."

FROM the first, our dealers and jobbers in hate reassured themselves by saying, "Wait till the casualty lists arrive!" We waited. Casualty lists came. And hate? Not yet. We are still fighting the most amiable war on record. For genuine, whole-souled, tremendous punch and kick, consult, not what we say and feel about Germany, but what we say and feel about obstructionists at Washington.

Strange! For this is at bottom a war of revenge. It is at the same time a war of liberation, that the world may be made safe, and a war of conquest, that America may win by force of arms her great desire, a place of honor among those to whom honor is due; but fundamentally there were old scores demanding settlement and new scores arising daily.

Look at them—the Lusitania and a considerable fleet of American vessels sent ruthlessly to destruction; Americans, including women and children and downy-headed babes in arms, slain by the hundred; our territory used as a base for an armed expedition sent out against India while we were at peace both with Britain and with Germany; international law, on which rested our security, torn to rags and tatters; strikes, dissensions, and treason itself fomented in America by the accredited diplomatic representatives of a soi-disant friendly power; plans arranged for a division of American soil between Mexico and Japan; finally, a hostile foreign prince telling us we might sail one ship at stated intervals to a designated port if we painted her like a demented barber pole!

Seldom has a proud and virile nation endured such injuries and insults with half the patience we displayed. Never does a proud and virile nation endure such injuries and insults without in the end hitting back. I am not arguing the ethics of retaliation. I am only stating the fact. No matter when or where or why—or whether they should or should not—such injuries and insults bring war. It is all proper enough to term this a war for democracy and a war for world ideals and a war for civilization itself, but it would have come just the same had we groaned under an autocracy and had we been as materialistic as humanity in general believed us and had we possessed no very splendid civilization to boast of. Indeed, it would have come sooner. We are punishing the Hohenzollerns. When this thing is finished, so will they be.

And in so far as the German people stand behind the Hohenzollerns we are punishing the German people. By what we hear, they stand behind the Hohenzollerns with a blind and passionate devotion. Else why "the orgies that followed the sinking of the Lusitania," "the fierce outburst of joy at the introduction of gas," "the mighty roar of acclaim which arose from the crowd when the submarine crews marched through Berlin to celebrate the resumption of Schrecklichkeit"? Said a Chicagoan the other day, "There is talk of forcing a representative form of government on the Germans. Can't you see that the form of government they now have represents them to a nicety?"

AS a matter of solemn fact, the punitive expedition sent out under Gen. Pershing is dealing only indirectly with the Hohenzollerns. It is dealing directly with the German people—that is to say, with Fritz, who deserves all that is coming to him. He suffered autocracy to lead him by the nose, stuff him with humbugs, steal his conscience, his wits, his very soul. He glories in the "nebulous moral turpitude that befogs his mentality." For what he is about to receive, may the Lord make him duly grateful. Yet do I, in so saying, accuse myself of a conscious blazing anger against Fritz? I do not. And neither do you.

What then? Are we a nation of stained glass angels or a "Who's Who" of polite saints, to go into this war with such an utter and complete absence of hate? Hardly. We have hated with terrible hate—not so long ago, either. The day after the Lusitania perished I met a fairly distinguished New England clergyman, who was off to lecture on Peace. "Monstrous!" he cried. "Inhuman! But how are you going to exterminate a nation of 70,000,000 people?" A neighbor of mine who had fought in Cuba got down his uniform and sharpened his sword on his boot. As for myself, I had a plan to poke a carving knife into Dr. Edmund von Mach.

Time has passed since that—a lot of time. To a certain extent, time accounts for the passing of hate. So does one's lifelong affection for German Americans and one's memories of kindly, genial, lovable Germans one knew abroad. So also does the dulling of sensibilities by year after year of war. But I am one of those who believe that the most potent factor at work is our modern conception of punishment, not as a delight to the aggrieved, but as a redemptive measure whose purpose is the reclamation of the guilty.

We are far from the "this hurts me more than it does you" sort of thing, yet when we take it out on evil doers we aim to prevent a recurrence of the evil by curing the evil doer. It is not hate that impels us. Without sentimentality we may say that it is love, meaning a kind of embattled benevolence. If this sounds a trifle like tying pink ribbon on the big stick, ask yourself if we are not at present doing something remarkably like that. Ex-President Taft put the case even better when he said we were about to lay Germany on the operating table and go in steep for surgery.

IN an ancient book, little read at present and forgotten by many, there occurs the admonition, "But I say unto you, love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you." Few obey. Few understand. For observe, we are not bidden to like our enemies. Who could? We are merely bidden to love them. And—actually—there is more love for the German people than before the war. They were then a jolly, winning, delightful, splendid set. Superficially they got a hold on us, as was only natural. Seeing those same Germans debauched, outraged, and plunged into odious villainies by their masters, we feel an infinite pity. They have injured us; granted; yet "a nebulous moral turpitude befogs their mentality."

An American punitive expedition, millions strong, will bless them by defeating them, do good to them by overthrowing the autocracy that has robbed them of their souls. And it is not unlikely that more than one prayer has been uttered in America for the German people. Several months ago THE TRIBUNE suggested editorially that the churches of America might wisely appoint a day of prayer for the people of Germany. This raised but one protest and that from an individual who cried, "Sniveling hypocrisy!"—which it was not.

We do not hate the Germans, nor do we intend to hate the Germans. It is fortunate that we do not. It is to be hoped that we never will. It would do them no harm. It would do us enormous harm. It would degrade us in our own estimation and in that of others, since "national hatred is always strongest and most violent in the lowest forms of culture."

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

by FANNY BUTCHER

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago book store were:

WAR.

"Over the Top" (Putnam's) by Arthur Guy Empey.

"Private Peat" (Bobbs-Merrill), by Harold O. Peat.

"All in It" (Houghton Mifflin), by Ian Hay.

"Under Fire" (Dutton), by Henri Barbusse.

"The Best o' Luck" (Doran), by Alexander McClintock.

"On the Right of the British Line" (Scribner), by Capt. Gilbert Nobbs.

FICTION.

"The Dwelling Place of Light" (Macmillan), by Winston Churchill.

"His Last Bow" (Doran), by Arthur Conan Doyle.

"The Mystery of the Hasty Arrow" (Dodd-Mead), by Anna Katharine Green.

"Frenzied Fiction" (John Lane), by Stephen Leacock.

"Beyond" (Scribner), by John Galsworthy.

"The Soul of a Bishop" (Macmillan), by H. G. Wells.

NONFICTION.

"Fighting for Peace" (Scribner), by Henry Van Dyke.

A BOOK which seems to have taken London by storm is "Fields of the Fatherless." It was written by a servant girl who came from the direst and most sordid poverty, who has had practically no schooling, whose life has had no ups, only downs, and yet who has managed to learn more about literature than most of the specialists in it, and has acquired "an infallible sense for the vital phrase, the vital gesture," to quote one English critic.

Her name is Jean Roy. After a desperately poverty stricken childhood, which was not helped any by having no father and a "flighty mother," she filled a long series of ill paid, uninteresting jobs, with periods of living with her grandparents again in between. She made blouses in a sweat shop, worked in a laundry, looked after bedridden old women, was a waitress, a barmaid, a stewardess on an excursion steamer, and more than once a "domestic."

She finally found a mistress who was kind to her, and in the time which she had to herself she wrote her book. Her mistress, herself a writer, immediately recognized the merit of the book, and now it's the talk of London and Jean Roy is being pursued by publishers and magazine editors.

It's almost like a fairy story, isn't it? She's content to remain a servant, though, and to write during her "time off." The book she is working on now is the story of her mother's life. She seldom saw her mother, who was away adventuring most of the time, occasionally in jail for being "drunk and disorderly," but always boastful that she had never been imprisoned for theft!

The London critics say that "The Fields of the Fatherless" has the simple charm of "Marie Claire," and one of them calls it a "wonderful book which is reality itself and far above and beyond all forms of literary realism." I for one am eagerly awaiting Jean Roy's American debut.

The public library has a small practical library at the food show this week, with books on food values, cookery, beekeeping, poultry raising, family economics, budgets and other related subjects. There is a list posted in the library. In McClurg's window a duplicate of the public library's practical household economics library is on display.

Lieut. Hector MacQuarrie of the Royal Field artillery, who has been in this country inspecting munitions for the British government and, incidentally, giving informal talks to our new soldiers, is off for home. He will go back into the fight on a British tank. He says that he has to go back to war to rest after his strenuous American trip, which included writing "How to Live at the Front" (Lippincott).

"Priest of the Ideal" (Macmillan) is Stephen Graham's first jaunting in fiction land. He has been a sojourner in the land of letters for some time. You remember his Russian things and "With Poor Immigrants to America."

Roy Norton has heard lately that some man purporting to be "Roy Norton, novelist and story writer," is telegraphing men for funds in his name, and since the real R. N. is hemmed in by ocean waves, he wants it known that he is not pleading for funds through the wires, and he sincerely hopes nobody has been kind hearted enough to give him—in the person of another man—any. Roy Norton has been for the last four years in England. He is one of the few authors whose pictures haven't been printed, contemplatively watching a log burn with the caption, "How an author gets his inspiration," or holding his position after a drive with the fitting sentence, "The great man at play."

Roy Norton, whatever his literary faults or virtues, certainly has had a pleasing reticence about his face in the magazines. Apparently the impostor wasn't so shortsighted as literary impostors usually are, for he got away with his little game. He died, however, not long ago—that is, some Roy Norton was killed and the real one says that he is just mean enough to wish that his clever impersonator was the one. "The Vanishing Fleets" is his, you know.

"Grimm's Fairy Tales," which is in a new edition this year, illustrated by Louis Rhead, are a little more than a hundred years old in their collected form. The two Grimm brothers gathered them from many sources and published them in 181s under the title "Children's and Household Tales." George Cruikshank illustrated the first English version which appeared in 1823.

Phyllis Bottome, author of "The Second Fiddle" and the popular "Dark Tower [Century], is to be married in a few days in Paris to a man who has been fighting with the British army ever since the war. She sent to her publishers for a number of books, "and whatever else you leave out," she said, "don't fail to send the 'Century Cook Book.'" And they say that literary folk aren't domestic!

There's always John Martin's Annual [Doubleday-Page] if you're looking for a bundle of joy for a child. You'd not make a mistake in that for any youngster. Nor in the new edition of "Gulliver's Travels" [Macmillan], edited by Padraic Colum and illustrated by Willy Pogany. Any child—grown-up or wee—who loves exquisite illustration would be made happy by the new Gulliver.

A remarkable collection of letters from Italian soldiers at the front to their parents, their wives, their children, and their friends has been made by Mrs. Klyda Richardson Steege. It is called "We of Italy" (Dutton.) It is one of the first personal records to come from Italy, and it is made up of letters from soldiers of all ranks and classes. Mrs. Steege is an American, who has lived for many years in Italy, and she has written an illuminating text to coördinate the letters.

John Muir's journal, kept when he accompanied the Corwin expedition through Bering sea and the Arctic ocean in search of the lost explorer, De Long, and his ship, the Jeanette, has just been published under the title, "The Cruise of the Corwin" (Houghton Mifflin). Changes in the customs of the natives of the Bering sea islands and Alaska have been so rapid that John Muir's descriptions are often pictures of native life which have forever passed away. The journal is edited by William Frederick Bade.

A plum from Arnold Bennett's plum cake, "Books and Persons" (Doran): "Meredith was an uncompromising radical, and—what is singular—he remained so in his old age. HOW TO LIVE WITH OUR CHILDREN

By Elia W. Peattie

THERE is nothing remarkable in being a parent. It is an ordinary privilege, and therefore no distinction. It does not imply nobility or infallibility, although there is a brief period in the life of a child when, owing to his dependence and his inability to make contrasts, he believes that it does. It is a shock to him when he finds that parents can blunder, and when he finds they can go wrong he begins to feel on an equality with them.

It is, of course, as it should be. This queer old life of ours is nothing more than a Republic of Souls, and the accident of having arrived a trifle sooner or later is hardly worth commenting upon from a historic point of view. Children are not only, in the greater number of instances, the equal of their parents, but frequently they are the superiors, and it is the most offensive form of egotism of which man or woman is capable to snub children or to place them at a disadvantage merely because one is older and has had more experience.

People like to talk as if being a parent was a frightfully serious matter, entailing the most depressing responsibilities and burdening them with heavy expense and the need for profound cogitation as regards their upbringing and education. But let us be frank with each other. Is being a parent so hard a job? Is it not, taking it for all in all, the pleasantest thing that ever happened to you? When your possessions pall and your friends fail, when your limitations become apparent and your faults hunt you to earth like vicious dogs and worry you, there remain for comfort your children. They are the perpetuations of yourselves, the emendations, supplements, your hostages to time, your unexpressed meanings, the veritable explanations of what you hoped to be. (For even if they be less than all this, in your hours of vision they seem like this to you.)

WHEN so great a blessing has come into your life, your first business should be to see how the most can be made of it. They are, in a sense, a legacy, a bequest, and should be looked upon as capital to be invested. No other investment is so delight giving or brings such a high rate of interest in personal satisfaction. This being so, obviously the first duty of a parent is to be pleasant to live with. He must remember that these permanent guests of his did not ask to be invited to his house. They are at the mercy of his hospitality. If he closes the door of his spirit to them they will be revenged. Not that they are naturally resentful, but that love bears a much more intimate relation to mathematics than any one suspects. It works out logically and inevitably. If you do not get the right returns, be very sure that you have not made the right investment. If your boy will not stay at home nights, do not blame him. If your girl has secrets from you, spare her your reproaches.

You may say: "I never deserved this neglect. I have clothed and fed, educated and trained, yes, and prayed for my child. Why am I so cruelly misunderstood?"

Well, there is some reason. Praying parents can be very difficult parents and conscientiousness take on formidable guises. You failed, somehow, to be wonderful enough, or charming enough, or romantic enough. You acted like a dull, amateur Buddha or a stupid pedestal instead of like a human being. You did not let the young people about your board know that romance and splendor and temptations had ever assailed you. You never wrote a poem and showed it to them; you never wept with them, or laughed "deep as the lungs," or teased them or let them tease you, or became a vicarious member of their fraternities or their coteries.

You refused to let them put their fingers on the pulse of your spirit. How could they guess that you would suffer when they defaulted in love? They thought you were too impeccable, too arranged, too dull, too irremediably parental to suffer at their hands. Yes, you acted like a stone Buddha and they thought you were one.

In other words, you botched the biggest job in the world. For the one great, permanent job of man is just himself; it is carrying on the race and having a royal time doing it. If the business of being a parent stopped, everything would stop. All the most beautiful roadways in the world lead to a little child. Men of business and men of war, poets and workmen, wonderful women and ordinary ones, move by the sign post: "So many miles to a little child." He is the reason—sometimes unrealized—why lovers love. He is the tragic reason why fighters fight. They do the dread deed that he may be spared. He is what educators and sanitarians and engineers and prospectors and manufacturers exist for. He is a part of the present and all of the future.

BUT it hardly does to classify him. If there is anything that defies classification it is a child. The youngster does not need to be more than a few weeks old before he makes you aware of his distinct, independent, and ineradicable personality. The first time he signals to you with his adorable R. S. V. P. smile, you know that he is somebody other than yourself. He is prepared to laugh not only with you, but at you, and the first morning he is graduated from a bath on your knee to a bath in the tub you are made aware that he has a will of his own and zestful powers of self-expression.

You would be stupid if you resented the fact. It is his awakening will, his own passionate point of view, his contrasts as well as his similarities to you and your forebears, that give to the parental experiences their peculiar piquancy.

Jean Roy

"My children are all so different from each other," says every mother to whomever will listen. "No two are alike. Isn't it odd?"

She should say instead: "Isn't it usual. Isn't it fortunate?"

For nothing could be more wearying to the spirit than to encounter over and over again in your children the same physique, facial expressions, tones of voice, ideas and impulses. Nature would never consent to be so monotonous. The truth is that at this long drawn out house party which you have secured you will find immense variety, if you choose to look for it. The personality of your child is his own private possession and his inerasible hall mark from the moment he comes screaming and naked into the world till he closes his eyes on it for the last time. And my own opinion is that you will have much more delight in him, and that he himself will get much more out of life, if his personality is developed than if it is obscured by the leveling process which is so popular among parents and educators. It is really exhilarating to reflect that of all the human beings who have come along in the procession of life, no two have been identical in looks, tastes, desires, and outlook. The parents, therefore, who have to deal with the various and varying natures of a family of children have no exceptional task, but only the one usual in families.

THERE is no easy road to any sort of fine success, and emphatically there is no easy road to parental victory. The only way I know of making a child an enduring friend and sympathetic associate is by giving him daily of the essence of your spirit. If you want your child to trust you, you must also trust him. If you wish him to treat you with flattering courtesy, you must set an example of high politeness. If you want him to understand liberty, liberty must be the watchword of the house. If you wish him to use beautiful English, you are under obligation to set the example; and you may be sure if he hears suspicious, pessimistic, and derogatory remarks from you about friends, neighbors, the government, and life in general, he will himself have great difficulty in attaining a wholesome and generous attitude toward life.

When the old fashioned parent reads this sort of advice he is liable to get anxious. "But how about parental authority?" he asks. "How about filial obedience?"

Well, as a working theory I maintain that the parents who talk the most about filial obedience receive the least of it. I will admit there are—when dealing with the young of the species—moments when swift, decisive, and unmistakable authority has to be exercised, for the good of all concerned. But at a very tender age the intelligent child may be graduated from the spankable class into the persuadable class—and I always found it a pleasant graduation day. How perfectly idiotic a grown person feels using his superior muscular strength and his brutal will on a little child! The whole secret of being a happy and successful parent lies in securing the coöperation of your child.

Of course, you may not, personally, be worth coöperating with, and the child rejects you without knowing why he does so. But, of course, it does not occur to the usual parent that he may be the one at fault. Parents are still under the foolish old tradition of imagining themselves noble because they are parents; whereas, if the truth were told, ninety-nine children out of a hundred are biological accidents instead of desired companions. It may be that you have given this child so poor an inheritance of physique, brains, and courage that you ought to be in a state of perpetual apology to him. But, even supposing you have outfitted him pretty well in the matters of body, brains, and zest, still he is entitled to great consideration from you. If you know how to be fascinating, then fascinate your family. If you are a "good dinner man," make your own dinner table delightful. If you are a bewitching woman, see what you can do at a half-after-seven breakfast.

I THINK one way in which parents "lose out" is by imposing unreasonable duties upon children by forcing them to cultivate fictitious talents. It is painful to think, for example, of the martyrs to music. Think of the myriads of poor, dear, helpless, restless children who have given up their hours of play and freedom, practicing on the piano, senselessly obedient to the whim of a parent who "likes music in the house." When I hear people talking about the great liberators of mankind, I look at the victrola and think what a liberator the man who invented that has been for little unmusical children. It satisfies the semi-musical parent without enslaving the child. All this has nothing to do with really musical children. Songbirds will sing, never fear.

We are pretty well through with those dark days when we tried to impose our religious ideas upon our children. There are few parents nowadays who do not leave children to their own surmise concerning the unknowable; and men no longer curse their sons when they hold political ideas divergent from their own; nor do mothers refuse to speak to their daughters because they marry out of their social class. At least if any do these things, they only succeed in arousing the risibility of an ironic generation. Parental curses are so far out of fashion that one would not like to be found with one even hanging in the back attic.

And any way, since the best of us are dying for democracy, it behooves the others of us to live according to its principles. That means that every man and woman ought to have a right to hold whatever religious, political, and personal opinions he desires, that he ought to select his own sweetheart, and live according to his own preferences.

Foreigners are liable to misinterpret the personal independence which they see manifested in the members of an American family. They think it must be that Americans do not feel responsible for the children and that the children do not reverence the parents. They are mistaken about the responsibility, but they are right about the irreverence. It bores a characteristic American parent badly to be reverenced. There is a great preference for love, devotion, coöperation, and the hearty give and take of affectionate domestic combat in the place of reverence. What we really want them to be obedient to is to their own sense of integrity, their own dignity, self-control, and aspiration. No amateur tyranny on the part of a parent can help the development of that inner self by which all worthy human beings live. All you can do is to yourself be true to the flag of the world and trust them to be the same.

Some one has to be the parents of great men and women. Why not you? Maybe you have a Keats or a Lincoln in your house. You never can tell. But, to be on the safe side, best give him room to grow in and water him with your love and nourish him with your wisdom, and blow upon him with all the winds of happiness that you control.

No sterilized, restricted, and fatally supervised childhood can expand into greatness. Neglected childhood stands a better chance. But there is a happy mean; there is the love that does not cramp, the supervision that does not tyrannize, the education that does not obliterate personality, the guidance that does not humiliate. Then, when we have done our utmost, we may leave the rest with a higher power.

Give Bearings a Chance; a Bit of Attention Pays

By High Speed.

Among the minor mechanical parts of the modern motor car the bearings are about the most efficient and hard working. In addition to the normal burdens they are called upon to bear, the bearings generally have to stand for a lamentable amount of passive abuse from the car owners. It is not that the owner does them any active injury, but simply that he fails to keep them performing their work as they should and will if given a chance.

Bearings may be divided into three main classes, plain, ball, and roller, the names in themselves describing the types with considerable accuracy. These various types of bearings have fairly distinct fields of usefulness.

The first class of plain bearings is used for engine crankshafts and connecting rods on practicaly every American motor vehicle. In European practice ball bearings have been somewhat used for this service, but the idea has never gained a permanent place in American design.

Modern plain bearings consist of a cylinder open at both ends and split down the sides. The cylinder usually is of bronze composition with a lining of babbitt, a soft metal, on which the rotating shaft rests. The babbitt and bronze are locked together beyond danger of being loosened. Grooves are generally cut in the babbitt to permit of even distribution of oil. These plain bearings are commonly used as supports for the crankshaft and for the connecting rod lower ends.

Obviously, completely and copious lubrication is the life of a bearing of this kind. If oil is not present the shaft, rotating at high speed against the metal, generates heat because of the friction and the soft metal is quickly melted, the bearing seizes, and the car owner is in for trouble.

Frequently some of these plain bearings will become a little worn—that is, the shaft gains a little play—and the result is a knock. When a knock develops in the connecting rod bearing this may be taken up by means of shims so as to eliminate the play of the shaft and consequently cure the knock. Shims are strips of metal fitting between the halves of the bearing, which may be filed down so as to permit the bearing to be made just a little smaller. Another type of shim, known as a laminated one, is made of a number of layers and the removal of one or more of the leaves takes up the bearing.

There is another type of plain bearing which consists of a simple bronze cylinder without the soft metal lining. These are sometims called bronze bushings and they are generally used at the top of the connecting rod, in the clutch, on the brake pedals, etc.

The second class of bearings, ball bearings, consists of steel balls revolving between two holders or races. For flexibility and ease of operation the ball bearing is far in the lead and is used wherever these qualities are the principal need. Ball bearings also have the advantage of consuming little of the power passing through them.

Ball bearings are of more than one type. Some of these parts, having races in the form of rings, are known as annular bearings. Another type has a holder or race L-shaped with curved sides facing the balls. These are known as cup and cone bearings and the principal advantage of the type is that it is adjustable, while the annular is not.

Ball bearings are also classified according to the way in which they carry their loads as radial or thrust, the titles being fairly descriptive. In certain cases a bearing may be built to withstand both radial and thrust load. One further classification must be made among ball bearings, and this time as to whether they have one or two rows of balls.

Obviously ball bearings must be accurately manufactured to have them function properly. It follows, then, that they must be properly cared for to keep them performing their onerous task as they are intended to do. When it is realized that the steel balls in a bearing must not vary more than one ten thousandth of an inch the point becomes clear. If one of the balls wears even a little, so that a replacement is necessary, the only safe way is to install a complete new set of balls or else to have the old bearings reground by one of the reliable firms doing this work.

It is essential that the bearings be free from dirt, grit, or other foreign matter and rust. Water must never be allowed to reach them. Needless to say, they must have copious and proper lubrication. When a bearing is removed for any reason it must be thoroughly cleaned all over before being returned. When a bearing is tightened in its housing the nuts must be turned down evenly so as not to cramp the bearing. In cleaning ball bearings they should be washed with kerosene and blown clear with compressed air.

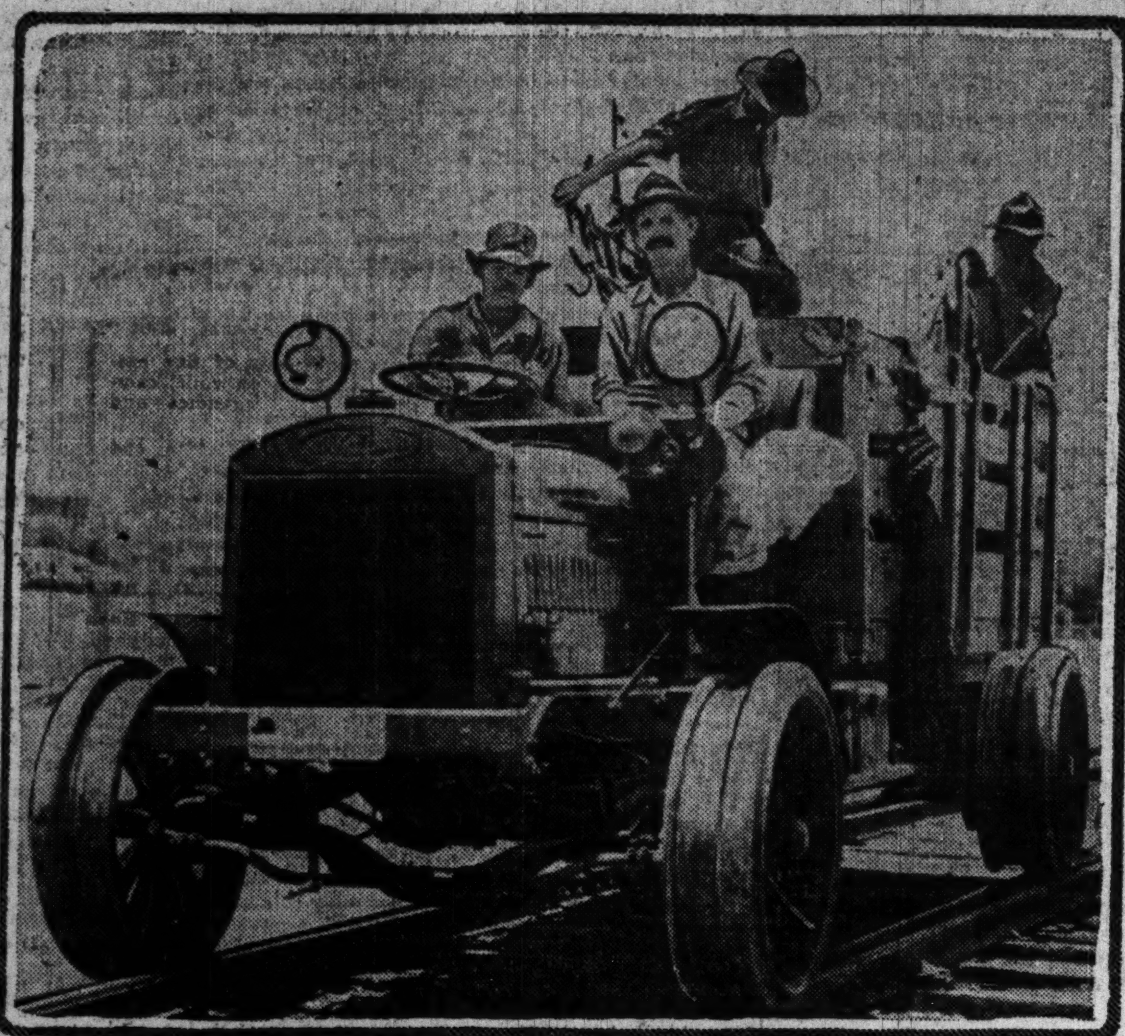
The last class of bearings is the roller bearing, which substitutes rows of steel rollers for the balls of the other sort. There are two main divisions of roller bearings, straight roller and tapered roller. Roller bearings have the same general subdivisions as ball bearings. There are radial roller bearings and thrust roller bearings and combinations of the two.

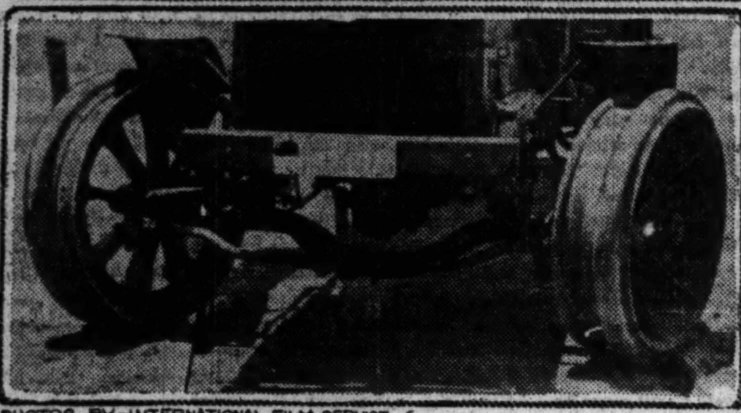
The principal advantage of the roller bearing is its enormous carrying capacity. Practically all cars use roller bearings in wheel and axle assemblies. Roller bearings need practically the same attention and care, the same cleanliness and lubrication that the ball bearing demands. Replacement of a single worn roller should never be made, a new set being needed to maintain the accuracy of the part.

The care demanded by the bearings is really so simple and the function of these parts is so vitally necessary to the proper running of the car that surely no owner will begrudge the brief time and amount of trouble needed to keep the bearings in the best possible condition.

A LOCOMOTIVE OF THE HIGHWAYS

If This Truck Doesn't Like the Roads It Can Take to the Railway Tracks—or Vice Versa.





PHOTOS BY—INTERNATIONAL FILM SERVICE.

There's a time honored wheeze that always gets a laugh out of some, about a locomotive that chased a motorist up a country lane, so it could hit him. Well, here's a railway vehicle that could do it. The truck in the picture is equipped with a new type of tire designed to be driven with equal ease on the road or on a railroad track. A solid rubber tread serves the purpose on the road; inside this there is a regulation railway wheel flange. Leaving the rails is readily accomplished at any crossing. The United States government is investigating the availability of the device for use in transporting troops.

APPLICATION BLANKS FOR STATE LICENSES.

The Tribune has a supply of application blanks for 1918 automobile licenses, which car owners may obtain in either of two ways:

1—Call at the subscription window in The Tribune's business office, on the street floor at Madison and Dearborn streets.

2—Mail a stamped, addressed envelope to "Automobile Editor, The Tribune, Chicago." No message is needed. If you send the envelope it will be understood that you want an application blank.

The forms may also be obtained in the usual way, by writing to the secretary of state, Springfield, Ill. Chicagoans will find a supply at the secretary of state's Chicago office, room 245, Transportation building, Dearborn and Harrison streets.

The Modern Army Mule.

It will not be many moons before a swarm of caterpillar tractors built by the Reo Motor Car company and the Maxwell Motor company will be creeping over the rough and rugged places somewhere in Europe. An order for 6,000 of these machines has been placed jointly with the two concerns, the contract awards having been made on the new noncompetitive basis. It is stated that the Reo and Maxwell factories received the contracts because the plants are so well equipped to handle the work.

Work on the caterpillars is to be started at once and continued night and day for the next year.

The caterpillar tractor was designed by government engineers. There is not a piece of wood or rubber about it. It has a forty-five horsepower motor and weighs between four and four and one-half tons. The tractor is designed for general utility. It is utilized in dragging heavily loaded trailers over rough ground, in roadmaking and plowing, and is, in reality, the truck horse of the army.

MOTORDOM MAKES ITS BOW FOR 1918

The New York automobile show, first of the motor exhibits to be held in the United States during 1918, opened yesterday at the Grand Central palace. An account of its inaugural will be found elsewhere in the later editions of this paper.

By and About the Folks Who Make 'Em and Sell 'Em

The transportation of a train of thirty loaded army transport motor trucks under their own power from Detroit to the seaboard marks a new epoch in military transport in this country. This fleet of three ton Packard motor trucks left Detroit in a snowstorm. After an eight days' battle with the snow, in places drifted almost as high as the trucks, through which veritable tunnels were driven, the caravan reached Pittsburgh, where the Lincoln highway was followed. All of the trucks are equipped with Goodyear solid tires.

Dodge Bros., dealers in the United States and Canada, are beginning to receive their first consignments of commercial cars. Already this car has been proclaimed a favorite in the commercial field and dealers are preparing for a demand as heavy as that which has greeted the other Dodge Bros. products since they came on the market three years ago.

That some automobile dealers do not allow such a thing as poor freight and transportation facilities to upset their plans for a busy season is demonstrated by the fact that the Baltimore Studebaker distributor last week secured a six cylinder sixteen passenger bus for a prospective customer in his territory by driving the machine over the roads from the Detroit factory.

Economical measures were recently adopted to supply the demand for trucks and passenger cars when the Maxwell company executed a novel driveaway of fifty trucks loaded with fifty passenger cars. The fifty loaded trucks were driven from Detroit to Chicago and delivered to Harry Newman. By not allowing an empty truck to leave the plant the Maxwell company gave a splendid demonstration of how economy in transportation may be accomplished. The overland truck train released a train of thirty freight cars for other transportation services.

"With the purchase of an automobile, owners secure a mortgage, theoretically speaking, on the entire area of the United States," says H. P. Branstetter of the Kissel Kar. "They have purchased the means of going anywhere and everywhere at any time, irrespective of season and independent of any other means of locomotion."

After an existence of nine years as a department of the Chicago Pneumatic Tool company, the motor truck interests of the company have been taken over by a new organization known as the Little Giant Truck company. The Little Giant company is owned and controlled by the Chicago Pneumatic Tool company and the officers are the same. The headquarters will remain at 1615 Michigan avenue.

Concerning the announcement by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company of Akron, O., of a $15,000,000 issue of 8 per cent cumulative second preferred stock, President F. A. Seiberling says: "The company did a gross business in the fiscal year just finished of $111,000,000 and has the capacity and equipment to produce, at present prices, a gross business of $200,000,000. We were of the opinion that, due to war conditions, the business might be retarded during the coming year, but our sales in November and December of last year have been more than 50 per cent greater than for the same period in 1916, indicating that the company's business for 1918 might exceed $150,000,000.

The United States Rubber company announces that the selling forces of all its subsidiary companies manufacturing mechanical goods will be centralized in one organization. Headquarters of both the distribution and production organizations will be at 1790 Broadway, New York.

The Mercer Automobile company of Trenton, N. J., is ready to begin distribution of a new lot of cars and all models are equipped with four cylinder motors, it being the established policy of the Mercer to specialize on motors of only four cylinders. The lines of the previous Mercers, which have achieved such popularity during the past season, have been closely adhered to. Several improvements and refinements have been made, but there are no radical changes in either chassis or bodies.

"The Tribune" presents herewith the first detailed figures on automobile registrations in the United States during 1917, wired by its correspondents at the various state capitals after the final tabulations on Dec. 31. Comparison with the 1916 reports shows that 1,629,325 more licenses were issued than during the previous year—an increase of about 46 per cent—and that the number of motor vehicle registrations has reached the amazing total of 5,148,063.

The figures include both passenger cars and motor trucks, many of the states making no distinction between the two in issuing licenses. As nearly as such a count can be made, they represent the actual number of motor vehicles now being operated in the country, for while some few cars have been registered in more than one state, this is more than offset by the fact that some states are just beginning the work of registration. In Texas alone, for example, the authorities estimate that 15,000 cars escaped the operation of the new state motor vehicle law.

Truck Makers to Discuss Plans for 'Doing Their Bit'

Following the demand of government and railroad officials that the motor truck furnish increased transportation facilities to assist in relieving the railroad congestion, the national automobile chamber of commerce has called a convention of all motor truck manufacturers to be held at its headquarters in New York on Tuesday, during the New York automobile show. The makers who attend will be told of the great need of increased transportation of passengers and freight and a definite plan of coöperation will be outlined for truck makers to coöperate with the highways transport committee of the Council of National Defense.

There will be addresses by representatives of government departments and semi-official committees in Washington, and a general discussion of the ways in which the industry can be of still greater service to the government in furthering the war activities of the nation. The meeting will mark another important milestone in this rapidly developing branch of the motor vehicle industry.

Because of the critical situation in railroad freight traffic, appreciation of the possibilities and value of the motor truck as a means of transportation for the relief of the railroads has developed rapidly in official Washington, and there is an earnest desire to enlist the coöperation of truck interests in solving many of the serious traffic problems.

It is expected that much information will be given the manufacturers at this meeting regarding the government's program for production of military trucks and their delivery over the highways in regular army truck trains from the factories to Atlantic ports for shipment to the front in Europe.

Among those scheduled to speak on important topics are Brig. Gen. Chauncey B. Baker of the quartermaster's corps on "Delivering Motor Trucks by Highway"; Roy D. Chapin, chairman of the highway transport committee, on the work of this committee; A. W. Shaw, chairman of the commercial economies board, Council of National Defense, on "Coöperative Delivery with Motor Wagons"; George H. Pride of the Heavy Haulage company on "Motor Trucks in Short Haul Work"; Henry G. Shirley, chief engineer of the Maryland state road commission, on "Highways for Heavy Haulage," and W. T. White, president of the White company, on "Legislation Affecting the Use of Motor Trucks."

Others who have been invited to address the meeting include H. L. Horning of the automotive section of the war industries board; Christian Girl, director of production of the military truck division, quartermaster's corps, U. S. A.; A. W. Copland, Hugh Chalmers, and John R. Lee of the automobile industries committee; Logan Waller Page, director of the office of public roads, United States department of agriculture, and Col. Drake, Maj. Orton, and Capt. Britton of the quartermaster's department.

Wisconsin Plans Novel System of State Highways

By F. A. Cannon.

[Executive Secretary Good Roads Association of Wisconsin.]

WITH the coming of 1918, the state of Wisconsin has tackled something new in road building.

Under the provisions of a highway act passed at the last session of the state legislature, a 5,000 mile system of state trunk line highways has been laid out, to be constructed gradually during the coming years and maintained by federal, state, and county road funds. The network of roads has been mapped in detail, and the first step toward providing the state's one-third portion of the needed funds was taken Jan. 1, when all motor license fees were increased from $5 to $10, every automobile owner paying the same fee in Wisconsin, without regard to horsepower.

As far as possible, those who planned the undertaking have incorporated in it the most advanced ideas in road building and maintenance. In one important respect, however, it differs from the Illinois project to vote this year on a $60,000,000 bond issue for a 4,800 mile system of state highways.

Owing to a constitutional provision the state of Wisconsin is limited in bond issues to a nominal sum. For this reason the process of development of her highways will naturally be slower than Illinois, depending as it will, for its financing, on the utilization of funds raised from year to year.

The Wisconsin highway commission is empowered to lay out a state trunk highway system, not to exceed 5,000 miles, inter-connecting every county seat and city of 5,000 people. This system has been laid out under the terms of the act, and is a comprehensive one, measuring 4,988.3 miles.

Construction on the system will begin this year. The amount of money available for construction for the period ending in July, 1921, will be $9,000,000. Approximately $2,000,000 of this will come from the federal government, under the federal aid act. The state's portion will be met out of the motor license fees. The local units, the counties, will pay the balance towards the construction fund.

The bill, in its financial aspects, is based on the theory that each of the units mentioned shall pay one-third of the cost.

The maintenance feature of the act is the strong one for the immediate present. Maintenance of the entire 5,000 miles will begin next spring under state supervision—not only the constructed portions, but those portions of the roads to be constructed later.

State Highway Engineer A. R. Hirst recently supervised a detailed reconnaisance survey of the entire proposed system, and has developed a plan for a thoroughly coördinated and centralized system of patrol maintenance. Patrolmen will be in charge of sections of road and devote their whole time to their upkeep, the same as section men operate on a railroad.

During the year 1918, the sum of $875,000 will be spent on this patrol maintenance, or about $175 per mile. The maintenance fund will increase from year to year, with the increase in motor license fees.

Where roads are considerably worn gang maintenance will be put on early in spring to put them in shape for patrol maintenance. In view of the fact that it will take years to complete the construction of the system under the present appropriations, the maintenance will be intensive, with a view of developing a system of fairly adequate and serviceable highways at an early date.

An interesting feature of the bill is the one prevailing for road marking. Under its terms the state highway department is now working on the adoption of a standard road sign or marker. The state trunk highways are to be numbered, the signs numbered accordingly, and a correspondingly numbered map issued by the state for public use. This will fill a long felt want, because of the extensive tourist travel in Wisconsin.

The theory of the bill is that the intensive patrol maintenance will, next year, put the state trunk highway system in serviceable condition, and that the construction work from year to year will be done on the bad spots on this system. Standardized maps are being worked out for each county, which will result in an absolute check being kept on the progress of maintenance of these highways.

Getting Together.

A careful study of twenty-one coöperative delivery systems made by the commercial economy board of the Council of National Defense shows that they are operated by a total of 307 men, as compared with 659 men required for the individual systems replaced, and that the service to the customer is practically everywhere as good as formerly, and in some places better. Motor delivery wagons are used extensively in these coöperative services. After a conference by the board with representatives of the forty-eight state councils of defense, agents are to visit the smaller cities and towns and urge adoption of this system.

Questions and Answers

By High

I am driving a car that is several years old and have not had any trouble with it until recently. Now I notice that it knocks considerably and that often the motor keeps turning over a few times after the ignition has been switched off. The car also smokes badly. I have been told I am using too much oil. Please let me know if it is possible to use too much oil and also what in your opinion causes the motor to knock. W. E. R., Madison, Wis.

It is likely the knocking is caused by an accumulation of carbon in the cylinders. This also would cause the motor to continue turning over after the ignition is switched off, the reason being that the red hot particles of carbon fires the undischarged gas that is drawn into the cylinders. Low grade gasoline and an excessive amount of oil bring about rapid carbonization. It is bad to use too little or too much oil. The only place where too much oil is harmful is in the cylinders, where it is burned with an excessive precipitation of carbon that adheres to the pistons and cylinder heads and also lodges on the valve seats, causing pre-ignition, overheating and knocking. This also causes lack of compression and other troubles. The muffler becomes clogged, giving off much objectionable smoke. This reduces the efficiency of the muffler to such an extent that the back pressure causes a noticeable loss of power.

What is the rule for filling radiators—that is to say, is best to keep the chamber filled full or is it all right to let the water get pretty low? I have a non-freezing solution in the radiator and do not care to weaken it with water unless it is absolutely necessary.

AMATEUR,
Chicago.

When the cooling fluid is kept in motion by thermo-syphon action it is quite important that the radiator be kept reasonably full in order that there be a back resistance to aid in forcing the water forward. It is a good plan to frequently add a little water without waiting for it to become low. It all depends upon what kind of anti-freeze preparation you are using. If you have a calcium chloride preparation in your radiator it will not be weakened by the addition of more water. If you are using alcohol it should be strengthened from time to time to make up for the evaporation and dilution that is bound to occur.

Will you please route me from Ottawa, Ill., to Denver, Colo.? How are the roads and what is the distance? What is the best time of year for such a trip? L. A. M., Ottawa, Ill.

Your best way would be to drive from Ottawa through Princeton to Davenport, and from there follow the Great White way through Muscatine, Fredonia, Washington, Sigourney, Des Moines, Booneville, Stuart, Anita, Atlantic, Oakland, and Council Bluffs to Omaha. Here pick up the Lincoln highway and follow it through Central City, Grand Island, Kearney, Gothenberg, North Platte, and Ogalalla to Big Springs, Neb. At this point leave the Lincoln highway and drive southwest through Julesburg, Sterling, and Fort Morgan to Denver. The distance is 1,170 miles. In dry weather the roads average quite good, but in wet weather they would be found slippery. The best time of year for such a trip would be between June 1 and Oct. 1.

Please state whether it is a good thing to use graphite in the engine of an automobile. If so, what kind of graphite should be used and how should it be applied? Would it be likely to carbonize?

JAMES DICKINSON, Chicago.

The use of pure flake motor graphite mixed with lubricating oil, when handled properly, will improve compression, decrease the amount of oil required, fill up scores in the cylinder walls, and prevent valves and rings from sticking. It will not carbonize. Care should be taken to obtain only motor graphite, as any other kind might cause damage. It stands to reason that when bearings and gear teeth are coated with fine flake graphite there are actually no metallic surfaces in contact and therefore there can be no wear, no friction, and therefore no heating. The general rule is to add a scant teaspoonful of motor graphite to every gallon of oil used in the crank case. An additional spoonful should be added every thousand miles. The graphite may be mixed with a little oil and poured down the breather pipe. It also is a good thing to place a small quantity of graphite on the hand and allow it to be inhaled through the air intake of the carburetor. In this way the dust is transmitted directly to the cylinders. Use of graphite in Ford motors is not advised for the reason that there is danger of short circuiting.

Of late I have been experiencing great trouble in getting my motor started, but as I keep the car in a well heated garage I cannot lay blame on the cold weather. Can you offer any suggestions?

PUZZLED, Chicago.

Your trouble may be due either to improper mixture or to faulty ignition, and if it continues it would be well to visit your repairman for a little inspection work. You might try this scheme: Open the throttle wide, leave spark off, and spin motor with the starter. Then turn on the spark, and, providing the spark is correct, the motor should start on the first half turn.

A GREAT OPPORTUNITY.

A large corporation, with offices throughout the United States, is now engaged in extending its organization.

A splendid opportunity is open to men who can show a successful selling record who desire to get into THEIR OWN BUSINESS.

No capital is required. A thorough training in the business is given.

Applicants will be particular to state fully their past records. All correspondence will be treated in the strictest confidence.

Address H C 386, Tribune.

A most unusual opportunity for salesmen.

"A new and modern invention."

Opens up a field for salesmen which offers the greatest chance to make big money of any proposition which has been put on the market in years. This is no scheme, but a clean business and a permanent one.

Responsible, capable, dependable men only considered. We are able to show any merchant that we can increase his net profits from $2 to $5 per day on an investment of $150 and let the profits pay for it.

We are opening territories and are seeking the kind of men who know a big thing when they see it. If we cannot convince you that there is at least $12,000 per year net in this for you we will not want to do business with you. We want men who are true blue and have confidence enough in their own ability to handle a really big thing on a commission basis. No drawing account men wanted. No investment to make, only your ability. Give full particulars in strict confidence. Personal interview necessary. Address Y 400, Tribune.

350 JOBS OPEN FOR HIGH GRADE MEN.

$600 TO $30,000 PER YEAR.

Our organization is working night and day placing hundreds of men in all parts of the United States every week. We are rapidly depleting our stock of men and must have more to meet the demand.

YOU would not be reading this ad if you were not interested in improving yourself. BUT how are we to do you any good if you merely read this ad and do not call on us and make your selection of the hundreds of positions we have open. It don't cost you a cent to talk it over. We are glad to advise with you, and if we do not place you in a job that you yourself are willing to accept we cannot earn our commission.

Instead of listing these 240 jobs, which would take up 2 or 3 columns, I am going to show you how our various departments are organized and the approximate number of men for each department.

100 TECHNICAL MEN, $600-$30,000.
2 Factory Executives, $2,500-$3,600.
Chief Draftsman, $3,600.
3 Purchasing Men, $4,000-$8,000.

Monday an employer will be here hiring 25 Production and Efficiency Men, $2,500-$6,000, besides a raft of openings for Supts., Foremen, Designers, Engineers, all the Draftsmen we can get, practically any salary you want, Chemists and College Men. Among the many placements in this department we placed a $10,000 Factory Manager, besides a raft of other Production and Efficiency Men.

25 EXECUTIVES, $1,800-$7,500, such as Sales Managers, Assistants, Credit Men, Purchasing Agents, and Miscel. Executives.

40 ACCTS. & BKKPRS., $780-$10,000, such as Comptrollers, Sr. and Jr. Accts., Head Bkkprs., Office Mgrs., Ledger and Cost Men.

45 CORRESPONDENTS, $900-$3,000, from beginner up to Chief Correspondent. One customer will want 20 men at $50 per week within the next few days.

20 SALESMEN, $720-$4,000, from beginner or junior up the line. We are especially shy on specialty salesmen. We handle no straight commission deals.

55 STENOGRAPHERS, $600-$1,800, Such as Stenos., Priv. Secys., Typists, and beginners.

28 CLERKS, $600-$1,800, such as Chief Clerks, Bank, Office, R. R., Shipping, Receiving, and General Office Clerks.

Perhaps these figures do not mean anything to you, but when we say we have 100 openings for technical men that means we have 100 or even 110.

We have from 2 to 7 Placing Men in each one of the above mentioned departments. We have got the orders and must have the men to fill the jobs.

Every week we're sending men all over the United States, so no matter where you're located, get in touch with us.

If you don't know who we are, ask any good business man. More than likely he will grab you by the arm and force you out of the lax attitude that you have in regard to your own success by not at least trying to better yourself by our service. Remember, we are the largest and strongest institution of our kind in the world and have placed nearly 200,000 men with 25,000 of the best concerns in America.

If you should happen to be the wife, parent, or friend of some fellow that should be pulled out of the mud, make him come in and talk it over. Do it now—today. We have the goods. Let us sell what you have to the best advantage.

AN EXCEPTIONAL POSITION FOR WOMEN.

We have one of the most attractive working opportunities in Chicago to offer young women between the ages of 20 and 25; previous business experience not necessary.

The work is not difficult. We train you and give you plenty of time to learn everything. You can make at the start $10 a week and very shortly you can make as much as $20 a week if you improve in your ability.

Successful applicants must write a good plain hand, speak clearly and impressively, hear well over the telephone, be neat in appearance, come from good family, and have high school or equivalent education.

Young women who have gone to private schools and never worked before will find this a splendid place to work, a department exclusively for women, plenty of light, air, and the association of other refined young ladies.

In your application give details of age, schooling, address, and phone number. Address H G 126, Tribune.

California.

FOR SALE—SMALL FARMS LOCATED IN best part of the San Joaquin Valley, California, every tract lying within two miles of a railway station. Near famous alfalfa and orchard lands of Stanislaus County, which yield an average income for the entire county of over $127 per acre. Two cases give an idea of what was done this year: A crop of sweet potatoes sold in the field without being dug for $300 an acre. A crop of beans grown between the rows of fruit trees in a six acre orchard was sold for over $160 an acre.

Price is $125 an acre. The owner sells five acres for $625, and gives a warranty deed with perfect title and a lease option contract for a period of five or ten years on fifteen acres additional, so that the owner of the five acres will have immediate possession of the entire twenty acres, can cultivate the same to crops, or improve it in any way he desires, and pay a nominal rental each year, or until his profits from the land justify him in canceling the lease option contract and taking a deed for the total acreage.

This plan makes it possible for a man with small capital to get a tract on which to build his home, and cultivate additional acreage in a way that it will pay for itself and make him the owner of a twenty acre improved farm within ten years without any further payment than that earned from the land.

FOR SALE—CANADIAN WHEAT FARMS.
Safe Investment. Increasing in Value. Big Interest Returns.
People look more and more to the farm as the safest possible investment in these uncertain times. Raising $2 wheat on Saskatchewan $30 land is the most profitable farming there is today. Land can be bought on easy 6% terms. We have been practical farmers for 15 years in the Davidson District ourselves. We will sell you a farm, attend to putting it under cultivation, and get you a renter if you don't want to make it your home. Such investments made by others through us have been for years past making from 10% to 25% each year and the land increasing in values as well. Farm it yourself, and it will soon pay for itself. Next year promises to be a boom year. Buy in time. Write us for particulars.

MAKE YOUR FARM
PAY FOR ITSELF
OUR NEW ULAN SHOWS YOU HOW

You can take possession now or any time you wish. Our plan enables you to secure your farm or fruit grove and after you have made enough money on it to do so, you can pay for the farm. Never before have you had such an opportunity as this to secure the farm you want—any size from 5, 10, or 20 acres, for grapefruit and orange grove or trucking farm, to 80 or 160 acres for stock and grain farm—and in just the right location. You can prove to yourself and convince yourself that this is the land you want—the place you want to live—and that you actually can make good on one of these farms, before you pay for it.

By reserving a farm at once you will get the benefit of the present low price even if you don't want to live on your farm or fruit grove until next year or five years from now.

You can reserve your farm NOW. Any size you want, from 5 acres to 160 acres, by simply making a deposit on it of only $6 per acre—namely: $30 deposit on 5 acres, $60 on 10 acres, $120 on 20 acres, $240 on 40 acres, is all you have to pay for 3 years. Not another cent to pay either as principal or interest until you have ample time to earn it from your land, if you so desire. The thing to do is to act now so you can get in on this heretofore unheard of opportunity.

These farms are suburban to Tampa, the metropolis and livest, most up to date city of all Florida. Plenty of good neighbors, schools, churches, railway stations, etc., right on the lands.

These farms are well adapted to the growing of all kinds of vegetables, including potatoes; also grapefruit, oranges, strawberries, and other fruits, as well as corn and large variety of hays for live stock food. For poultry, hog, and cattle raising no better section can be found.

Every one knows the wonderful climate of the central Gulf Coast of Florida and the healthfulness of the Tampa district has never been questioned.

If you want a fruit grove or farm of any size, on which you will have every possible chance to make good, you should get full details of this great offer immediately.

Whether you want to move to your farm this winter, next year, or at any other time, makes no difference. You can also have your own time to make any improvements you wish. Don't delay in this matter, but act now, as the number of farms to be allotted under this new plan is limited. Write today for our large FREE illustrated book, fully describing these lands and for full information on how you can secure a farm or fruit grove which will pay for itself.

NEW OPPORTUNITY

Write me for particulars how our railroad in the rich states of Mississippi and Louisiana, by aid of new packing plants, creameries, storage, and co-operative shipping facilities, manufacture of stumps and waste wood into wood paper pulp and pine tar products, thus covering cost of clearing, and also how the aid of the U. S. and State Governments in order to increase food supply, has literally transformed farming conditions on our productive cut-over lands and how Northern truckers, dairymen, farmers, and live stock men are taking advantage of this New Opportunity by taking up farm and live stock ranches out of the large acreage, as yet near in to the railroad, markets, towns, churches, and schools.

These lands are low priced and on long, easy terms, because the timber having been taken off, the lumber companies have no further use for the lands and lands are carried on the books from a timber standpoint, regardless of their great agricultural worth.

May I not be of use to you, and our railroad by giving you dependable information about these very desirable lands? WALTER S. AYRES, Industrial Commissioner, N. O. G. N. Ry., 864 McCormick Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE—10,000 A. NEAR GULF, OIL belt, $7 acre. Address A 473, Tribune.

Michigan.

LAND! LAND!
$5 FOR YOU

AFTER THE WAR men in the humbler walks of life are going to do a lot of thinking. There will be a "return" to the land of hundreds of thousands who heretofore have been merely existing in the city. There is surely going to be a scramble for land when this war is over.

THE WISE MAN will start looking around now, and will not wait until he has to take second choice. If you are a workingman in the city, get a place you can call your own, even if it is only 10 acres. If you are a farm renter, make arrangements now for a piece of land of your own. Don't pay tribute to the landlord another year. Start working for yourself. No man ever got rich working for the other fellow.

THE SHORTAGE and high cost of food mean the ranks of the producers in this country must be increased. After the war, no matter what the condition is in the cities, farm life is going to continue to improve, and the producer will have the best and surest method of making a living and enjoying life. Are you going to be numbered among the independent ones?

AT THE PRESENT TIME we are offering [illegible]0,000 acres of the best hardwood land in Michigan for $15 to $30 per acre, in tracts of 10 acres up to 160. Right now is the time for you to act if you want a good producing piece of land. It is located in Kalkaska, Antrim, and Charlevoix Counties, Michigan. The soil produces fine crops of wheat, oats, corn, clover, and alfalfa.

OTHER KINDS of farming, such as stock raising, poultry, trucking, and fruit growing, do well. This is a general all around farming country, and you can come here and raise crops your are acquainted with. This is not a wild country, by any means. We have good railroads, towns, schools, churches, and hard roads. Your markets are Chicago, Grand Rapids, Manistee, Detroit, Buffalo, and other large cities. Remember that "God made the country, but man made the town." When it comes to food, towns are liabilities, not assets; consumers, not producers.

NOW, IN ORDER to get you started on your future farm home, clip out the coupon below, mark as directed, and we will do the rest. Mailing this coupon places you under no obligation whatever.

DO THIS NOW. Save $5.00 and protect yourself against the advance in price that comes with each spring.

THIS COUPON IS WORTH

Locomobile

Now is the time to buy a used car even if you are not going to use it until next Spring. We will take a deposit on any used car that you may select and hold it for you until the desired delivery date. On account of the great Government orders where steel is used it is hard for the automobile manufacturers to get material and therefore they are cutting down their output of new cars. Buyers will not be able to get new cars and will not trade in their cars, so that used cars will be scarce and very much higher priced. You will save money by buying now the car you want next Spring.

LOCOMOBILE 1915 6 cyl. limousine 98 horsepower, 7 passenger; tires in good condition; is guaranteed by the Locomobile Company. Price, $2,500.

LOCOMOBILE, 1915 Berline, 6 cylinder, 48 horsepower, 7 passenger, is guaranteed by the Locomobile Company. Price $2,750.

WINTON BERLINE 1916, 7 passenger, 6 cylinder, 48 horse power; in excellent condition; paint, tires good; price $2,475.

LOCOMOBILE 1913 6 cylinder 38 horsepower 5 passenger touring car, electric lights and starter; in good running condition; price, $500.

STUDEBAKER 1917 4 cylinder 24 horsepower, 7 passenger touring; electric lights and starter; in good mechanical condition; good tires. Price $500.

Our plan of overhauling and rebuilding in our shops makes each Locomobile buyer a firm believer in the fact that a high grade used car properly overhauled is a good investment.

Cars may be bought on time.

The above is only a partial list; many other models to select from.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

LET'S GET TOGETHER.

Am a young man with seven years' experience in wheat farming in the Rosebud district near Calgary, Alberta, owning 2,300 acres there. My wheat average has been 38 bushels per acre.

There is some land near me and close to elevators which can be bought very reasonably, and on easy terms.

I want to get in touch with a man with capital to co-operate with me in developing and operating part of it.

Many new settlers are paying for their land from one or two crops. Thirty-five dollar land in a district where the wheat average has been close to 40 bu. per acre is mighty cheap.

I have a big farming outfit, steam tractor, gang plow, gang discs, etc. The district is proved, the price of wheat is established, the outfit is there, so it isn't hard to figure what several thousand dollars will do.

I am not a real estate dealer. I am a wheat farmer. What I want is to join some one in buying another tract.

Am in Chicago on a visit. Can give best of references and know my subject thoroughly. If you are interested I would be glad to show you.

G. A. R. URGED TO AID IN ILLINOIS' 100TH BIRTHDAY

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 5.—That old soldiers of Illinois are taking a deep interest in the centennial celebration of the commonwealth's statehood, was made evident in an appeal sent to all commanderies of the Illinois department, Grand Army of the Republic, in which the veterans are urged to coöperate with the centennial commission.

"The preservation of the union has never been so manifestly magnified as in the present time," the appeal says. "Its crowning glory is proclaimed in the fact that without an unified country it would be impossible for this nation to engage in the present world-wide war for the liberty of the world."

After rehearsing the part Illinois played in maintaining the union in the civil war, the appeal concludes:

"Comrades, a kind providence has spared your lives until this one hundredth year of our great state. As you were patriots, prompt and enthusiastic in volunteering to save the union, may the prominence your patriotism and courage have given you in the state's history be repeated in the part you will take in celebrating during the state's centennial year, the history written by you on hundreds of battlefields during the war of the rebellion."

The appeal is signed by members of a special committee named by the department to confer with the centennial commission as a means of promoting the celebration.

High Cost of Living Shows Decrease of One Per Cent

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—The high cost of living is on the downward trend, according to a statement today of the bureau of labor statistics, which says that the retail price of food as a whole for November was 1 per cent less than in October. Of standard articles, twelve showed decreases, four remained stationary in price, and eleven increased.

BARRY INSISTS HUNT TRIED TO 'FRAME' HEALEY

Sticks to Story of Bribe Offer Under Cross Questioning.

Endeavors of the defense to indicate that "Nick" Hunt, former police inspector, chief of detectives, captain, and patrolman, "framed" the prosecution of former Chief Charles C. Healey, William Skidmore and Detective Sergeant Stephen Barry were attacked yesterday when the state cross-examined Barry.

Barry not only continued in his declarations that Hunt urged him to "connect" Healey with the vice graft, in return for which he was to be made first deputy (Schuettler to be ousted in some unexplained manner), but he also indicated that Lieut. A. M. White, another state's witness, had a motive in appearing. He told of knocking White, his superior officer, out of his chair because White "ran away and that Dago nearly blew my head off."

Barry's Cross-Examination.

Prosecutor Frank Johnston Jr. began the cross-examination of Barry.

Q.—When did you first meet Mr. Hunt? A.—In the office of John Collins, who was then chief of police, in 1906.

Q.—When did you first work under him? A.—In 1909, when I was at the Warren avenue station and he was commander of the district.

Q.—Your relations became friendly, did they not? A.—Well, we became well acquainted.

The witness admitted that Hunt took him with him whenever he was transferred.

Q.—And Mr. Hunt assisted in getting you in the state's attorney's office under Mr. Wayman? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you ever go to Mr. Hunt's house? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you know Nathan Steinberg and Isadore Wexler, members of the alleged million dollar burglars? A.—I know Steinberg. I arrested him.

Q.—Did you see Mr. Hunt about that? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ask Mr. Hunt to see Joe Geary of the trial board in connection with that case? A.—No.

Q.—Did you go to Hunt's office and have his stenographer make a copy of charges? A.—No.

Q.—Now, since you have been indicted, have you been to Mr. Hunt's office? A.—Yes, four or five times.

Admits Close Friendship.

The witness admitted his relations were always friendly with Hunt except for a quarrel which was quickly "patched up."

Q.—When Hunt came to your house you knew that he came as friend, didn't you? A.—I know he didn't.

Q.—Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that he never asked you to testify to anything that was false? Q.—He did ask me.

Q.—You say Hunt asked you to connect Healey? A.—Yes.

Q.—You say Hunt said he would make you first deputy if he was chief? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he say what he would do with Mr. Schuettler? A.—No.

Q.—And don't you know that a civil service examination would have to be held? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you ask Mr. Hunt how Schuettler could be removed and you put in to succeed him? A.—No.

The witness said he thought Hunt's offer was a joke.

Q.—When was the first time you met Skidmore? A.—About seven years ago at a political meeting.

Q.—When did you first meet Lieut. White? A.—In 1908.

Q.—You said you had a little difficulty with him? A.—Yes. I went in his office in 1908. I said, "You're a fine one! You ran away the other night and that Dago nearly blew my head off." That led to a quarrel.

Q.—Did you strike him? A.—Yes.

No Charges Filed.

Q.—Did Lieut. White file charges against you? A.—No.

The witness said he and White made up the next night in a saloon adjoining the station. Barry said before this that he threatened to file charges against White for cowardice if he brought charges against him.

Q.—Did you testify about the fight with White to give the impression that he testified here because of that? A.—No.

Barry said he had known Michael Fritzel, owner of the Arsonia café, for about sixteen or seventeen years and that they were friends.

Q.—Now, you testified that Fritzel offered you $20 once and you refused it? A.—Yes.

Arrested Wife.

The witness said his relations with Fritzel were temporarily disturbed because he arrested his wife.

Q.—Do you know Roy Jones? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you get any money from him? A.—No. I put him out of business.

The witness was asked the same questions regarding James Colosimo, Blanche Moran, James Torrio, and other former lights of the old south side levee.

"No," was his answer.

The witness denied getting any money from Lieut. White or collecting any himself and splitting it with White, as the latter testified.

Q.—Didn't you give Lieut. White a list of the places you collected from? A.—No.

The witness denied the tapped wire conversations.

Attorney Erbstein started redirect.

Q.—Were you ever convicted by the trial board or fined? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever do any favors for Hunt? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you want to tell this jury what you did for Hunt? A.—No, I don't remember.

Dr. Dennis Russell, 3158 West Van Buren street, and Attorney John E. Northup testified as character witnesses, saying Barry's general reputation for honesty and integrity was good.

Attorney F. L. Fairbanks, a former assistant prosecutor, testified that Barry closed the south side levee and that his reputation was good.

Others were Dr. John P. O'Connell, 34 North Hamlin avenue; Robert M. Unrath; Attorney Charles F. Ahern, 4756 Dover street.

Court then adjourned.
